Few Clerics
Red or Dupes,
Report SaysCongressmen Assert
Some Hardened
Commies in Pulpit

WASHINGTON — (UP). The House Un-American Activities Committee reported Saturday that a "few" but still "too many" clergymen are Communists, fellow travelers, or plain dupes of the Reds.

"... The few members of the clergy who have associated with Communist causes is a minute percentage of the hundreds of thousands of loyal, patriotic men of the cloth," the committee said in its annual report.

It said a "minute number of case-hardened Communists and Communist sympathizers have actually infiltrated themselves in the ranks of the loyal clergy."

"The names of too many men of the cloth appear as sponsors, directors, or contributors to organizations which were established by the Communist Party to serve the Communist ends even though the number is very small in comparison to loyal clergy," it added.

It said their support of communism—intended or not—had enabled the Communists to achieve "a considerable measure of success" in efforts to infiltrate religion.

The committee said this also is true of education where the danger from even a few Communist teachers is "clearly apparent."

The report was on the committee's findings in hearings conducted last year in Washington, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Albany, N. Y., and Columbus, O.

"The report said the committee had conducted no investigation of the clergy or religion and no such investigation is contemplated." It said the committee merely proceeds on the premise that a Communist enjoys no immunity from investigation, regardless of rank or calling.

Chairman Velde (R-Ill.) previously had published recommendations contained in the report for stronger anti-Communist measures. They included a proposal to make it easier to jail Communists by automatically branding all party members as conspirators seeking the overthrow of the government by force.

The religion section emphasized the committee had no quarrel with the churches. But it said the few Communists who have infiltrated the clergy and those who are fellow travelers "have consistently followed the Communist party line and Soviet foreign policy through frequent reversals and flip-flops of official party doctrine."

The committee said that of the few who have lent their names to Communist fronts, it is confident a great majority are "completely unaware of the true nature and extent... of the Communist-inspired and Communist-dominated movements."

The report dealt only briefly with the appearance before the committee last July of the Rev. G. Bromley Oxnam, bishop of the Methodist Church for Washington.

Rep. Jackson (R-Calif.), a committee member, had denounced Oxnam as one "who served God on Sunday and the Communists on the balance of the week."

Oxnam told the committee that information in its files on him was incorrect and sought to set the record straight in his appearance.

"The committee believes," the report said, "the full record of hearing afforded Bishop Oxnam will now serve to correct and clarify any erroneous information that might have been contained in the files relating to him."

New Quakes L.B. Father of 2 Tells Jolt Mexico, Police He Slew Wife

TUNTILA GUTIERREZ, Mexican — (UP). New earthquakes rocked southern Mexico Saturday night after devastating shocks that caused severe damage in four towns and sent landslides rumbling over rich farming areas.

First official reports from two of the stricken villages said "there are no known dead," although press dispatches based on information received from refugees earlier indicated loss of life was feared heavy.

Luis Serrano, secretary general of the Chiapas state government, said the first heavy quake struck shortly before noon Friday and lasted "a few minutes." Six lesser quakes hit the area Saturday morning and "shocks still were being felt tonight."

Panicky residents fled to the mountains in terror, he said, but began returning in the afternoon to their damaged homes.

Serrano said the state government was unable to give any official estimate of the damage, but announced that "fortunately, loss of life, if any, is very little."

He said a relief airplane landed Saturday morning at the two hardest hit towns of Yajalon and Petalcingo, and "found severe damage, but no casualties."

The relief plane flew over the two other villages hit by the quakes and crew members said destruction did not appear "very serious" from the air. There were no official reports of casualties in the two smaller coffee plantations.

"Inhabitants of the stricken area are still panicky because of the quakes, but we are taking all precautions to prevent personal losses," Serrano said.

Red China Trade Up

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — (UP). Red China's trade with the non-Communist world rose sharply during the first half of 1953, a U. N. survey showed Saturday.

Sudden death came to Plenty St. Saturday. A 40-year-old County Department of Sanitation maintenance worker calmly admitted to Long Beach police late Saturday afternoon that he shot and killed his estranged wife here earlier in the day while their two children looked on.

Detestives arrested Salvadore Canuto Tapia at the home of his sister-in-law Rivera two hours after his wife, Colleen, 33, was shot twice through the temple as she was hanging up the laundry, in the back yard of her home at 436 Plenty St., North Long Beach, Saturday noon.

Their youngest child, Philip, 4, was wounded slightly in the left leg by what his father insisted was a shot intended for Mrs. Tapia. The boy was treated at Seaside Hospital and held for observation.

Tapia surrendered meekly to detectives at the home of his sister, 9213 E. Call St., Rivera, according to police.

The couple separated last September, and Mrs. Tapia filed for a divorce. After living with relatives in Compton since the separation, Mrs. Tapia, Philip, and another son, Salvadore Jr., returned to their Plenty St. residence Friday.

Tapia claimed that a court order permitted him to see the children at specified intervals, but that his wife refused such visitations, according to police. He also contended that Mrs. Tapia had withdrawn money from their joint bank account without his authorization.

The county worker said he decided Friday night that he would kill his wife the next day if settlement on finances and custody of the children could not be arranged to his satisfaction.

The woman and the youngster were shot with a .32-caliber revolver which Tapia said he had owned for a long time.

Police said Tapia gave this account of the shooting:

New Big 3
Bid Ignored
by Molotov

BERLIN — (UP). The Western Big Three in a major compromise aimed at breaking the deadlock on German unification offered Saturday to give East Germans an equal share in running all-German elections.

But Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov ignored it completely, shrugged off a new British mutual security offer, proposed a propaganda-studded German economic plan instead and then refused to go on to the question of an Austrian treaty.

The compromise was offered at the 12th session of the Big Four foreign ministers conference by French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, who pleaded with Molotov. "I hope that I have not spoken in vain and language of compromise."

The west did not retreat on its stand that free German elections must precede formulation of an all-German government, but it dropped its earlier demand for Big Four supervision and suggested eastern participation for the first time.

Under the Bidault plan the elections would be supervised by East and West Germans with a neutral nation acting as mediator.

The plan was offered at a time when East Germans were growing openly rebellious against the Communist regime because of Molotov's previous rejection of the free election plans.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, in another conciliatory move to break down Soviet resistance to the western plan—which hopes for eventual German rearmament within a framework of guarantees against aggression—offered to renew Britain's 20-year pact of friendship. This, too, went unheeded.

Molotov then offered his three-point economic plan for Germany under which the four powers would relieve Germany of all reparations and postwar debts and drastically slash occupation costs.

Western observers said the program, rejected before, could undermine West Germany's hard-won economic benefits.

Molotov's plan called for:

1—Germany to be relieved of all reparations and postwar debts payments to the four powers except strictly trade debts. (The West already has ended reparations payments.)

2—Occupation costs in Germany to be cut to 5 per cent of the national budgets of the West and East German republics.

3—Germany to be relieved of paying debts connected with external occupation expenses of the

Plane-Crash Survivors

ANCHORAGE, Alaska—(AP). Three of 16 men who were aboard an Air Force C-47 which crash-landed 75 miles northeast of here Friday were found in good condition by two bush pilots and an Air Force surgeon Saturday.

The men, whose identity was not immediately learned, were 10 or 15 miles from the spot where the plane's wreckage has been sighted. It is not known whether they parachuted or walked to the point where Don Sheldon landed his small plane in a near-blizzard.

Two other survivors have been seen from the air at the site of the wreckage. Helicopters and a snowshoe rescue party are trying to reach them.

With Sheldon were Maj. Carl M. Russell, wing surgeon at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Anchorage, and Cliff Hudson, bush pilot who originally sighted the wreckage.

They reported by radio that one of the three fliers required first aid treatment but that all were in good condition. Radio contact with Sheldon was extremely bad and only the sketchiest of messages could be received.

Sheldon reported it might be necessary to spend the night where the men were found, 512 miles west of Gold Creek.

He said the snowstorm was "terrific" and limited visibility to one-eighth of a mile with a 300-foot ceiling.

Air Force officials believed the three men must have parachuted from the C-47 because they were too far from the plane wreckage to have walked.

Aboard the twin-engine craft when it left Elmendorf on a 275-mile flight to Ladd AFB, near Fairbanks, were two Army officers, 11 Air Force men and the three Air Force plane-crew members.

Hope that others may have parachuted from the plane was bolstered by a report from Clarence Davies, Alaska railroad employee, that he had seen a parachute open after hearing a diving plane.

Yanks Watch
Russ 'Snoop'
Craft in Asia

By EARNEST HOBERECHT

TOKYO (Sunday)—(UP). A third of the Russian submarine fleet is stationed in the Far East, and American, British and French forces are preparing for elaborate anti-submarine exercises in waters around Indochina, it was learned today.

Reliable naval sources told United Press increased Soviet "snooper-sub" activities have been reported near Indochina.

The same sources, who said "about one-third" of the Russian sub fleet is stationed in Far Eastern waters, estimated the number of Soviet underwater craft in this part of the world at around 125.

Official naval circles have been reluctant to confirm the reports but there have been repeated "sightings" of subs by air and surface vessels, including merchant ships.

Many quarters in free Asia take it for granted that these are Russian "snooper-sub" known to be operating out of various ports in Communist-held territory.

American sources said the Russians have sub bases on Sakhalin, around Vladivostok and down along the coast of Red China. Reliable informants said the presence of these "unfriendly" vessels was one of the reasons for the forthcoming anti-sub exercises the American, British and French navies will hold soon in the South China Sea.

U. S. naval headquarters at Sangley Point in the Philippines revealed the exercises will be held over a 10-day period with warships, merchant vessels and aircraft taking part. They will be given training in submarine attack, hunting and detection.

The exercises will be held in waters through which Allied shipping is carrying increased war supplies to the anti-Communist forces in Indochina.

The forthcoming three-power exercises revived unconfirmed accounts of Russian submarine activity in Korea waters before the Korean armistice.

Naval sources said Russian submarines constantly shadowed U. S. Task Force 77 during its operations in Korea waters and were surprised on the surface several times by radar detection.

U.S. Sends Bombers to Indochina French

WASHINGTON—(UP). American B-26 bombers are being sent to Indochina to help French-native forces in their increasingly critical fight against the Communists, the Defense Department said Saturday.

It also said 200 American military technicians have been added to the U. S. military mission in Indochina to help maintain the bombers. They will be noncombatants. The French will fly the B-26s.

"The success of the Franco-Vietnamese forces in the war in Indochina is important not only to France and the associated states but to the United States and the whole free world," the Defense Department said.

Three Children Die in Farm Home Fire

Impulsiveness

Do it now before the idea gets cold sounds like the "go-getter" type. But this type of impulsiveness is probably far more costly than any delay caused by sleeping on an idea overnight. No two individuals work at the same speed. It is entirely against the nature of some to move carefully just as it is hard for some to move at all. But after many years as a salesman, sales manager, manufacturer, newspaper publisher and now a columnist, it seems to us the successful men we have known operated in between these two types.

It is not age or time, necessarily, that develops conservatism in an individual. It does not mean everyone learns from experience. We know of many men with broad experience in many enterprises who have failed. These men never learned a lesson, because they always blamed their failures on everything but their own

ERNEST GLASER
The Man in Charge

THE WILTON HOTEL'S Sky-
room is one of the showplace restaurants of the West for two very good reasons: Its large picture windows, which present incomparable views of the Southland, and its superb cuisine.

The view is equally good by day or night. The Skyroom's 14th floor advantage provides its diners with brilliant technicolor scenes of Long Beach's spreading harbor or such faraway points as the Hollywood Hills,
Catalina or Balboa.

And the food is moderately priced, too. A splendid prime rib, served semi-a la carte, is priced at $2.95. A whopping,
16-ounce Texas steak — with French fries, garlic rolls and beverage—is $3.50. Other entree's are lower priced. The service extended by Maitre
d' John Farrel and such redjacketed waiters as George Ross (who waited on my wife and me the other evening) is always extra-attentive. In addition, there is always a good show at the Skyroom. Currently featured are Daryl Harpa's orchestra and petite Shanna Crockett,
the darling of Manila.

HOST at the Wilton is Ernest
Glaser, cosmopolitan "caterer to

ON THE JUNE 8 state election ballot each candidate will for the first time have his party shown below his name.

Heretofore, under cross filing, many voters did not know whether they were voting for a Democrat or Republican.

RESULTS in the final elections have shown most voters do not care much about which party the candidates are registered under.

But undoubtedly there will be some change in voting when the voter sees Republican under the name of a candidate on the Democratic ballot, or vice versa.

IT IS MORE HONEST to have it that way rather than try to ride two horses by keeping silent as to party affiliation.

But it is doubtful this will greatly cut down the vote for old timers like Bill Grant and Herb Klockstein, who have had both party endorsements.

IT COULD MEAN a runoff for Craig Hosmer, however, should he have a strong Democratic candidate against him.

Joe Kennick is the only Democrat who would come close to Hosmer and it sounds like he may make another try.

four powers which occurred after 1945.

The plan brought immediate caustic comment from Sec. of State John Foster Dulles.

Dulles expressed regret that the Russians "had not thought fit to continue discussions on vital questions of German unity" and added:

"We are all happy that the Soviet people are so concerned about the economic welfare of the West German republic. Perhaps that is due to the phenomenal increase in production of consumer goods and rebuilding."

At the end of the meeting Eden proposed the conference break off the talks on Germany and begin discussion of an Austrian peace treaty next Tuesday.

A second session already is scheduled for Monday. Molotov at once objected and demanded continuation of the German debate on Tuesday. The four foreign ministers finally agreed to discuss procedure Monday for swinging over to the Austrian treaty, third item on the conference agenda.

Freedom Processions Broken Up by Reds

BERLIN — (AP) Demonstrations in a number of East German cities have taken openly to the streets demanding free elections, the West Berlin Telegraph reported Saturday night, and have been dispersed by police.

The newspaper said processions were broken up in Leipzig, Gera, Dresden, Bitterfeld. The marchers carried posters demanding free elections and shouting, "We want freedom," the account said. It added that East zone police trucks afterward circulated and warned the people by loudspeaker not to be misled by "evil elements."

The U. S. High Commission newspaper Neue Zeitung also reported that machineguns and carbines were taken to East Berlin.

Russian Asks U.S. to Drop Trade Ban

LONDON — (AP) A top Soviet economist called on the West Saturday night to abandon its ban on strategic trade with Russia and her satellites.

"The United States naturally is free to adopt its own attitude toward international trade, but the United States ought not to interfere with the trade of other nations," declared M. Nesterov, chairman of the USSR Chamber of Commerce.

"The possibilities for world trade are inexhaustible," he said in a Moscow broadcast monitored in London.

"It indeed is unnecessary to remind business circles what prospects would be opened through re-establishment of relations with countries of the Socialist camp numbering 800,000,000 people and possessing the richest and most varied resources," he added.

Nesterov said that in welding new East-West trading accords "the way will be easier than in other spheres of international relations."

He said a "new tone" was apparent in the remarks on East-West trade by a number of western trade leaders, "for instance Harold Stassen and the chairman of the United States Council of Chamber of International Commerce, Warren Lee Pearson."

"If practical steps to develop normal international trade—particularly between the United States and the USSR and the United States and China—were to follow such sound declarations they would be only too welcome."

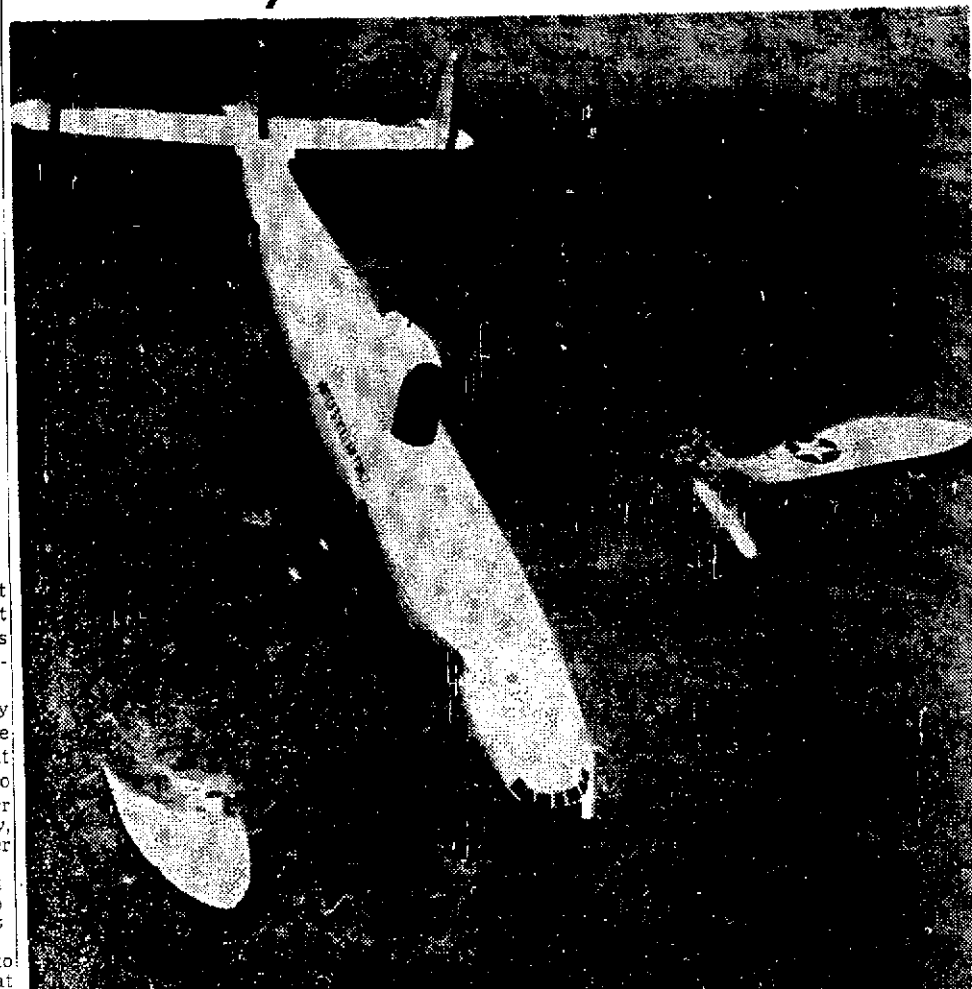

Nesterov did not elaborate his references to Stassen, U. S. foreign operations administrator, and Pearson.

He said western ban on shipments to Russia and her satellites had "failed to arrest economic progress of these states."

BERLIN — (AP) Secretary of State Dulles and Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov lifted wine glasses in an exchange of toasts here Saturday night.

Returning Molotov's hospitality of last week, Dulles staged an elaborate dinner for him.

It followed a Big Four session at which East and West nearly reached the breaking point on German unification.

The dinner was described as cordial and sociable. Dulles first toasted Molotov and the Soviet delegation. Molotov responded with a toast to Dulles and the American delegation.

Dulles then offered a joint toast to President Eisenhower and Soviet President Klement Voroshilov.

The dinner ran from 8:30 to 11:15 p.m. It started with hors d'oeuvres and included lobster and filet mignon and it ended with creme brulee and coffee.

Pope Shows Slight Gain; Condition Weak, Grave

VATICAN CITY — (AP) Pope Plus XII was able to maintain Saturday a flicker of renewed strength noted during an anxious night, but doctors kept up a constant bedside vigil over the stricken 77-year-old pontiff.

Prof. Riccardo Galeazzi Lisi, the Pope's personal physician, reported symptoms of a "very slight improvement" but said general weakness persisted. Later the Vatican press office announced the slight improvement continued during the day.

As he left the Vatican shortly before midnight, Galeazzi Lisi again reported that he had found the Pope "slightly improved."

These words kindled hope among millions of Roman Catholics who offered prayers in many parts of the world for their ailment's spiritual leader.

From his simple wooden bed in his Apostolic Palace apartment, the pale and gaunt Pope apparently spent the entire night at the Pope's apartment.

Slaying Ends Argument

PRINCIPALS in North Long Beach slaying Saturday were Salvador C. Tapia, 41, and his wife, Colleen, 33. Tapia admitted that he killed his wife during an argument in their back yard, police said.

wife Saturday morning. After a long argument, he pulled the revolver from his pocket and fired at his wife. The bullet missed her and he fired again. Mrs. Tapia dropped to the ground. He leaned over her, placed the revolver to her temple and fired a third shot. Then he left in his automobile.

Mrs. Tapia died instantly. Her body, clad in blue denim, a red sweater and blouse, was found lying near a basket of laundry.

Police trailed Tapia to the home of his sister. They found him sitting at a kitchen table.

Asked if he was the man who shot his wife, Tapia quietly replied that he was, and handed over his revolver. He was returned here and booked for investigation of murder.

From September until Friday, Mrs. Tapia and the two boys had been living at the homes of her sister, Mrs. Marie Rodriguez, 1608 E. 133rd St., Compton, and her mother, Mrs. Petra Flores, 1646 E. 133rd.

Mrs. Rodriguez said that Tapia had threatened several times to kill his estranged wife. Mrs. Tapia had another son by a previous marriage, Roy Aguirre, 16, living with Mrs. Flores.

Police said Tapia showed no remorse over the killing, but expressed surprise upon learning that his son had been wounded. He insisted that Philip must have been hit by the first shot he fired, aimed at Mrs. Tapia.

The boy's wound, below the knee of his left leg, was not discovered until an aunt, Mrs. Virginia Perez, had taken both youngsters to her home. His condition was not serious.

Tapia has been residing at the home of his mother, 1750 Pine Ave.

Ike, Solons Make Gains in Teamwork

By WALTER T. RIDDER
(of L. P.-T. Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — That liaison between the White House and its leaders on Capitol Hill has markedly improved is obvious to everyone watching the current session of Congress.

In the last Congressional meeting, the administration team was new and untried. Its single contact point with Capitol Hill appeared to be Sen. Taft, whose illness, however, took him out of action a good bit of the time. Conversely, Senators and Congressmen did not quite know whom to contact in the White House. The inevitable result was confusion, mutual ignorance, and the usual irritations consequent to a feeling of frustration on both sides.

As up to now the House of Representatives has done very little, the major reflection of the change can best be seen in the Senate. There the burden of the job of selling the President's program to the unwilling and of steering it through the narrow channels of committees and floor debate falls on the brawny shoulders of California's senior Senator, William F. Knowland. He holds the job of Senate majority leader and as such is responsible for seeing the President's program is translated into action.

His first efforts in this capacity have been markedly successful. He has already rammed through the upper chamber the St. Lawrence Seaway which for years had not perennial defeat; the Bricker amendment, distasteful to the administration, which had once looked certain of passage, is all but dead, and two other major bills have been passed. That is on the whole an impressive record, as things go in this slow-moving town. A good deal of credit for this record must go to the much improved White House-Congressional liaison.

The new team of assistants to Eisenhower, who last year scurried around in some confusion, today know their jobs. Senators and Congressmen having problems know with whom they should deal instead of merely dumping the problem at the White House door.

A carefully chosen executive staff under Maj. Gen. Wilfrid B. Parsons is the main link between Congress and the President, opened in 1953.

Fairhope May Lift Anchor With Murder Still Unsolved

After a year of ghostly idleness, the murder ship Fairhope may sail again. The vessel has been put in dry dock at the Todd Shipyard at San Pedro for a pre-sail survey.

Prospective purchaser of the vessel, which figured in a sensational shipwreck and drowning in January of 1953, was not disclosed.

The vessel has been tied up at an obscure slip in the West Basin of San Pedro Harbor since last February after her chief steward, Carl Thurmond, 59, of Sibley, La., disappeared mysteriously the evening of Jan. 29.

The following afternoon the ship ran aground off the coast of Mexico. The victim evidently was hacked by a knife and his body shoved out a port hole several hours after the Fairhope left Long Beach for Mobile, Ala. The murder has never been solved, despite thorough investigation by federal authorities.

The 438-foot-long Fairhope suffered extensive damage to her bottom in the grounding, and repairs will cost an estimated $1,000,000.

Owned by the Waterman Steamship Co. at the time of the tragedy, title to the vessel passed to a scrap firm, the National Metal and Steel Corp., and is currently owned by the American Ship Brokerage Corp. The latter firm purchased her for a reported $370,000.

The 6,253-gross-ton freighter was built in 1943 by the Moore Dry Dock Co. of Oakland. She is a C-2-type vessel, which makes transfer of registry to foreign capital difficult, according to harbor sources.

Should the vessel leave the shipyard, it will not make workers unhappy. They claim they have heard mysterious noises aboard the deserted vessel during her lonely stay.

All Insurance Rates Based on Local Data

"The public should be cautioned that national changes in insurance rates do not necessarily apply locally," was the advice given Saturday to members of the California Association of Insurance Agents, in a regional meeting at the Lafayette Hotel.

The speaker was George O. Johnson, state president, who cited recent reductions in school insurance rates as an example. Rates are based on local data, he explained.

Other speakers were Maurice Stanley, district director, and Jack Berbowyer, president of the Long Beach Insurance Assn., who hosts for the conference.

Johnson said that the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau had announced that Feb. 1 there was a rate reduction of about 50 per cent in premiums for extended coverage endorsement on certain classes of school buildings.

"People should read these announcements carefully," he said, "and not jump to conclusions. The newspapers are very co-op in their publishing news of this sort but people often misread. If there is a news story about rate or coverage changes, the best thing for Mr. John Q. Public to do is to phone his local agent and learn the correct local application of the story."

Johnson explained that rates are based on local actuarial studies and that while rates might increase in one area they could well decrease at the same time in another locality.

HE'LL SEE HARBOR OIL FIELD

Turks' Chief Here Wednesday

Wonders of Long Beach Harbor and the way oil is produced there by slanting wells will be inspected Wednesday by Turkish President Celal Bayar. With him will be Madam Bayar and an entourage which will include 20 newsmen.

Arrangements for the visit here are being made by the Ralph M. Parsons Co., petroleum engineers of Los Angeles.

The president and party will be met by officials at 11:30 a. m. Wednesday at the Terminal Island Freeway and will travel to the Port Administration Building.

Welcoming them will be a committee including Mayor Lyman B. Sutter, President F. D. Reider of the Harbor Board, City Manager Sam E. Vickers, President Ward Johnson of the Chamber of Commerce, and E. J. Amar, general manager of the port.

Amar, who speaks French fluently, will serve as interpreter, since the visiting president speaks little English, but converses freely in French.

President Bayar will study charts and maps of the harbor department oil-drilling operations and then will go out on Pier A, where slant drilling is in progress. The party also will inspect the two new transit sheds on Pier A and then will go to Pierpoint Landing, from which they will view the Naval Base.

After the inspection, the party will go to the Union Oil Refinery for a luncheon to be attended by only a few oil company executives.

About 3 p. m. they will be taken on Pacific Coast Hwy. to Signal Hill to see that oil field. From there they will go to Municipal Airport to board a plane for Las Vegas.

Mayor Sutter had hoped to stage a big civic dinner for the visitor but he was advised by the State Department that the itinerary was too crowded for such an affair.

This is fabulous Ocean House, on the Santa Monica ocean front. Marion Davies, onetime film star, spent $4,000,000 building it.

World's Most Sumptuous Sea Shanty

ON THE WIDE, sandy beach of Santa Monica's ocean front there stands, forlornly today, a fabulous treasure house wherein kings, princes and tycoons once strolled in frank astonishment at the sight of luxury and opulent grandeur on a scale such as even they found hard to believe.

But royalty and other glittering VIPs tread the priceless inlaid teakwood and marble floors no more; nor do the genuine 18-carat gold ceilings any longer reflect the sparkle of diamond-studded tiaras that once were as common on the premises as costume jewelry on a dime store counter. Gone, too, is the petite, blonde hostess, Marion Davies, one-time reigning film star, who presided over this magnificent menage — an establishment once aptly, though irreverently, described as the "world's most sumptuous sea shanty."

Today, anyone may wander through the gilded halls. Well, perhaps not just anyone. But cracked, muddy boots might not be a bar to admittance if the wearer were in a buying mood and could back up his yen for a 110-room beach shack with around a million dollars in cash plus its equivalent in a triple-A credit rating. That's because the incredibly palatial Ocean House is for sale again — the second time since 1947, when Miss Davies sold the vast property to J. W. Drown, hotel and restaurant owner, who has been operating the establishment as an exclusive $50-a-day hostelry.

Drown also acquired a king-size mortgage to match the regal residence — a $654,000 plaster held by the Hearst Corp. — and he's found this even harder to lift than the multi-ton wrought iron ornamental gates separating the reception hall from the main drawing room. Therefore, he's seeking a bargain-hunting prospective buyer who might be inclined to take over the mortgage and his equity in the place. He estimates the latter as being worth $1,000,000.

THE CURRENT ISSUE of the National Buyers Guide, a unique journal of business opportunities which is distributed monthly to 15,000 prospective purchasers of business properties, carries a double-page, illustrated advertisement of Ocean House. The ad asserts that the place is "suitable as a de luxe highway hotel, exclusive health and recreation establishment."

Thus, when Drown declares in the publication that he'll consider any bona fide offer from a qualified investor, he may find a surprising number of inquiries. The National Buyers Guide has a reputation for locating buyers for some mighty strange properties.

For instance, the publication took on the job of locating a prospective purchaser for famed Mt. Wilson and was deluged with dozens of sincere inquiries within a week. And it's routine for it to find buyers for such unusual enterprises as nudist camps and earthworm farms. It even assumed the task of locating a cave for an apparently misanthropic citizen who wanted to get away from it all. In the light of such accomplishments, Drown's Georgian Colonial white elephant should be a cinch.

With the wide Pacific as its front yard, this 20th Century architectural fantasy is like no other week-end hideaway on earth except, maybe, King Louis XIV's historic 17th Century Palace of Versailles. However, those who have toured Miss Davies' Santa Monica cabana declare that not even Versailles could have surpassed it for sheer luxury and elegance of super-regal living.

AS A BEACH HOUSE, this sprawling establishment is a complete paradox and could qualify easily as Hollywood's Versailles. The house occupies most of the lot right up to the boundaries and this property, in turn, runs 756 feet on the street side with a depth of 190 feet to the water's edge. There are 55 bathrooms (a lot more than Louis ever had) and 37 fireplaces — some large enough to accommodate a championship basketball team without any player stooping.

A quarter century ago, when Ocean House was growing, rare mantelpieces were imported by the dozen. Entire rooms from famous British mansions were shipped intact — paneling, doors and sometimes ceilings, too.

The estate consists of five Colonial houses, strung along the beach and ingeniously integrated into a single structure. Miss Davies took possession of the property in 1926, when Santa Monica was still a quiet resort town with a long string of plush beach houses nestling cozily between beach and palisades. Now their rear walls are sooted by the exhaust of heavy traffic on a major highway which passes immediately behind them.

THE FILM STAR chose two then-remotely-situated and identical houses at the base of the palisades and proceeded to build a connecting center section between them. The famous architect, William Flannery, was engaged to integrate the structures into a single house.

The resulting two-story, U-shaped building was not considered adequate for the large-scale social plans of the new owner, though, and several partitions were removed. This elongation of rooms made the ceilings appear too low, so Miss Davies decided to jack up the second story. Then she changed her mind.

And thus was the present peerless Ocean House begun. It was completed in 1930 and Miss Davies resided in the three-story main house for 15 years, until 1945. Adjacent were the homes of her father, her sisters and the building housing the family's 32 servants. Gardens filled with rare plants, tennis courts and two swimming pools completed the layout.

The 110-foot swimming pool in front of the main terrace is lined with imported Italian marble. The building's facade is of Vermont marble.

BEYOND the impressive fanlight entry hall is an open stairwell with hanging staircases on either side which rise two full stories. Seventy-five wood carvers worked more than a year on the balustrades alone! And in the moldings around the hall ceiling are 2300 little wooden buttons, each individually bored and glued in place.

The dining room, reception room and drawing room — each 60 feet long — came from Burton Hall, County Clare, Ireland. General Burton built his castle in 1749.

Dining room doorways are from Beckington Abbey, and the carvings in this room are originals by Grindling Gibbons from Cassiobury Park, the country home of the Earl of Essex, in Hertfordshire. Gibbons (1648-1721), England's famous wood carver, decorated Windsor Castle and St. Paul's Church, in association with the renowned Sir Christopher Wren.

CEILINGS are exact reproductions of famous European castles and all chandeliers are hand-cut crystal from Tiffany's. The drawing room ceiling is embellished with 18-carat gold leaf, untarnishable even from sea air.

Scenic wallpaper in the second and third floor hallways is from the old Zuber works in Alsace-Lorraine, handprinted from blocks saved from the bombings of World War I. The second floor papering consists of American landscapes; that of the third floor depicts the history of horse racing in Europe.

Miss Davies' suite on the third floor has an antique English marble mantelpiece from a 1760 Georgian mansion at Sutton, Surrey. Insets are of tan striped marble, and the carved center plaque shows bacchantes pulling a barrel of wine.

Two bathrooms adjoin the huge bedchamber. An equally expansive solarium-sitting room and a balcony overlook the sea.

All the main suites have two closets as large as the average hotel room, cedar-lined and equipped with vaults for fur storage.

The baths of the Davies suite are colored marble, the walls ringed with mirrors. Bathing pools are reminiscent of Roman days.

THE GREEN ROOM, or reception lounge, on the main floor is paneled in honey-colored pine. Its 18th Century fresco ceiling was imported from an old London town house. New York artisans worked six months applying its gleaming gold leaf. The Georgian mantelpiece is of carved marble from the 18th-Century Hatton Hall, home of Oscar Wilde's mother.

Grecian columns, outlined in gold leaf, and a white marble mantelpiece dominate the Gold Room, now a hotel-bar lounge. The mantelpiece in this room came from the library of the home occupied by King George

V while he was Prince of Wales.

A vast projection room — in reality, a nearly full-size, luxuriously-appointed theater — has a regulation motion picture screen that rises out of the floor at the touch of a button. The paneled walls are carved deal wood, from Cassiobury Park.

Adjoining is the banquet room, a marine room and a great library also paneled and carved exquisitely. Once this was the sitting room of Eleanor, Duchess of Northumberland.

Below the main floor level, flanking the swimming pool, are a dozen bath dressing rooms and the rathskeller.

The latter once was the interior of an inn located in Surrey, England. It dates from 1560. Its three small rooms were redesigned into a single room in Ocean House. Paneling is Tudor, and the mantelpiece is the oldest in the house, having been built in 1642. Bar, backbar and door trim are hand carved, dated 1560, and came from Charles of London.

In one second floor suite is a green-and-white marble mantel with delicate oval Wedgwood medallions, from Admiral Batey's London town house. The East Suite has a mantelpiece of green marble, from the Duke of Windsor's country house.

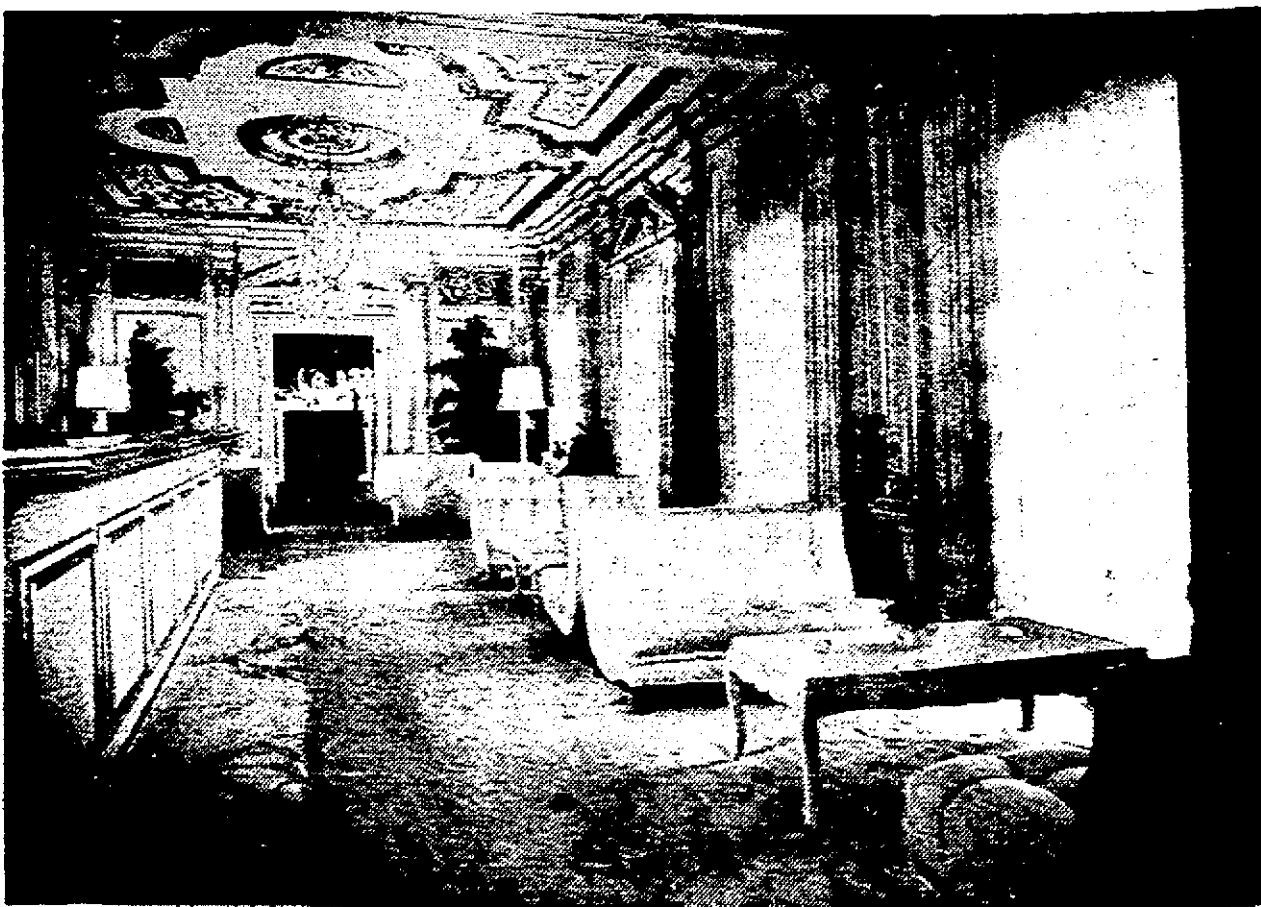

FROM ALL THIS, the present owner, J. W. Drown, has created an ultra-plush seaside resort hostelry for tired businessmen and other vacationers with a taste for the rare and beautiful. In addition to master suites at $50 a day, there are many single rooms which rent at correspondingly lower rates. All guests may use either of the two restaurants, banquet room, two bars, the 1700-locker beach house, 24 cabanas and the two swimming pools.

And, inasmuch as the Wheel of Fortune still spins, it develops at long last that Joe Doaks — who once could enter these magnificent and hallowed halls only in his dreams — may now enjoy the kind of living which not many years ago was reserved for only the world's upper-upper crust. That is, he may enjoy it — if he can stand the tariff.

And what fate awaits Ocean House if no prospective buyer appears? Will it succumb to the fearful fate met by many other of the world's showplaces in recent years — ruthless dismantling at the hands of a wrecking crew?

The present owner sincerely hopes that the saga will have a happy ending, after all. "I'm optimistic about the chances," he declares. "Business and art are not always homogenous factors in such a situation, but in the case of Ocean House they can be blended nicely. And the glue that holds them together is the undimmed glamour of the place's glorious past — and everybody knows that glamour is a very marketable commodity!"

The magnificent Gold Room, a 60-foot-long music room, is now one of two private bars serving $50-a-day guests who patronize converted mansion-resort.

Bricker Asks Decision on Latest Plan

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON — (AP) Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) said Saturday the Senate will have to vote up or down his newest proposal for limiting treaty-making powers before he will be willing to talk further about a compromise.

Bricker announced he is going to Florida for his first vacation in five years while the Senate marks the time next week and other Republicans address Lincoln Day dinners across the nation.

"I want the Senate to vote up or down my proposition," Bricker said. "There is no use of having any more talk of compromise until we find out where we stand."

Bricker's latest proposal would permit a treaty of international agreement to become effective as internal law only by act of Congress, or if the Senate by a two-thirds vote says it should become effective.

Sen. Knowland of California, the GOP floor leader, has called this unacceptable. But, unlike Bricker, he said that he feels that acceptable substitute language may be found before the Senate starts voting, the week of Feb. 15, on amendments to the pending Bricker proposal.

Observing that there is general agreement in the Senate over proposals to state that treaties must conform to the Constitution, Knowland said the big issue now is how to deal with executive agreements with foreign nations.

Sen. George (D-Ga.) who has offered his own version as a substitute for the Bricker proposal, has contended that executive agreements over which Congress has no control now are supplementing treaties and being upheld by the courts as the supreme law of the land.

Knowland said the search will continue for language acceptable to the White House and to most factions in the Senate hearing on that situation.

"There is no language presently before us on which an agreement can be reached on this issue," he said. "But I don't think it is inconceivable that language can be found that would be acceptable."

Knowland said that if the Senate can't reach such a compromise, it might be well to pass a Constitutional amendment without an executive agreement clause and set a special committee at work attempting to find a solution.

FAMED Ringling Circus gorilla Toto II receives anesthetic just before undergoing brain operation at Sarasota, Fla., to determine the cause of her paralysis.—(AP Wirephoto.)

Doctor Finds Cause of Toto's Paralysis

SARASOTA, Fla. — (AP) A prominent brain specialist, aided by three doctors and three nurses, looked into the brain of little Toto Saturday and found abnormal tissue was causing the valuable circus gorilla's paralysis.

Dr. Mason Trupp of Tampa said after the three and one-half hour exploratory operation that a tumor or a parasitic invasion had damaged the right side of Toto's brain.

"We will make tests of fluid and tissue drawn from her brain and will know in the next two or three days what the next step will be," Dr. Trupp said.

The 58-pound gorilla awakened from the anesthetic and was taken to the bedroom of her nurse, Mrs. Lucille Todd. Dr. Trupp said Toto should have little more pain than two aspirins will cure "and she will get the aspirins."

"We can't say the operation was a success or not a success," Trupp said. "It was of a diagnostic nature, not a corrective operation. If it is found that parasites have reached her brain through the blood stream she will be treated medically. If there is a tumor, we may operate again."

member operating team from Tampa performed "with the same skill they do on every operation."

Some 50 persons took turns in watching the operation from transom windows.

After she succumbed to the anesthetic, the gorilla was strapped into a dental-type chair. Her hair on her head and neck was clipped and shaved. Then X-rays were taken and developed to show the surgeon where to enter the skull.

The top of the head was painted with disinfectant and the scalp laid back from the skull for almost the full length of the head. Trupp drilled two holes in the back part of the skull about the size of dimes.

From the holes he extracted, nurse, Mrs. Lucille Todd, Dr. Trupp said, fluid and re-filled the skull cavity with air so additional X-rays would show the outline of the brain. He replaced most of the fluid and removed enough brain tissues for laboratory tests.

He said he could tell from the tissue and the X-rays that the right side of the brain was diseased.

The surgeon replaced the bone tissue covering the skull and then sewed the scalp back in place.

Meanwhile, nurses and doctors were standing by ready to extract at least a pint of blood from the gorilla in case corrective surgery could be made immediately. Since there is no gorilla blood bank—human blood and plasma will not do—Toto would have supplied her own blood bank with doctors mixing synthetic plasma with the pint before the transfusion.

Henry Ringling North, vice president of the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus, which owns the gorilla, watched most of the operation.

He said the circus "was sparing no effort or expense" to get Toto over her paralysis.

"She has been loved by all since she was a baby," he added.

Czechs Dislike Red Bosses, Hvasta Says

HILLSIDE, N. J.—(UP). John Hvasta, who hid out in Czechoslovakia for nearly two years after escaping from a Communist prison, said Saturday the Czechs are dissatisfied with their Red rulers and have a well-organized anti-Kremlin underground.

Hvasta waited until he had returned to his home town of Hillside before breaking the silence he had maintained since he left Czechoslovakia a few days ago.

The 26-year-old, Czech-born, naturalized American perched on a desk in the town hall to tell reporters about his experiences. He said he was sent to prison five years ago on espionage charges.

"It was a secret trial and I was subjected to both mental and physical torture, including beatings, before I confessed," Hvasta said. "I was subjected to the worst possible treatment in prison, treatment reserved only for political prisoners."

Hvasta said the underground that sheltered him for 21 months appeared to be supported by the people.

"The Czech government is no representative of the country," he said. "People are not happy with the present government. The country is suffering and the standard of living has been reduced. The people have been deprived of their freedom, they are poorly clothed and fed."

HAILED AS HERO

Hvasta talked to reporters soon after receiving a hero's welcome from his friends, family and the city of Hillside.

Dr. Juraj Slavik, former Czech ambassador to the United States, told newsmen Hvasta had said he would give the State Department top secret information about the Czech underground.

Slavik said Hvasta told him he had given secret documents to a U. S. diplomatic courier in London for safe delivery to Washington officials.

He said Hvasta commented he did not "trust the papers" himself.

Hvasta said he had received several offers to buy his story and had been asked to appear on several radio and television programs.

He declined to discuss in any detail how he got out of prison, or what he did during his months of freedom as a refugee. He said he hurt his left leg while leaping across a ditch just after he escaped and the underground was "very helpful" to him.

FEARS FOR KIN

He said he had two uncles and an aunt still in Czechoslovakia, and feared for their safety. He escaped from Leopoldov prison at Bratislava in January 1952.

An Adventurer Comes Home

U. S. NAVY veteran John Hvasta, 26, is welcomed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hvasta, upon his arrival in New York City Saturday after five years behind Iron Curtain.

He said he did not want to say too much about his wife, whom he married while in prison.

"There is a basis for reports that my wife is in a sanatorium," he said. "But I don't know what happened to my wife. I still love her."

At Hvasta's side while he talked to newsmen was Robert Vogeler, the American businessman who was imprisoned by the Hungarians for many months.

Vogeler said he helped Hvasta through the Czech underground, but he would not elaborate.

Vogeler, former official of the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., said he learned through the Czechoslovakian underground that Hvasta had escaped from Leopoldov prison at Bratislava in January 1952.

"Hvasta was shipped from where he was but I couldn't say place to place in the Czechoslovakian underground while he was hiding," Vogeler said. "I helped him get out, working through several congressmen. I knew he wouldn't forget Hvasta."

He said he wrote frequently to State Department officials "to keep this thing alive so they can consider the budget of the Legislature."

The Senate Finance Committee, led by Sen. Ben Hulise (R-Ill. Control), will start its separate consideration of the budget Feb. 18.

State Solons to Tackle Big Budget; No Tax Rise Seen

By WAYNE HARBERT.

SACRAMENTO—(UP). Legislators go to work Monday on another billion dollar plus budget for the state of California but Gov. Knight has said no new or increased taxes will be needed to raise the money.

Assembly Ways and Means committee, headed by Assemblyman Thomas W. Caldecott (R-Berkeley), will begin detailed consideration of approximately a third of the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It will cover the cost of actually operating the state government and various institutions. Separate parts on construction and state apportionments to cities and counties will be considered later.

The committee will work almost daily on the budget, larger than any state's, excepting New York's, possibly, to have it ready for the March 1 opening of the budget session of the Legislature.

The Senate Finance Committee, led by Sen. Ben Hulise (R-Ill. Control), will start its separate consideration of the budget Feb. 18.

This year's operations budget totals $356,476,590 and the one Finance Director John M. Pierce will release Monday will probably be larger.

Gov. Knight has asked all state departments not to budget for any increased level of services—but when there are more people moving into the state, year after year, there are more expenses.

The population of prisons and mental hospitals, for example, keeps on growing.

This year's entire budget totals $1,393,000,000.

Former Gov. Earl Warren asked for increased liquor and horse racing taxes and a new cigarette tax last year to help meet it but the Legislature turned him down.

Legislators may have to go into state savings to balance the new budget without more taxes. That could include the $75,000,000 known as the rainy day fund, but aside during the World War II and guarded by Gov. Warren for use only in an emergency.

Austrian Official Wed to Sec. Dulles' Niece

NEW YORK—(UP). Mrs. Joan Dulles Molden, whose father heads the government's Central Intelligence Agency, was married Saturday to Eugen F. Buresch, son of a former prime minister of Austria.

The bride, 30, was divorced from Fritz P. Molden in Reno last Tuesday. Her father, Allen W. Dulles, is a brother of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. Buresch is director of the Austrian Information Service in New York.

When Valentines Played Cupid

THERE WAS A TIME when valentines were not the lightly affectionate or pleasantly casual affairs they are now. They were not sent then to mother, father, Cousin Kate, the children, the landlord and the boss.

They were deeply serious and the sending of a valentine was tantamount to a proposal. That is, if a man sent it. If a girl sent it, the hint it conveyed was that she was in a mood to accept a proposal.

And this was the pay-off: In those days, valentines weren't signed. Couples were supposed to be sufficiently — ahem, good friends, to be able to guess the identity of the sender.

Collecting old valentines, particularly with the envelopes in which they were sent, has been a 20-year hobby of Stephen M. Farndell, 413 E. Third St., who moved here a year ago from Chicago. And he has some honeys.

HOW ABOUT THIS lithograph valentine, embossed and gold-decorated, sent to Sally Palmer of Greenville, Green Co., N. Y.:

*"Give me, thy heart. I ask no more,
Unsuited, free from guile,
Unto no other wealth I soar
Blest with thy sweet smile.
Give me thy heart just as it is.
'Tis all I wish to own.
And let me enjoy the bliss
Of that sweet gift alone."*

It bears a 5-cent stamp and the date Feb. 14. Farndell estimates the year as 1845.

And this one, also a lithograph but more carefully done, of a dandy of the period and a girl in a low-necked gown in a garden, was sent probably also 1845 from Boston to C. J. Capen of Didham, Mass.:

*"Dearest, each bird is choosing now
A partner to his mind
And this should give a timely hint
To us of human kind."*

If that valentine didn't help C. J. Capen make up his mind, nothing could have. Not only was the valentine amorous but it was in an amorous envelope, embossed with cupid, a shell, a bird and flowers.

By Vera Williams

ALONZO TODD of Jackson, Mich., was cherished by some cousin in the year 1869. This is the paper lace valentine he got from her:

*"TO A COUSIN
Dear Cousin, from a Cousin
Thou
Will prize this little boon I ween
Which speaks the language of the heart.
Though for a while we've parted been Prove that thy welfare eye will be Derived by one who loveth thee."*

"Derived" doesn't seem to be exactly the right word; what "aye" is doing in there is a matter of conjecture, and "been" has to be pronounced "bean" to make it rhyme. But no one can say that is not a spirited valentine.

HERE'S A VERSE that goes with a valentine of a little girl with a white cat in her arms playing the piano (the girl, not the cat):

A WISH

*"May Cupid's shafts, by love imprest
Sink softly, soothing in thy breast
Inspiring, raising love for me
As chaste and true as mine for thee."*

Here is a valentine of 1880, and what could be more direct?

*"I have a little kiss or two
which I myself can't use;
If they be any use to you,
Why take them — if you choose."*

George Ralph of Fort Howard, Wis., now Green Bay, Wis., rated a valentine adorned with flowers and little captions like "Truth," "Devoted to You," and "My love for thine, Dear Valentine," and inside this message:

*"MINISTERS OF LOVE
All joys, all passions, all delights
The thrills of this mortal frame
Are but the ministers to Love
And feed his sacred flame."*

If a man sent this Valentine (circa 1847-1850), it meant just what it says, a marriage proposal.

All right, get your great-grandmother to explain that one to you.

AMONG THE INTERESTING valentines is one bearing a Benjamin Franklin stamp, which Farndell says was the first stamps of the United States, issued in 1847. (Before that, stamps sometimes were issued by individual postmasters.) This valentine was sent to Miss Sarah C. Sinnott of Albany, N. Y., and the Troy & White Hall railroad cancellation bears the date of Jan. 9. Farndell thinks the year was about 1850. "Maybe somebody didn't know the date of St. Valentine, or maybe he thought it would take a long time to get to Albany," he comments.

Farndell has some of those fancy turn-of-the-century valentines that opened up like a fan. One is a super cut-out affair with Cupid shooting a volley of hearts from a forget-me-not cannon.

Did Farndell ever send a valentine and mean it?

"Yes," he admits, with a twinkle in his eye. "That was about 1910 or 1911, I think. . . . Valentines weren't quite so elegant then, and I don't think they said as much."

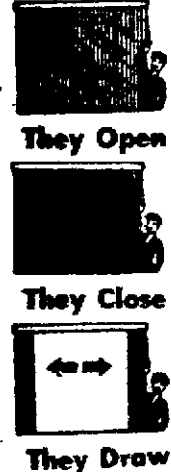

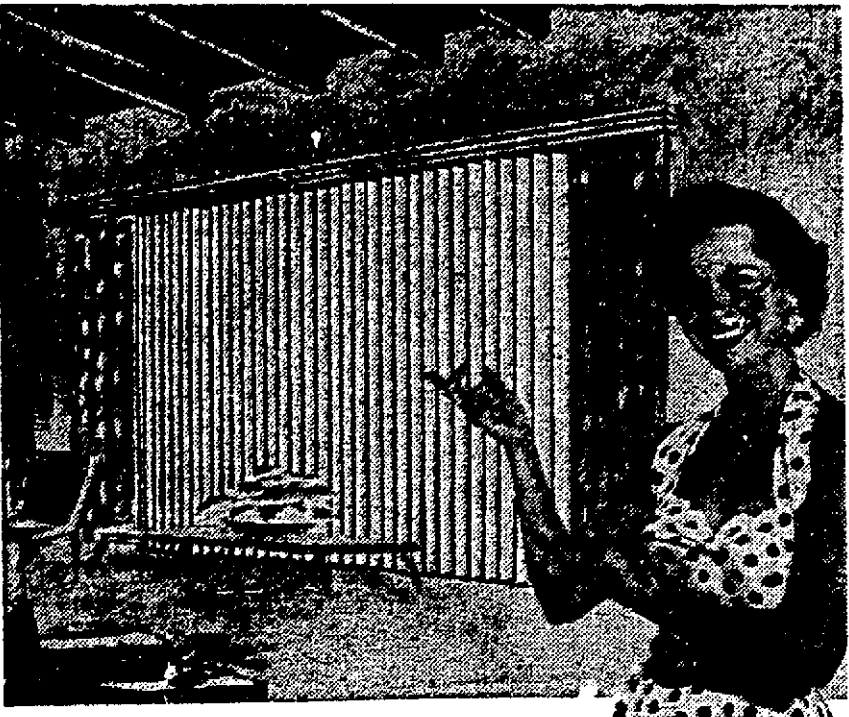

Comic Valentine, 1902: A few of these are still around but usually were torn up when received.

Stephen M. Farndell, collector, displays one of the collapsible-type Valentines popular at the turn of the century, and usually delivered in person.

Build a Cabinet for That Table TV

By De Vita Breslin

IF YOUR TABLE MODEL television set seems to have an overgrown look and doesn't quite blend in with its background in your living room or den, you can make it a really attractive addition to your room by tucking the set into a versatile cabinet that can be built for it easily and inexpensively, a cabinet that doubles in brass for many other uses, too.

The cabinet illustrated above, which was constructed for less than $10, was made of pine and was given a maple finish to harmonize with the tan leatherette of the set.

Your own needs will dictate the size of your cabinet, and, of course, the dimensions of the center section will be determined by the size of your television set. Shelves may be spaced to accommodate books, magazines, record albums, trophies or art objects.

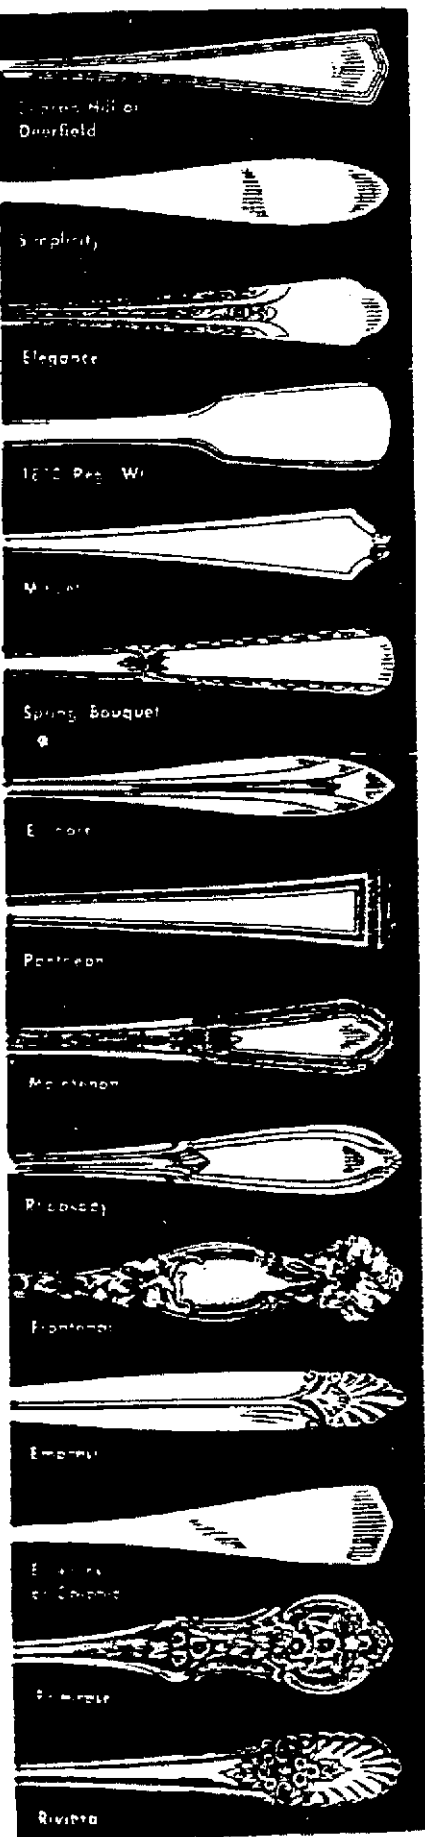

The cabinet can be built most economically by using 1x12-inch second grade white pine. Of course, a better finish is obtained with more expensive wood. For the TV section, where wider lumber is needed, two 1x12s may be joined with corrugated fasteners, giving the 24-inch depth needed for most sets. One-inch molding is used for shelf supports, and 1x2-inch strips are used on the TV shelf to support the set and across the back of the cabinet for braces at top and bottom. No back panel is necessary. Your cabinet may be stained or painted any color you choose.

Dimes March Hits $90,000; Goal Sighted

Proceeds of the 1954 March of Dimes stood at approximately $90,000 Saturday. This is by no means a complete summary of contributions to the antipolio fund, officials of the Long Beach Chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said.

Mrs. Gail C. Hudson, chapter chairman, pointed out that a dozen or more contributing sources are yet to be heard from. And these are expected to boost overall returns well toward the $150,000 goal.

Military installations, the Navy base, Long Beach Douglas plant, tanneries and Avalon are among the larger contributors still outstanding.

A final accounting of school children's participation in the drive is expected early this week. Mrs. Mae Algeo, executive secretary of the chapter, reported. The total promises to go over $4500, considerably past last year's figure.

Contributions from two destroyers recently back from Pacific waters reached polio headquarters Saturday. Three hundred men and officers aboard the USS Eversole raised $407 for the antipolio fight. Ensign W. C. Deal spearheaded the drive while the vessel was on cruise. Commanding officer is Capt. Robert M. Hill.

The USS Leonard F. Mason, just back from its third Korean tour, contributed $250. Long Beach is the home port of both destroyers.

Thirty children in the Noblehill Nursery and Kindergarten school, 1870 Obispo Ave., each contributed $1. Half the class, piloted by the teacher, Mrs. Florence Noble, appeared in person at polio headquarters with the money.

Antipolio officials are encouraged by the continuing flow of donations reaching the chapter office in March of Dimes coin containers. From 100 to 200 cards are delivered daily and they average $2 a card.

Serum Flown to Chicago in Rabies Drive

CHICAGO—(U.P.) Veterinarians ordered emergency air shipments of vaccine Saturday as Chicago stepped up its fight against an outbreak of dreaded rabies.

Animal hospitals were jammed with dogowners bringing their pets in for inoculations in compliance with a state order. Some veterinarians reported they were running low on vaccine and ordering fresh supplies flown in.

Dr. James H. Steele, head of the communicable disease center of the Public Health Service at Atlanta Ga., announced plans to bring a team of scientists here next week to help fight the outbreak.

Steele planned to include in his team Dr. Ernest S. Tierkel. Steele and Tierkel are regarded as the world's foremost authorities on rabies.

Dr. Herman N. Bundeson, president of the city's board of health, said no federal assistance had been requested, but he said Steele and his team would be welcome.

Chicago has an estimated 350,000 dogs, 100,000 of which are strays.

In suburban forest preserves, officers were under orders to shoot and kill all strays.

In the city, Police Commissioner Timothy O'Connor said dogs would be destroyed after being held only five days to relieve congestion at the dog pound.

Eighty persons were reported bitten Friday.

Highest Bravery Award to Indian Who Gave Up Life

WASHINGTON—(U.P.) An American Indian from Whittier, N. C., has been awarded the Army's 68th Medal of Honor in the Korean war. He smothered an enemy grenade in an action which cost his life and saved two soldiers from death or serious injury.

He was Pfc. Charles George, a Cherokee, born in Cherokee, N.C. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob George, live near Whittier.

George, 20, was a rifleman in a 45th Division raiding party which attacked enemy positions near Songnae on Nov. 23, 1952.

After routing the enemy in vicious hand-to-hand fighting, the raiding party withdrew. George and two other soldiers served as a rear guard. When an enemy grenade landed among them, George threw himself on it, "absorbing the full blast of the explosion," his citation said.

Nixon Kin's Store Under Union Ban

The Food and Drug Labor Council of Los Angeles has placed a Whittier food market operated by Vice President Richard M. Nixon's brother, F. Donald Nixon, on its "Do Not Patronize" list.

Frank C. Thompson, fieldman for AFL Butchers Union, Local 551, Wilmington, reported that the vice president's brother had refused to sign a contract covering four employees of the meat department at "Nixon's Complete Market."

Nixon said he was willing to sign if the employees want a union, "but I don't think that I should sign a contract against their wishes." He said that he invited a union organizer to speak to employees at a breakfast meeting, but contended that the employees refused to attend.

Thompson insisted that Nixon mentioned setting up the breakfast meeting but never made arrangements for it.

Newspaperboys Aid Dime March

Officer Killed by Polio on Troopship

SEATTLE—(U.P.) An Army captain died of acute polio on a troopship as it neared United States shores Saturday and gamma globulin was rushed to the vessel for use of his family or any other exposed persons.

The officer was Capt. Joseph Kormylo, Columbus, Ga. He was being accompanied home from the Far East by his wife, Betty, and their two children.

The terse message of his death, coming seven hours after the first one telling of his condition, halted a dawn takeoff by a Coast Guard plane from Fort Angeles, 77 miles northwest of here, with an iron lung. The transport Gen. M. M. Patrick had messaged earlier that Capt. Kormylo had at the most 12 hours to live without the respirator.

At mid-day, as the Patrick moved closer to the coast for a planned arrival here at 8:30 a.m. Sunday, the Military Sea Transportation Service flew a quantity of gamma globulin to Fort Angeles, on the strait of Juan de Fuca.

DOES TIPPING BOTHER YOU? HERE'S HOW IT'S DONE 'ROUND THE WORLD

DO WAITERS SCARE YOU? Does worrying about the tip spoil your meal? If you suffer from this waiter neurosis, don't be concerned; you're just like everyone else.

In an effort to find out if this problem exists even in such far-away spots as the Fiji Islands, Pan American World Airways' representatives in the Pacific and Orient areas have conducted a survey on tipping and what to do about it in that part of the world.

The answer: Ten per cent. That's the average, but nearly all points say if you get a little extra service, you raise the ante a bit.

Reports from Australia are precise about amounts but blame present-day tipping there on Americans.

The British races are not "tip-happy." Visitors are the only ones who tip taxi drivers.

Tips for ordinary services revolve around the humble shilling (10 cents). For more service, two shillings will do. For good service at one of the better dining rooms or night spots waiters expect five shillings and seldom get more than a 10-shilling note ($1).

AN AUSTRALIAN pays what he thinks is enough if he intends to tip at all. He tolerates no kicks about the size of the tip. In general, Australians take a dim view of tipping.

Across the Tasman Sea, in New Zealand, they are more conservative. Only persons who expect a tip are porters, waiters and waitresses, and hotel room maids. And these are tipped when they render the service.

The recommendation is that you tip them with the coin nearest in size to what you would tip at home. If you give a quar-sixpence (7 cents) for subsequent rounds. New Zealand taxi drivers don't expect tips and there are no shoe shine boys.

If you should happen to go to the Fiji Islands, the tipping tariff is well laid out. To porters carrying your bags and waiters bringing your drinks to the room give one Fijian shilling (12 cents). Waiters get 10 per cent of the bill (if you can figure it out in pounds, shillings and pence) but not over five shillings (60 cents).

IN JAPAN, where they had American tourists before the war, and are beginning to have them again, they are used to tipping. The rule here is 10 per cent, and often the hotel puts it on the bill. In Hong Kong the custom is from 10 to 15 per cent, with a Hong Kong dollar (16 cents) for ordinary bag carrying.

In the Philippines those who serve you, and they are many, are quite tip-conscious. But the report from Manila says, "You can feel at ease if you follow U. S. tipping practice with an equivalent amount or slightly higher."

In Hawaii you are, of course, back again on a dollar basis and you'll be rewarded for your generosity — and probably penalized for stinginess — just the same as in New York, San Francisco or Sauk Center.

Move Into the Closet

By
Caroline Coleman

A PRIVATE WORK spot in your home doesn't have to be a space-consuming luxury. An extra closet can be turned into a convenient "office in miniature" where you may keep office hours whenever you like and leave your work comfortably spread out behind closed doors where it can be resumed easily at any time.

The convenient little nook pictured was fashioned from a 2½ by 5 ft. closet that once held an in-a-door bed. The storage shelf above the hanger rod forms a ready-made book shelf, while often-used reference books are lined up on the desk. Informal photographs and sketches in matching frames are so arranged on the three walls as to create the effect of better proportion within the small area. A pot of ivy as a bookend and a shag rug on the floor give the final touch of warmth.

Whether your work involves a typewriter or a sewing machine, a stamp album or a scrapbook, you will enjoy a private corner for your activities, where all of your equipment is always at hand, and where you can close the doors and concentrate away from the distractions of the rest of the house.

If your home hasn't a den or any other informal corner, this little "quasi-den" will provide a place to tack up informal snapshots and photographs, diplomas and certificates, maps, or any mementos you want to display. A hobby or trophy collection that might not fit in with the formal decor of the rest of your home could be housed here and "shown by appointment only."

Additional shelves of varying dimensions could be added for the storage or display needs of any pursuit. And a simple built-in work surface may take the place of a desk.

Board to Reorganize State Dept. Personnel

WASHINGTON—(AP). Secretary Dulles, with President Eisenhower's approval, soon will name a five-man commission to chart steps to reorganize and expand the State Department's dwindling foreign service.

Undersecretary of State Walter B. Smith, in announcing this, said it was a move to build up a corps of experienced career diplomats who would be recognized by the American public as nonpartisan, trusted government servants.

The review, expected to be completed in six weeks, may lead to a merger of the State Department's civil service officers and career diplomats into a single Foreign Affairs Service.

The new look, Smith said, is urgently needed because the number of trained career diplomats has dwindled from about 1400 to 1305. A total of 18,403 employees make up the U. S. government's 270 diplomatic outposts throughout the world but the overwhelming majority of these are noncareer employees who hold either civil service status or other rank. A total of 8781 represents alien employees working for American diplomatic missions abroad.

To become a Foreign Service officer, a person must take examinations distinct from those given civil service workers. These exams, generally considered tougher than civil service tests, lay stress on such things as foreign languages and foreign affairs.

Officials indicated they are experiencing difficulty in getting civil service workers to switch to the Foreign Service. Among the reasons cited were:

1—Criticism that has been levied at diplomats in recent years.

2—Reluctance of many of those civil service workers who have homes and families in the United States to go abroad.

Smith called in a bipartisan delegation of senators and congressmen to his office Saturday to inform them of the new plan.

He told reporters the legislators were highly favorable toward the idea but suggested that instructions for the five-man study group be drawn carefully.

The commission will be made up of three distinguished private citizens, Smith said, a retired career diplomat of ambassadorial rank and a former or present undersecretary.

President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles have specifically authorized the report, Smith said. The five-man group would use as a starting point the mass of recommendations already suggested by a 1946 Hoover Commission report on State Department personnel problems.

Pathologist Dubious of 'Puff' Cancer

GALVESTON, Texas—(UP). A. R. H. Rigdon, director of the mal, will produce cancer. doctor who has been conducting experimental pathology laboratory at the University of Texas at Galveston. "But I can produce one kind of cancer research for years said today at the University of Texas at Galveston. Saturday he doubts that lung cancer can be traced to cigarette smoking. Rigdon said "it is true that a substance has been isolated from a pack-a-day puffers is Dr. Rigdon applied to a laboratory animal will produce the same growth in a man," he said.

Rigdon, commenting on figures quoted to show that lung cancer is more common in cigarette smokers, said that while in England and last summer he had discovered the statisticians there were much more enthusiastic about the relations of the two than were the pathologists.

He said the English researchers found that city dwellers, who lived where industrial fumes were heavy, had more lung cancer than did persons who lived in rural areas.

1st H-Bomb Tests Due in Mid-Pacific

WASHINGTON—(AP). The new series of atomic tests, which will include the first trial of an actual combat-designed hydrogen bomb, is expected to begin within the next month at the mid-Pacific proving grounds.

Construction crews are under-expected to be rushing to completion building projects and the installation of intricate instrument systems at the two atolls in the Marshall Island group now designated as test sites for full-scale nuclear devices and weapons.

Official reference to thermonuclear (hydrogen) "weapons," instead of the test "device" which was exploded at Eniwetok in the fall of 1952, points to the probability that an H-bomb will be dropped from an aircraft.

The United States is believed to have at least two H-bomb types which can handle an H-bomb—the high-speed Boeing B-47 jet medium bomber and the huge, long-range Convair B-36 jet-piston-engined bomber.

Changes in the size and design of the bomb series of new models of the B-17 series suggest that those planes, as well as the big B-36, are now capable of tying the H-bomb to a target—either a test target in the Pacific or an enemy target in Europe.

The Air Force is placing emphasis on jet-powered bombers, with the speed and maneuverability needed to elude swift jet interceptor-fighter planes.

The characteristics of the hydrogen bomb place a new premium on bomber speed. The reported range of destructible blast and heat means that an aircraft dropping the weapon, even from very high altitude, would need to get away fast.

Dr. Mayo Elected

NEW YORK—(AP). The election of Dr. Charles W. Mayo as president of the American Assn. for the United Nations (A.A.U.N.) was announced Saturday. The noted surgeon of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., was a U. S. delegate to the 1953 session of the U. N. General Assembly.

De Gasperi Seen Emerging Again as Italian Premier

ROME—(AP). Italy's four center parties bumped into delay Saturday in their plan to pull the nation out of a political rut with a coalition government, but prospects of success, with possibly the pro-Western veteran, Alcide De Gasperi, taking the reins of government once more, remained good.

Leaders of all four parties agreed they should harness together as a pro-Western team. They even have agreed on a program.

Apparently some last-minute tangles developed in the hitching process of the Christian Democrats, Social Democrats, Liberals and Republicans.

There had been hopes that, with the coalition's backing, President Luigi Einaudi could name a new premier Saturday, to replace the defeated government of Amintore Fanfani. There still were knots to be undone, however.

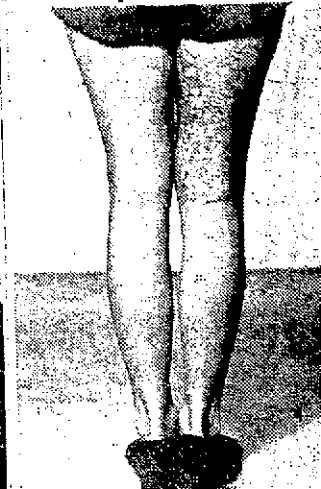

One of the biggest, as usual, was caused by the Social Democrats, a balky group of pro-Western moderate Socialists who helped defeat De Gasperi's all-Christian Democrat regime last July and Fanfani's one week ago.

Their leader, Giuseppe Saragat, told a party meeting Saturday, "The experiment... is not devoid of difficulty."

Saragat and his allies had demanded that left-wing Christian Democrat Giovanni Gronchi, president of the Chamber of Deputies, get a minister's job in the next cabinet. Gronchi reportedly has turned down the prospect.

Visitors to the Caribbean last winter totaled 108,000, not counting cruise passengers. This year cruises are departing from New York and New Orleans at a merry clip, and most are going out full. Airlines are operating more frequent flights to the South than last year.

Resort Airlines, whose program of Flying Houseparties begun three years ago, has carried 30,000 passengers, is equipped to handle three times more travelers this winter than last. The enlarged program offers first-

BEGINNING Feb. 2, British Overseas Airway's peak schedule to Jamaica and Nassau went into effect, with eight flights a week — two of them tourist — from New York. Bookings are running 15 per cent ahead of last year.

The island of Jamaica, where hotel reservations are usually heavy, expects 3400 visitors during the January-March season.

Haiti is stepping up in tourist importance. There are 27 per cent more hotel rooms there than last winter. The Haitian Mardi Gras takes place from Feb. 28-March 2.

National Airlines reports traffic to Cuba running 30 per cent ahead of 1954. American Express has noticed increasing attention being paid to the Veradero area.

Striking the Iron While It Is Hot

PUBLIC INTEREST in California liquor control irregularities and weaknesses has increased steadily over the past few months in response to the shocking conditions brought to light in hearings conducted by the Weinberger legislative committee.

Friday the Weinberger committee urged Gov. Goodwin Knight to call a special session of the Legislature in March to consider changes in liquor control administration.

Within an hour Gov. Knight heeded this request. The Governor realizes that right now—while public interest is at a peak—is a favorable time to meet the issue and make the changes so badly needed.

There is sufficient time to pass the necessary constitutional amendment and submit it to the people at the November election. If adopted it would take effect on Jan. 1, 1955. The problem is serious enough to justify this prompt action.

The fundamental change proposed in the Weinberger program is one we have long supported. It is the proposal to divorce liquor control from the State Board of Equalization and vest it in a new department headed by a director appointed by the Governor.

This step is essential to taking the politics and confusion out of liquor control activities. It would establish the clearcut, central administrative responsibility that has been lacking.

A measure to accomplish this was submitted at the last session of the Legislature but was pulled, hauled, emasculated and revised to the point where it was completely unacceptable. Aroused public opinion and the recent conviction (on charges of federal income tax evasion) of powerful liquor lobbyist Artie Samish should make agreement easier this time.

The Weinberger committee also proposes more rigid requirements for granting of liquor licenses, and more rigid laws regarding the transfer and resale of permits. Testimony has revealed that licenses have been resold at fabulous profits—as high as $12,000—without ever having been used by the original applicant.

Liquor control practices have assumed the proportions of a major scandal in California. It is time to tighten up and crack down. The Weinberger committee has done an excellent service in underlining the problem and proposing a means of solving it.

The Governor finds public sentiment with him in calling the special session.

Crossing Them Up

For nearly a year, they have been trying to trap Eisenhower into seeming like an amiable, well intentioned ex-general who doesn't know the political score.

Some of them write bright superficial little columns dripping in acid.

This particular coterie uses the loaded question technique, hoping the President will miff the answer and provide material for another critical column.

Then we have the solemn pundits who "interpret" national and world affairs. Inwardly, they despise our free competitive system which has rewarded them so handsomely. Outwardly, they find much to praise in socialistic experiments which have failed wherever they have been tried.

This group, composed of self-appointed intellectuals, specializes in the field of political and economic analysis.

They purport to give you the "true situation" on any subject, ranging from Indochina to the Berlin conference; from coffee prices to farm supports.

As predictors of things to come, and I don't mean Drew Pearson, they have an unbelievably low batting average.

All of them worshipped Franklin D. Roosevelt, considered Harry Truman beneath their intellectual level and were sure that Ike would turn out to be a terrific flop.

Why are they unhappy?

Ike is crossing them up!

Here is one striking example of what I mean:

"Though Eisenhower's moorings are conservative, his political philosophy is anything but static. He knows that we live in the 20th Century; that progress doesn't lie in turning back the clock."

Thus, in answer to a loaded question which suggested that his legislative program was merely an extension of the New Deal, the President replied that he was an economic conservative and a humanitarian liberal.

This means that Eisenhower believes firmly in the free competitive system, in cutting the cost of government, in getting the budget under control, in reduced taxes so that people can keep and spend more of the money they earn.

It meant also that Eisenhower accepts the social welfare legislation enacted in the last 20 years as an accomplished fact, and realizes it is here to stay.

He is convinced that by getting the government's financial house in order, more money can be spent for social security, health and education to meet the "human needs of the whole people."

These were disconcerting words, both to the left-wing critics and to leaders of the political opposition who had hoped to capitalize on any criticism Eisenhower might make of the welfare policies initiated by Roosevelt and Truman.

Few experienced political leaders could have handled this question as skillfully as did Eisenhower; probably none as sincerely.

Though it may not be generally understood, the President is gradually reshaping the Republican party.

He is bringing it more nearly into consonance with the wishes of the people. He is taking it away from the cautious conservatives of tradition and giving it a sense of progressive direction for the future.

As with the doctrinaire liberals who had thought that Ike would find himself walled in by big business and reactionary Republicans, his forward looking approach is likewise disappointing to the more conservative element of his own party.

Unlike Harry Truman, the President is not a narrow partisan. Though Eisenhower seeks the advice and counsel of Republican leaders, his concern is for the general welfare of all the people. I suspect that the people have a clearer comprehension of what he is trying to do than has been shown thus far by either the politicians, or by his press critics from the right and the left.

To those who complain that the Eisenhower administration is "the New Deal under business management," let it be pointed out that:

1. No President, even if he were so inclined, could change the pattern of social welfare legislation which has become a basic part of American life.

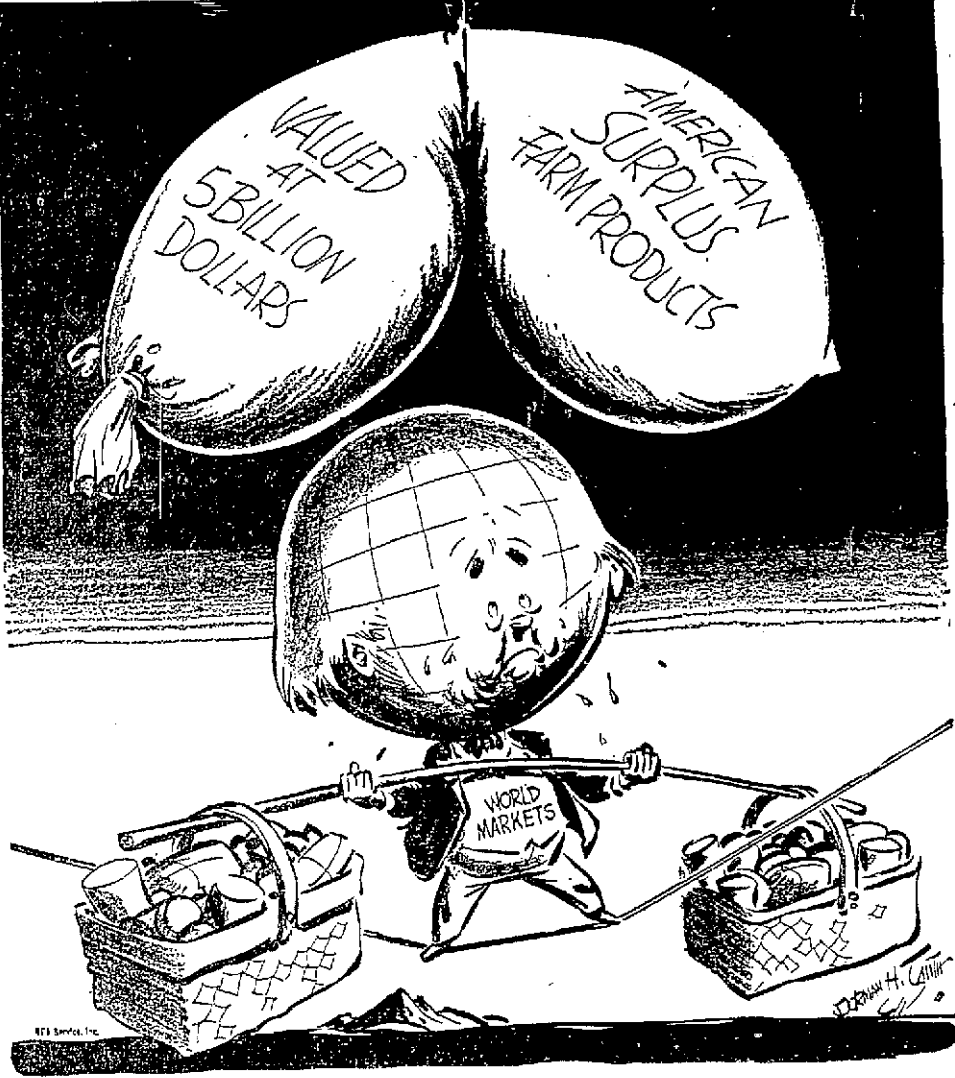

Realistically, Eisenhower seeks to extend its benefits and improve its administration.

2. The New and the Fair Deals were political adventures into socialism, characterized by profligate spending and a weather eye on votes.

Eisenhower is dedicated to the task of getting the country's finances in order. Expenses have been greatly curtailed, individual and corporate taxes reduced and the budget is gradually being brought under control.

This is a far cry from the "tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect" philosophy of Harry Hopkins and the New Deal.

FRIGHTENING, WHAT?

DREW PEARSON

Mr. Mitchell Guesses Wrong

WASHINGTON. The minimum-wage issue got caught in such a backstage tug-of-war that, 50 minutes before President Eisenhower recommended against an increase, his Secretary of Labor was announcing in New York City that the administration would ask for an increase.

PEARSON

Secretary of Labor Mitchell happened to be inspecting his regional offices in New York City the same day that the President issued his economic report to Congress. A matter of minutes before the report was issued, however, Mitchell happily told wage and hour employees of the record that the President would recommend a higher minimum wage.

This was the last backfire in a behind-the-scenes battle between Mitchell, who wanted to lift the wage floor, and the President's chief economic adviser, Dr. Arthur Burns, who wanted to hold it down. Since Dr. Burns was in charge of writing the economic message, his views prevailed, and the message went to press recommending no increase.

However, Mitchell received a last-minute, private phone call in New York from the White House counsel, Bernard Shanley, the Secretary of Labor got the impression from Shanley that Eisenhower had come around to Mitchell's viewpoint.

Triumphantly, Mitchell marched into a private meeting of wage and hour employees and announced that, in a few minutes, the President would ask for a minimum wage boost.

Mitchell went on to say that the President's recommendation, if followed, would put more money into the hands of the consumers and, for one thing, would boost sagging auto sales.

Mitchell seemed delighted with what he thought was going to happen, though Labor Department employees report his mood changed after he learned that the President didn't go through with the request for a higher minimum.

NOTE—Shortly after Mitchell's appointment to the Cabinet, he told the CIO convention that one of his most important tasks as Secretary of Labor would be to increase the minimum wage and extend its coverage.

P. O. V. CARLSON

Assistant President Sherman Adams took Postmaster General Summerfield aside at a recent White House dinner and asked him to patch up his feud with Sen. Frank Carlson of Kansas.

This backstage feud between the Postmaster General, who wants higher postal rates, and the Senate post office chairman, who is blocking them, has been so vitriolic that it has caused embarrassment inside the Eisenhower administration.

What prompted Adams' blunt advice to Summerfield was a phone call, in which the Postmaster General let into Carlson regarding postal rates.

The Postmaster General wants to increase the price of stamps to 4 cents for first-class mail and 7 cents for air-mail. However, Sen. Carlson has resisted the increase—at least until it is given more study.

President Eisenhower is caught in the middle since both men are close to him personally. Summerfield, of course, is his spokesman on postal matters. But Carlson was Ike's right-hand man throughout the Presidential campaign and is still known as his favorite Senator.

Meanwhile, Summerfield is so determined to balance the post office budget that he has personally phoned key Republican Congressmen, threatening to block new post offices for their districts.

What really rankled Carlson, however, was a $12,000 survey that Summerfield ordered to try to show Congress that the public favored postal increases. In Carlson's opinion, the survey was loaded to give a misleading impression. He was more outraged, however, over Summerfield's bland admission that Summerfield offered to was to "influence" Congress, for it happens to be against the law for a government department to spend money to influence legislation.

WASHINGTON WHIRL

The Washington social register has finally figured out what to do with the husband of Oveta Culp Hobby, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Hostesses have been troubled over where to seat him at dinners in pro-col-conscious Washington. The social register has now decreed that, since the wife of an official assumes the same rank as her husband, hereafter the husband of a woman official will also be accorded the same privileges.

City Might Go to Court in Bus Case

LONG BEACH city officials, fighting increases in local bus fares and service curtailments ordered by the State Public Utilities Commission, have two further courses of action open to them. They seem certain to try one of them, and they may resort to the other.

The possibilities:

1. File an appeal for a rehearing with the PUC, asking that its recent order be set aside. The increases are now slated to go into effect Feb. 22, and the Council may act Tuesday on the appeal, hoping to hold up the rate boost pending the results of the proposed rehearing.

2. In case a new appeal to the commission fails, the city may take the issues to court. There still exists considerable misunderstanding among local citizens as to the city's relationships with the Long Beach Motor Bus Company. Some critics of the city officials talk as if the city still has power of decision over the company's operations. That is not the case.

Now under state

Over the city's protests, the company recently placed its operations entirely under the jurisdiction of the state PUC. That means the city cannot fix rates, schedules or routes.

Thus the city can be blamed for what the bus company does only if it fails to represent Long Beach bus patrons vigorously before the commission or to make other reasonable efforts in their behalf.

Through its franchise bureau, the city stubbornly opposed the request for rate increases that preceded the recent PUC order. Whether it will go to court if its appeal for a PUC rehearing fails will depend, presumably, on whether further studies of the PUC order seem to indicate a chance of success by that route.

If undertaken, the court action would probably include a request for a temporary restraining order to prevent the PUC order becoming effective, and a request that the court set aside the rate boosts and service curtailment.

The court would take no new evidence on the case, but would review what the PUC has done to determine if its action was arbitrary. If it should so determine, it presumably would issue a permanent restraining order. Either side could appeal to the higher courts from a Superior Court decision.

Attempts through court action to set aside the orders of regulating bodies such as the PUC are said to be fairly rare. Presumably, they would be undertaken only when there are evidences of flagrant disregard of the facts in reaching a regulatory decision.

But it is a possibility that Long Beach city officials no doubt will consider if their request for a rehearing by the PUC fails to bear fruit. Feeling is pretty strong at City Hall over the bus situation.

L.A.C. SAYS: Impulsiveness

judgment and acts. Those men who have been successful, after failures, accepted full responsibility for their errors and made sure they did not repeat them when they got another opportunity to succeed.

It has often been argued that the impulsive individual makes more mistakes—but he ends up with more accomplishments because he tried more things. That is hard to contradict. But an atmosphere of aggressiveness and speed in action does not always mean more is accomplished than that of the calmer and slower-moving individual who keeps moving steadily—with much less fanfare. Certainly the faster-moving individual is more dangerous because he may be committed to something through his impulsiveness that can be very costly.

We know of many instances in politics where men have met at luncheon and one advanced an idea which seemed good. We have seen one of them jump up and go to a phone to commit himself to some policy or individual. The next day something happened that changed the minds of all three. There was no reason for the speed. A few hours checking would have saved them a lot of embarrassment. This goes on in business, social and civic life constantly. Avoiding this kind of impulsiveness is responsible for the successful political life of men who stay in office over a long period.

Trouble with most "go-getter" type individuals is that they refuse to remember there are two sides to every issue. They seem to consistently avoid hearing, or seeking out, the side that may not agree with their desires. Unpleasant facts are avoided in favor of pleasant ideas. The man or woman who is impulsive and out to get things done as quickly as possible is certainly admired by their slower-moving friends. But they would often save themselves a lot of trouble if they took a good look before they took the leap.—L.A.C.

TOWN MEETING

Worried

TO THE EDITOR: When I purchased a home in Lakewood, I thought surely the area would annex to Long Beach. If Lakewood incorporates as a separate city, it is my inclination to put up a For Sale sign.

Whether to incorporate or annex to Long Beach is a question of vital importance to thousands of residents of this area. Organized persons advocate specific action, whether for the interests of all or the few.

It is suggested that in the public interest a reporter be assigned to determine the facts and that they be published in one comprehensive article so that the voters may know what course of action serves their interests.

LINCOLN S. LITTELL, 4177 N. Los Coyotes Diagonal, (Editorial Note: The Independent, the Press-Telegram and the Sunday Independent Press-Telegram have carried numerous stories on annexation and the Lakewood incorporation proposal. Besides news stories there have been expressions of opinion in editorials and editorial columns. Further stories and comments will be printed between now and the incorporation election next month.)

When a majorette goes down the main street of your town she has skill and her poise. Her uniform is neat, her hair and face washed, brushed and clean. She tries to bring pleasure to those watching her. Most of the time the only compensation she gets is a nice applause of a "well-done" from some one who realizes the hours and months she has put in practicing her particular skill.

I don't doubt I could walk across a floor in a fair imitation of some of your good models in say a week's training. I could not twirl as well as a good majorette in six months. Why don't the models stick to their trade, and we won't interfere with theirs?

MRS. G. H. VERNON, 1671 E. 60th St.

Christianity

TO THE EDITOR: Two articles appeared in the Sunday Town Meeting recently. The first article claimed Christianity was being forced on the people. Such is not the case. It is here if you want it. The first amendment to our Constitution permits you to worship according to the dictates of your conscience.

R. W. HEMMERLIN, 1449 Orange Ave.

Escalator

TO THE EDITOR: After I enjoyed the band concert, I walked along with an elderly woman. As she had heart trouble, she had to rest frequently going up the steep incline to Ocean Blvd. She told me that many of her friends would like to come to the concert, but were also afflicted with heart trouble and unable to climb the steps. She suggested that an escalator would be a great relief to her and also encourage her friends to attend the concert. As Long Beach is a haven for elderly people, it appealed to me as a good idea and worth mentioning.

Let's Settle Bricker Issue Now

WASHINGTON—Avoidance of a decision now on the basic issues growing out of the debate over the Bricker amendment to the Constitution would be detrimental to the Republican party at the polls next November.

Perhaps that's the reason Sen. Knowland, Republican leader, has been striving so hard to get a compromise, and perhaps it's the reason why various Democrats in the Senate are so eager to see the issue buried by sending the measure back to committee for further study.

Like many deep-seated issues, the widespread impact of which does not always appear on the surface, the Bricker amendment is far more than a controversy over legal technicalities. Hence, the importance of those who say it's too important to be acted on now and needs further study simply plays into the hands of those forces which want to pile up troubles for the Republican party this year.

The fundamental problem involved in the Bricker amendment is far better understood generally than it is by some of the lawyers here who are arguing against its passage.

It is no accident that the Bricker amendment has come up for consideration at this time and, furthermore, it was not proposed suddenly. It has been debated before such organizations as the American Bar Association for the last several years, and approval was specifically given the Bricker amendment by the association after considerable study.

The controversy is reminiscent of how the debate started on the famous Article X in the League of Nations covenant when it was proposed by President Wilson back in 1919.

At first, it seemed a highly technical affair when opponents argued that the proposed treaty would require the United States to go to war to protect the independence and territorial integrity of every member nation. But by the time the small minority which started the fight got through, they had won the election of 1920, thus rejecting the League of Nations covenant altogether.

Had there been a spirit of compromise in time, the United States might have entered the league, the whole history of the 20's might have been different and World War II might have been averted—as Winston Churchill himself has so often declared in reviewing that fateful period in world history.

The public furor backing the demand for the Bricker amendment has arisen from the abuse of executive power by both Presidents Roosevelt and Truman in making far-reaching commitments in foreign policy without consulting the Senate. It is not persuasive to say that President Eisenhower will be different. What one President has done in abusing power can be done by a future President. Incidentally, that's why the latest amendment to the Constitution prohibiting a third term was adopted—because Mr. Roosevelt used governmental power and funds to get himself elected to a fourth term. It was no answer to say no other President would try the same tactics.

The proponents of the Bricker amendment have indicated a willingness to compromise so as to meet possible misinterpretations. It is to the credit of men like Sens. George and McCarran, Democrats, and Sens. Knowland and Ferguson, Republicans, and others that conscientious efforts have been made by them to try to rewrite the amendment so as to make it satisfactory to two-thirds of the Senate.

If the Senate takes another week or two to debate and then act on the issue, it will not be time wasted. And if the Senate drops the issue because a two-thirds vote is not attainable for any compromise, the controversy will grow in intensity and bring about a split in both the Republican and the Democratic parties, but with more serious consequences to members of the Republican party, especially in the House of Representatives, whose members will be called upon to express themselves as candidates in primary and final campaigns this year.

Let's settle the Bricker issue now.

AFL Urges Red Mopup in Guatemala

MIAMI BEACH—(UP). The American Federation of Labor urged the president of Guatemala Saturday to clean out strong Communist influence within his government and country.

AFL President George Meany sent the Guatemalan president, Jacob Arbenz Guzman, a letter during the AFL's mid-winter executive council meeting here.

Meany said Communist influences in Guatemala were demonstrated in three specific ways: newspapers supporting the president's administration attack the United States at every possible opportunity; affiliation of many of the leading figures in the president's administration with various international Communist organizations; and official patronage to the Communist-dominated labor bodies.

"We respectfully bring these matters to your attention, Mr. President, in the hope that you will take the necessary measures to correct them and, thereby, insure the development of your country into a healthy and prosperous democracy," Meany said in the letter.

U.S. State Department

GUATEMALA—(UP). The Guatemalan government in a communique Saturday blasted back at the U. S. State Department for calling it a Communist regime.

The state department's communique was made Jan. 30 after the Guatemalan government denounced the existence of an alleged plot to overthrow it with connivance of the United States.

The government is not Communist, the communique said, and has denied it repeatedly. "But the State Department in Washington still insists on calling it Communist in an attempt to justify its unilateral action against Guatemala."

'WALL STREET' OF ISLES SETS FASHIONS BACK

LONDON—(UP). "The City"—the Wall Street of London—is going back to the good old days. This means dark coats and striped trousers.

During the clothes-rationing days that grew out of the war, sports jackets and flannels became quite acceptable for clerks in offices of Big Business.

Directors of banks, brokerage houses and insurance companies have quietly launched a campaign to revert to the prewar tradition.

One outfitter said: "The drive against dress slacks is having its effect. We are selling more white collars now than at any time since before the war. And this tendency is for neater patterns in shirts and ties."

Food Rushed 5000 Victims of Arid Area

KENNETT, Mo.—(UP). More than 5000 hungry and destitute men, women and children in this southeastern Missouri community who are victims of the two-year drought were assured surplus government food Saturday.

The Dunklin County Red Cross certified their needs for food to the federal government and state authorities immediately ordered 12,000 cans of beef transferred to the area from a tuberculosis hospital.

Meanwhile, cheese, butter and dried milk were dispatched from Commodore Credit Corporation warehouses at St. Louis for the stricken families.

Proctor Carter, head of the state division of welfare, moved to transfer the beef after a federal representative said he would have to hunt for surplus beef before it could be brought in.

Red Cross officials estimated there were between 700 and 1000 families who desperately were in need of immediate assistance. They said the 12,000 cans of beef, 30 ounces to the can, would be distributed on the basis of three cans to each person.

Convicts Offer Blood

READING, Pa.—(UP). Fourteen inmates of Bucks County Prison have volunteered to donate blood for John Tibbets, 17, son of chief county probation officer Paul Tibbets. Young Tibbets was injured seriously last Tuesday in an automobile accident on the Harrisburg Pike.

Four Escaped Convicts Grabbed for Speeding

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—(UP). A way to await reinforcement by routine arrest for speeding Saturday night four of the nine desperadoes who tunneled out of the Alabama State Prison for incorrigible convicts Thursday night.

Patrolmen Bill Holland and J. C. Floyd arrested the fugitives identified as Donald H. Allison, 23; Johnny Garrison, 31; Willie Pirkie, 35; and James Green, 27.

The officers said they had clocked the reported stolen 1953 Ford at 75 miles an hour on Highway 231 heading north just outside Morgan City, Ala.

Warden S. W. Hixon had listed all nine as "maximum security" convicts and told searchers to take no chances and bring them in dead or alive.

The search for the other five was centered on the Gulf Coast area, about 350 miles south of here.

The men in the Ford were unarmed and officers did not realize what a prize catch they had made until one noticed the driver's license in the name of James Green, one of the fugitives. Radioing for help, the officers pulled off the side of the highway.

Oil Workers Plan Mighty New Union

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE

WASHINGTON—(UP). A group of big oil unions is going to try once again to set up a unified organization so strong that American and Canadian oil companies would have to bargain with it on an industrywide basis.

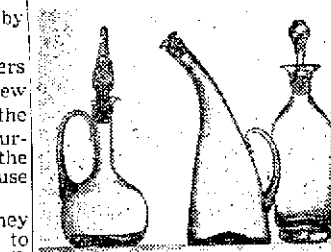

The drive will open in Philadelphia Feb. 15 at a 10-union meeting called by Maynard Sands, president of the Independent Central States Petroleum Union which represents workers of Standard Oil of Indiana and its subsidiaries.

A prime mover in the session, according to labor circles, will be O. A. Knight, president of the CIO Oil Workers and CIO vice president. Knight long has been striving to unite oil and allied unions under a single collective bargaining banner, much like John L. Lewis organized coal.

He is said to have made some progress through his "national coalition of oil unions," but has encountered rebellious independent eastern and western unions which refused to support his wage strike in 1952. Some of these will be represented at Philadelphia, so fireworks are expected.

Sands told the United Press at Kansas City the Philadelphia session will shoot for a membership in the United

A Continent Helps Film an Opera

By Nancy Lester

HOW IS A SUPER-COLOR-SAL stage spectacle presented expressly for today's wide movie screens by the most modern color cameras?

It's not easy, but the methods are intensely interesting. As an example, almost overwhelming problems had to be overcome when Cinerama moved its three-eyed camera and crew to Milan, Italy, to photograph and record, for the first time, a performance by the world-famed La Scala Opera.

For one thing, the company — singers, musicians, dancers and staff — numbering some 900 people, was scattered all over Europe. Before the ballet and the triumphal march that is the finale of the second act of "Aida" could be shot, a lighting plan had to be devised. Cinerama's very broad field of vision, easily scanning the 600 or so people who filled the mammoth stage, made extraordinary demands in the way of lighting for its color photography. Some 53 high-intensity arc lights had to be acquired from points as distant as England. Three heavy-duty generators, German-built, were rushed up from Rome. It was enough illumination to light a good-sized town. Each light had to be secured or hung out of the camera's line of light without scarring the famous playhouse. What really complicated the problem, Cameraman Harry Squires recounts, was that no one in the crew spoke Italian.

To achieve the audience participation sense, a live audience had to be provided and one that looked as impressive and as well dressed as an actual La Scala audience would look. This was solved by the intervention of the Toscanini family.

Friends were invited as guests of the Toscaninis to hear the brilliant young pianist, Arturo Benedetti Michaelangeli. The concert was given, and very successfully. The only unique feature was that they were photographed applauding. The crew finished its job in one evening.

COOKING

Serve Tasty Seafood for a Dinner Treat

By Mildred K. Flanary

Press - Telegram Home Economics Editor

LOUIS XIV had a chef named Vatel who, when the filet de sole for His Highness' dinner failed to arrive, killed himself. Vatel was an extremist, and a bit ridiculous, no doubt, but would that American homemakers had just a little more of his appreciation of the possibilities and nutrition of this food of the sea.

For people living in a country all but surrounded by water, Americans are skimpy seafood eaters. The average consumption is only 11 pounds per person per year as against 145 pounds of meat per person. Too, the American housewife knows very little about seafood. She objects to its bones, to its odor, and, to speak quite frankly, she really doesn't know how to cook it. Yet in these times of high meat prices, this culinary inexperience is bad economy.

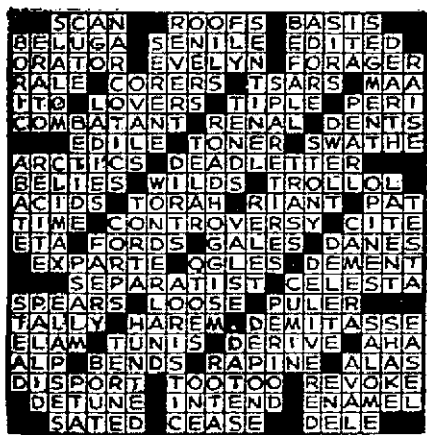

Truth is, there's more real oomph, more taste and eye appeal to many a seafood dish than in many of the other more popular foods we serve. Mrs. John C. Cottrell, 26 Lindero Ave., is one outstanding and meticulous hostess who has a rare appreciation of this fact. She not only realizes the possibilities of the subtle blending of seafoods, but in the captivation afforded by these delectable dishes as they meet the eye. She plans generous servings, too, for her family and her guests always come back for repeats. Her recipe for "Filet de Sole en Papillotte" is absolutely as good and as intriguing as it sounds. You'll find it below. Clip it out and try it this week!

Kitchen Tip:

Mrs. Cottrell's Fish Tip: Cut cucumbers into slices about 2 inches thick, scoop out centers to make a cup, sprinkle with salt, turn upside down to drain. Fill centers with well seasoned fresh crab meat. Serve well chilled, topped with a sprig of parsley.

SOLUTION TO TODAY'S PUZZLE (See Page 21)

"Aida" got under way. Platforms for cameras and lights were everywhere.

Three scenes — the ballet, the triumphal march and the temple scene — were photographed exactly as they would ordinarily be done by the Scala — the same costumes, scenery and players.

All day Saturday and Sunday, the players and singers and dancers went through their routines to Verdi's noble music, recorded on seven microphones for stereophonic sound. Ballerina Luciana Novarro drew applause each time she concluded her dance. Members of the orchestra seemed enchanted with the "play-back" of the score. But the real test would be a showing of the whole assembled scene, film and sound, for the approval of Signor Luigi Oldani, director general of La Scala in New York months later. Permission to record La Scala's famous company had been conditional on his approval of the filmed scene.

Months later, the distinguished director was flown to the New York studio. The three projectors threw their images on the giant curved screen. The opening passages of the ballet music began. Signor Oldani sat, rigid on a hard-back kitchen chair.

A half hour later he emerged smiling, and from Italy's most famous impresario came the comment, "I have discovered a new La Scala."

Mrs. Cottrell's

Filet de Sole en Papillotte:

- 4 large or 8 small filets of sole
- 2 tablespoons of lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons of oil
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 tablespoon brandy
- 1 carrot, peeled and quartered
- 2 tablespoons minced celery tops
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1 bay leaf
- ½ fresh tomato, chopped
- 1 10½-oz. can condensed mushroom soup (undiluted)
- 1 3-oz. can broiled mushroom caps

Wipe filets with a paper towel; sprinkle with lemon juice and brush with oil. Broil 4 minutes on each side under high heat. Meanwhile heat wine and add brandy, carrot, celery, parsley, bay leaf and tomato. Cook slowly for 10 minutes. Strain through cheesecloth or very fine strainer; add mushroom soup and mushroom caps. Blend well and bring to the boiling point; set aside. Take an ample section of foil paper for each portion. Grease well. Place a spoonful of sauce on each piece of foil and place a filet on the sauce; cover with remaining sauce. Crease foil to form a rectangular package to hold in flavor and aroma. Place packets on baking sheet under broiler about 8 inches from the heat for 15 minutes. Serve in foil, rolling it back slightly to form an open dish. Yield: 4 portions.

of casual, welcoming informality. Toward this end, the Schliepers have chosen appointments that take their colors from the warmer sections of the color wheel, with just enough spicy greens and cool aquas to add variance. A deep-piled soft cocoa chenille rug completely carpets the house — with the exception of the dining-kitchen area. Therefore, every room is pervaded with this warm, muted tone. It is interesting to find that, in combination with various other colors, the carpet takes on a different appearance in every room.

THE LIVING ROOM walls are papered in a tiny provincial motif using sage green and yellow on a ground of deep chocolate. The expansive, diamond-paned windows looking toward the street are curtained with casement draperies of a semi-opaque rose-cocoa hue.

The wall opposite faces the patio and the pool beyond and consists almost entirely of sliding doors of plate glass. The patio with its colorful array of rattan furniture and its cleverly built-in refreshment bar seem an integral part of the living room, so unobtrusive is the glass wall.

Focal point of interest in the room is a huge open fireplace of used brick. Black wrought iron accessories and a black fire screen promote the air of early Americanism. Opposite the fireplace at the other end of the room is a delightful little maple spinet standing under a mirror that reflects the cheerful warmth of the fireplace.

CENTERING the C. H. Schlieper home like a magnificent turquoise jewel is a 35-foot oval pool. Its setting is pale green cement bordered with a lush planting in the tropical manner. The front door opens directly into the living room. In here, everything from the open ceiling with its massive beams to the raised-hearth fireplace is calculated to create an atmosphere

the quaint dining room with its mammoth indoor barbecue of used brick. Its rounded facade and arched firebox are unusual and rustic. Here, too, the ceiling shows its giant beams and a glass wall invites diners to step out into the patio.

Ex-Convicts Find Volunteers 'First Friends' Out of Prison

Western Area of Organization Will Meet Here

"When a man gets out of prison, he feels like he has a sign 'Ex-Con' 10 feet high on his back. He needs a job and friends more than he ever needed a job and friends before in his life. The Volunteers of America stands as his first friend."

A slim, gray-haired, brown-eyed woman is talking: Condr. Ida N. Spiess of Portland, commander of the Western area of the Volunteers of America, who will preside over the area council meeting which formally opens at 9 a. m. Monday in the Wilton Hotel.

Commander Spiess, the only woman commander in the organization, also will participate in the memorial service and communion at 2:30 p. m. today in the Volunteers of America chapel, 1509 Alamitos Ave.

She directs Volunteers of America work in California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, and leads the 52 of the organization, a psychiatric executive officers who will be social workers who are graduates here for the council. She is the wife of Joseph Spiess, retired Tulane University, stresses the hotel and apartment building, that the Volunteers help the owner and operator of Portland, families of prisoners adjust when

FIRST FREEDOM
The first two months after a man—or a woman—is released from prison is the most crucial period in his or her rehabilitation. The officer who follows the prison work program, established by Maude Ballington Booth, "Little Mother of the Prisons," in 1896 in Sing Sing, Mrs. Booth and her husband, Gen. Ballington Booth were co-founders of the Volunteers, now headed by their son, Gen. Charles Brandon Booth.

"One of our tasks is to help former prisoners find work and we are successful in persuading industry to take many of them, and give them another chance," she says. "They need good, decent places to stay, places that are within their income."

"Skid Row is no place for them. For a long time they have known no one but other prisoners, but on their release they are not permitted to associate with former prisoners."

"After a man has been in prison for a long time, even a 'Scop' and 'Go' sign is new to him. He has forgotten how to drive a car; he has forgotten traffic rules. He has forgotten how to make decisions—they so long have been made for him. He has forgotten how to order a meal in a restaurant, because so long his food has been set before him."

They also praise Maj. Strickland's Sunset Club for the Aged at 342 E. First St., where elderly persons meet six afternoons a week to play cards, sing and read, and his help for borderline welfare cases.

A borderline case is considered to be one near the three years residence necessary in the state to qualify for state aid. Emergency aid usually will tide such individuals or families over the period when they can become self-supporting or qualify for aid.

Largest Oil Ship Goes to Sea Tuesday

QUINCY, Mass. — (AP) The largest commercial cargo vessel ever built in the Western Hemisphere will slide down the ways at the Bethlehem Steel Corp. Shipyards here next Tuesday.

The still-unnamed, 45,000-ton oil tanker will be one of the largest vessels of its kind afloat and will rival great passenger liners in size.

The 937-foot ship will have a capacity of 16,500,000 gallons and will be able to carry enough gasoline in one trip to fuel almost 1,000,000 modern automobiles.

feet long, and the Queen Mary, operation this spring, running between the Persian Gulf and the United States, under charter to Gulf Oil.

The new tanker, which will have a loaded displacement of 57,800 tons, will be exceeded in general bulk by only five other commercial ships—the Elizabeth, the Mary, the United States, the Liberte and the Ile de France.

Stavros Niarchos, head of World Tankers Co., which operates one of the largest independent tanker fleets in the world, said the new vessel will go into operation this spring, running between the Persian Gulf and the United States, under charter to Gulf Oil.

The name of the new behemoth will be disclosed Tuesday.

Ships Added as Carriers of Newsprint

Replacement of two of its freighters with bigger and newer ships — one of which was launched only last November — will give Canadian Gulf Line an additional 2000 tons of cargo space for carrying newsprint from Canada to the Port of Long Beach, it was announced Saturday.

The line is represented locally by Star Terminals Co. Inc., which has offices at Berth 9, Pier A. William H. Buchler, vice president of Star Terminals, is in charge of the local office.

Canadian Gulf Line averages four to five ship arrivals a month and brings about 12,000 tons of newsprint monthly into the port, Buchler said.

The line has been operating three ships, hauling newsprint from Powell River and Duncan Bay, B. C., to west coast ports. Two of the vessels were sister ships, the Ekofors and Atomona, and both have capacity for 3100 tons of newsprint. The other, the Joehg Clair, can carry 3200 tons.

Recently, however, the Atomona was taken off the service. In March, the Ekofors likewise will cease hauling newsprint.

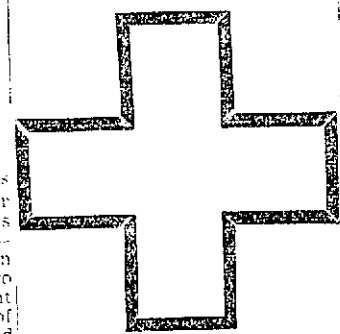

Newest of the two replacement vessels will be the MS Powell River, which will arrive in the Port of Long Beach on its maiden run Feb. 17. The ship was designed to carry newsprint and was launched Nov. 17 in Oslo, Norway. The vessel is powered by a Nurnberg Diesel and has a cruising speed of about 14½ knots.

In March, the Powell River will be joined by another new ship, built in 1952, the Orania.

Built Around a Bit of Turquoise

table is surrounded by ladder-backed cane-seated chairs that add the right touch of provincialism to the scheme. At either side of the maple server is a wing chair and a platform rocker, wonderfully comfortable chairs for the niceties of conversing with a friend over a mid-morning cup of coffee.

TWO COUNTERS separate the kitchen from the dining room. Into one counter is set the Thermador range. Both the counters (as well as the kitchen drainboards) are faced with Italian tile of a dull terra cotta finish. Over the range is an attractive scalloped copper hood. Mrs. Schlieper's kitchen has taken a sharp departure from the ordinary workaday kitchen. The floor is tiled with the Italian terra cotta and random-covered with gay cotton rugs. The cupboards are of elegantly finished birch with a pilgrim finish. The hardware, too, adds its share of beauty, crafted as it is of hammered copper.

Down a hallway from the dining room are the two downstairs bedrooms with their bath that opens to poolside for the convenience to bathers. The direct accessibility of the bathroom to the exterior saves housecleaning chores.

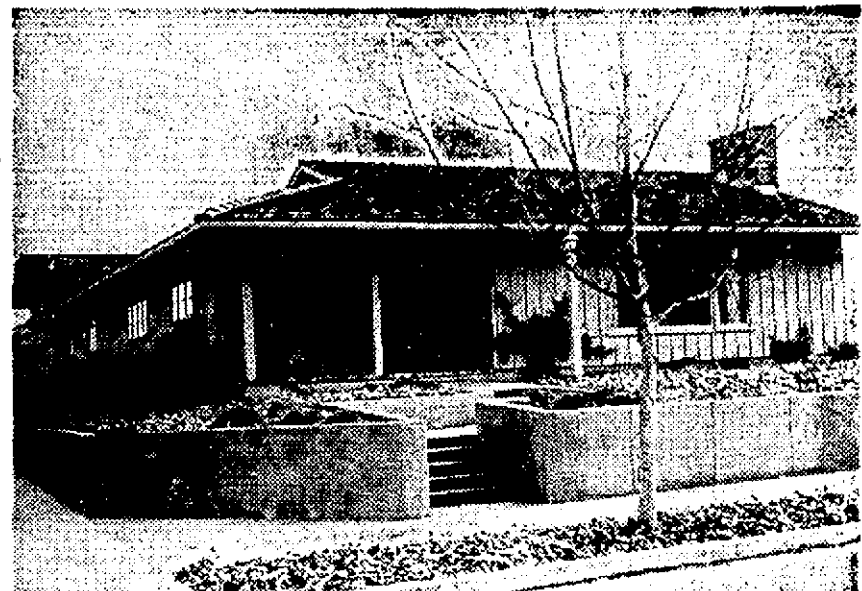

The Schliepers' little daughter, Sharon, has a room delicately papered in a briar rose pattern employing a tiny rosebud motif. Her maple twin beds have Martha Washington spreads, demure and snowy-white. And the broad expanse of windows overlooking the pool is lavishly curtained in pink slubbed draperies edged in ruffles and topped with a tightly-gathered valance.

The two boys, Stanley and Steven, have a bedroom that enjoys a similar view and is carried out in tones of hunter's green and brown. A birch cornice box is embellished with their names spelled out on either end in rope. The plaid wallpaper and deep green bedspreads lend a boyish feeling to the room.

THE MASTER SUITE is located upstairs over the garage, the only part of the house on a second-story level.

The furnishings — twin beds, double chests and the wing chair and tier table grouping — are of maple. The spreads are stark white.

These two fine, well-trained collies—Highland Frost, left, and his father, Highland Commander III, are the pets of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Miner of 4224 Clark Ave.

THE TRUE DOG LOVER takes an interest in his voluntary charge and helps his pet fit into family life as a respected companion, or he goes even further and trains his dog to perform in obedience tests, according to Paul Miner, who is active in obedience training classes for dogs at Pan American Park.

The task of keeping a dog is usually self-imposed upon the pet owner and there is no excuse for neglecting the training of a canine companion, especially since dog education classes are held in the Long Beach area, Miner says. This training pays off when, instead of a yipping, badly mannered pet, a dog learns to be well-behaved.

Mr. and Mrs. Miner, 4224 Clark Ave., own two fine obedience trained collies—Highland Frost, one year and three months old, and his father, Highland Commander III, three years old. Highland has 18 trophies, many ribbons and his C.D.X. (Companion Dog Excellent). His son is rapidly following in his footsteps, now possessing several cups, ribbons, and his C.D. (Companion Dog).

The beautiful, rough-coated collie learns rapidly and easily and is therefore one of the most popular and loved dogs in existence. He has been developed by careful breeding, and the refinement process still continues.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S interest in this breed stimulated the Scotch market in the early '60s. About 1880, the collie received great impetus in America. Of course his ancestors go far back into history when sheep herding first existed.

The collie is a lithe and active dog — strong, speedy, with a facial expression denoting high intelligence. His eyes are soft and loving, yet alert. He is a poised, confident animal, willing to learn and serve in any capacity as companion, watch dog, herder, or whatever the circumstances demand.

Fire Halts Occupancy of House

BELLFLOWER—A. M. Larson didn't get a chance to move completely into his house on which he made a down payment of $1000 a week ago before it was virtually destroyed by fire.

The $4000 house at 9038 Walnut Ave. caught fire at 7:30 a. m. Saturday and the best three fire companies could do was hold loss to $3000. Firemen said a faulty heater was to blame.

Larson had moved some of his furniture in Friday and returned Saturday morning to continue moving-in operations. Then he apparently left the house, with the heater burning, firemen said. He returned after the fire was out and the damage done.

Woman Accused as Man Stabbed

SAN PEDRO—A stabbing affray in a neighbor woman's home sent Julius Thomas, 29, of 968 1/2 Upland Ave., to Harbor General Hospital with a serious wound in the lung, police reported Saturday.

Police booked Mrs. Annie Blacklock, 33, of 988 Upland Ave., mother of nine children, on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon as a result of the incident.

Det. Adrian Thornberry said Thomas was stabbed in the chest with a butcher knife allegedly wielded by the Blacklock woman. The brawl took place at the Blacklock home.

Identify Dead Woman as Alhambra Resident

A woman found dead in the surf at the foot of Molino Ave. Friday afternoon was identified Saturday as Mrs. Elsie D. Munsie, about 65, of Alhambra. The woman's son, Clifford E. Munsie of Covina, identified the body. A coroner's inquest will be held. Mrs. Munsie was believed to have been dead from 10 to 24 hours when found by Mr. and Mrs. C. A. He began in the Fore River shipyard, a Bethlehem steel plant at Quincy, Mass., and he worked in the Boston Navy Yard before he came to Long Beach in 1941. He and his wife, Alma, expect to buy a trailer and go on a six-to-eight-month circle trip of the United States and Canada.

$2,530,000 PAYROLL

Shipyard Observing Eleventh Birthday

Long Beach Naval Shipyard will observe its 11th anniversary this month. It was known as naval drydock when activity started Feb. 23, 1923.

Since reactivation of the shipyard in February, 1951, it has processed 887 ships plus 80 service craft assigned for overhaul, repair or restricted availability and activation.

The personnel is community-minded and last year collected approximately $60,000 for the Community Chest, Red Cross, March of Dimes, Heart Fund and similar agencies.

Once a month, employees contribute their blood to the Armed Forces Blood Bank and in 1953 contributed 2714 pints of blood.

On Feb. 1 of this year, the civilian complement was 6641, as compared with 8126 on Feb. 1, 1953. The monthly payroll approximates $2,543,000, making it one of the most important industrial plants in the Southland.

In the past year, the employees have invested an average of $52,000 per week in the payroll savings plan with an average participation of 99 per cent.

The Navy, realizing that the man on the job best can see where economies and better ways of working can be achieved, has an active awards and incentives program. A part of it is the suggestion program.

In 1953, shipyard workers came through with suggestions meaning a saving of $380,428 in the first year each suggestion was in use. With each additional year the ideas are used, the savings mount. Cash awards for these suggestions in 1953 totaled $22,585—slightly less than 6 1/2 per cent of the first year's savings.

John A. Nodson, 40 Ximeno Ave., perhaps is the outstanding suggestioner in the shipyard for 1953. A machinist of 30 years' experience, 19 of them in federal service, Nodson submitted ideas in 1953 adding up to $20,570 savings in the first year of use. His awards total $685.

The transportation shop under James O. Schaefer in the past year equipped 10 pieces of weight-handling equipment in the shop with radio equipment. The industrial equipment includes straddle trucks, truck tractors, a stake truck and cruiser or truck cranes.

Through the radio control system, Schaefer is credited with increasing efficiency to the extent that automotive transportation has absorbed practically all hauling formerly done by shipyard railroad. The overall savings in capital equipment amounts to $217,000, according to shipyard officials, who add that savings in personnel amounts to $83,000 and savings in maintenance costs total $68,880.

HEXHAM, England.—(AP) A Dane has apologized for a rude act by some of his countrymen 1079 years ago. Nasturtiums Are Flashy, Useful

By Burleigh M. Beakley

NASTURTIUMS are bright, hard-working little herbs bearing five-petal, spurred flowers. The round leaves and fleshy stems, and later the large seed balls, are edible. The English pickle them and sell the product commercially as Indian-cress. And down in South America, where the plant comes from — in Peru and Bolivia — the housewives boil the roots for pot herbs. But in the United States the leaves and fleshy stems are used as fresh greens, the peppery bite they add gives just the right "zip" to a tossed salad.

The nasturtium, or Tropaeolum, should be sown in a permanent location as it won't stand transplanting after attaining large size. Poor soil and a north exposure are a good combination. Too-rich soil will cause the foliage to outgrow and hide the blooms.

IN GENERAL, the nasturtium is divided into two classes: dwarf and climbing. The dwarf variety grows 12 to 18 inches high and, because of its dense, bushy structure, single, double and frilled flowers and fragrance, makes a good choice for borders, beds and cut-flowers. The cut-flowers make the best showing when displayed in glass bowls.

The climbing nasturtiums will run six to eight feet and, for the most blooms and fragrance, should be pruned to two or three runners. If not grown on a trellis, they should make a handsome cover for unsightly sand banks or old fences.

Some of the newer hybrids do not seed rapidly, can best be propagated by cuttings. When selecting a plant from which to take cuttings, and to be sure of getting good stock, choose by fragrance, double flowers, novel colors, and flowers held well above the leaves as these are the marks of the best grown varieties.

THE BLOOMS of the nasturtium spread 2½ inches and the more choice hybrids are double with a distinct ruffle to the wide petals. The colors vary widely from pale yellow to orange, red and very deep mahogany.

Being a bright, bold growing plant, both in the dwarf and climbing varieties, some care should be taken in locating the nasturtium with other flowers so that it won't crowd them out.

The black bean aphid is the most common invader of the stems and undersides of the leaves. The bug's presence can be detected by the curling and distortion of the leaves. Spray or dust with a good contact insecticide will control the pest.

Let It 'Snow' in Your Garden

By Bob Gilmore

RARE, INDEED, is snowfall in Long Beach, but gardens can gain something of the effect of snow with plantings of white-toned ornamentals. These blooms definitely will add interesting high lights to the garden scene.

For a low-growing winter plant the pansy is ideal. For many years seeds and plants were offered only in mixture but now you can obtain separate shades and the white pansies are splendid. Not only will they add a touch of gaiety to your outdoor scene but they also perform well indoors at a time when white blooms are scarce. Pansies want a cool, moist growing environment, exactly what you can expect during the next few months.

Ranunculuses, which formerly were propagated almost entirely by corms for amateur growers, are now available in plants. They need simply be transplanted to White-toned primulas in mass plantings can provide your spring garden with an effect of a snow carpet.

Get triple-action benefits, says garden consultant Joe Littlefield. The ideal complete food for all plants. 1. Acts fast, you see results in a week. 2. Continues feeding for a long period. 3. Provides organic matter to improve soil. Insist on triple-action Red Star Gro-Master at nurseries and garden dealers.

Garden Tips
BY JOE LITTLEFIELD
Red Star Garden Consultants

You'll dress up your place if you green up the grass with a feeding. If that lawn hasn't been fed for three months, when grass is dry but soil moist, spread 8 cups of Gro-Master per 100 sq. ft. and water in thoroughly. Do this every 3 months; you'll have a wonderful lawn.

Trees and shrubs, too, reward you generously when they get a spring feeding with triple-action Red Star Gro-Master. Feed trees planted this year 3 cups per inch of trunk diameter, measured 3 ft. up from ground; older trees 8 cups per 100 sq. ft. of area under branches; shrubs 3/4 cup per 10 sq. ft. of area around the shrub.

Time to dig up and divide old clumps of shasta daisies, perennial delphinium, gerbera, day lilies and mums. (Iris come later!) And you still can set out larkspur, snapdragon, stock, Iceland poppy and Pacific hybrid delphinium. After they're established, feed Gro-Master and watch 'em bloom their heads off!

your garden. This saves time and produces color in your garden much faster than by planting the bulbs or corms. The plants are about five to six weeks old when offered. It is best to obtain the large, double flowered sorts. At this time of the year ranunculuses should be planted in a sunny spot. Later on, if the flowers are to appear when the weather warms up, then a partial shady spot will prove best.

CHRYSANTHEMUM plants are still being offered by nurserymen. These may be obtained in one-gallon containers and then immediately transferred to your garden. Mums will want a sunny spot at this time. Some types are as small as a button, while others grow as large as a dinner plate. Disbudding and disbudding also makes it possible to control the size of the individual flowers as well as the quantity of the entire crop.

Primulas are among the earliest flowers to bloom in the spring. Their name indicates this but, as a matter of fact, in Southern California they frequently bloom even before the new year. The most popular variety is the fairy primrose, known as Primula malacoides. The flowers are small and dainty with fringed petal edges. Primulas are grown as an annual but they tend to reseed themselves each year.

ICELAND POPPIES are becoming more popular each year. The stems of the Gartford strain are especially long and wiry, making the flowers splendid for both indoor and outdoor decoration. The petals have a beautiful crinkled texture. Iceland poppies, as is indicated by their name, can tolerate a great deal of cold. Plants may be propagated from established seedlings as it is now rather late to start them from seed. During the winter months they will do best in a sunny location.

One of the purest white tones in the flower kingdom are available in the stock family. The Giant Winter Nice strain grows quickly at this time and the Imperial stocks are also very popular for general garden purposes. Beautiful white-toned varieties are available in both types. Stocks should not be over-watered as they are susceptible to a fungus that seems to thrive in damp spots. The flowers have a strong perfume and are also one of our best winter-time cut flowers.

Can't Dance Forever, Say Marge, Gower Champion

HOLLYWOOD—(AP). Dancing stars Marge and Gower Champion have their own five-year plan. Their career as a team may end after that time.

That doesn't mean there will be any interruption in their marital bliss. But they realize that no team can go on dancing forever.

"Take a look at most of the female dancers," observes Marge. "Most of them have had to quit after their youth has begun to fade. It's too tough a life for a woman. You'll note that a dancer like Tony Demarco has had four or five partners. And each time he takes a young girl for the job."

So far Marge shows no signs of losing her youthful vitality. But she'll make no predictions about continuing her career after five years.

"Look at the male dancers, too," adds Gower. "Most of them quit and go into other fields. One of the notable exceptions is Fred Astaire. At 54, he's a phenomenon. I would hate to look forward to working as hard as he does when I'm 54."

"The trouble with our operation is that we can't take it easy. Every dance has to be worked out to the finest detail; after their youth has begun to fade. It's too tough a life for a woman. You'll note that a dancer like Tony Demarco has had four or five partners. And each time he takes a young girl for the job."

He envies Betty Grable, with whom the Champions are starring in "The Pleasure Is All Mine." Dance Director Jack Cole reports that Betty never warms up before dancing, as most dancers do. She watches her "dance-in" go through a number, then rehearses it herself a few times. She gives her all in a take or two and then can forget the number.

Not so the Champions. On their night club tours, they must perform a dozen or more numbers every night. This October they will embark on a strenuous three-month concert tour presented by Paul Gregory, who produced "John Brown's Body," "Caine Mutiny Court-Martial," etc.

The Champions plan to continue with concert movies, TV and night clubs for another five years. Then Gower hopes to return to his work as choreographer for Broadway shows, at least on a part-time basis. He created the dances for shows like "Land an Ear" before landing success as a performer.

She's Sitting Pretty!

TALENTED BEAUTY Lucy McAlister, a starlet, was signed by Warner Bros. to a term contract and given a top role in the CinemaScope production "A Star Is Born." And in this film she plays, of all things, the role of a movie starlet.

Beatty Finds TV Helps His Circus

HOLLYWOOD—(AP). Far from hurting circus business, TV can be an asset, Clyde Beatty reports.

The veteran animal trainer and circus operator, who returns to the screen in "Ring of Fear," says that he has used TV to help his business. Whenever the Beatty circus plays a sizable town, TV cameras are invited to record the putting up of the tents. In some places, a different phase of circus life has been televised each day.

"We show just enough of the circus to give the public a taste," says Beatty. "The coverage has brought a noticeable improvement in attendance."

EVERYONE MAKING MOVIES

There's a Film Now on Most Any Field

By CLAIRE CON

NEW YORK — Jan. 30. (AP). Little "Hollywoods" have sprung up throughout the United States, dedicated to producing movies without trying to make any money.

They are succeeding, too. Hundreds of films costing from a few thousand dollars to $500,000 each are produced each year. They deal with just about everything from how to squirm into a girdle gracefully to the care and feeding of honey bees.

Almost no one has to pay a cent to see the movies, because they are educational and industrial films turned out by corporations, associations, churches and schools. They come in black and white, color, 3-D and even cinema-scope—or silent or with sound.

One picture—only 28 minutes long—has been seen by 60,000,000 persons. That's more than any other movie in history has attracted.

A spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers, one of the major industrial film producers, said nearly every city in the country of any size has producers turning out movies for use in factories, offices, churches and schools.

Sound films that play and show the same thing over and over are used in memory courses or to teach foreign languages. A color musical is used to promote a program and at least two pictures on how to model corsets without blushing are used in the lingerie industry.

The record-breaker, according to industry figures, is "Unfinished Rainbow," made in 1941 about the development of aluminum manufacture. It is the "rags-to-riches" story of an industrialist.

A Chicago department store made a movie just to inspire salesgirls to be more polite on sultry summer days.

Other industrial film subjects include time and motion studies, travelogues to encourage auto trips, inspirational success stories, documentaries, screen "editorials," histories, cartoons, sports, farming, salesmanship and even taking medicine.

Problem films also are popular, according to N.A.M. movie department director Robert Oakes. Some pictures illustrate the use of handicapped persons in industry. Another deals with the trials and tribulations of an ex-convict.

Now the industries are branching out into television. Some firms are buying the time to show their films. Others lend movies to stations wanting to use them as a public service.

'Male Animal' Cast Gives Highly Entertaining Show

By FRED SCHOTT

Somewhat it never struck us that James Thurber, the man who draws those funny cartoons about men and women, would have any ideas on the subject of academic freedom, but he does and you can absorb them painfully at Long Beach Community Playhouse.

Thurber's feelings about this subject are outlined in his comedy, "The Male Animal," which opened Friday night at the Playhouse, now celebrating its 25th year in Long Beach.

Fortunately, "The Male Animal" is not a social drama of the boring, preaching sort, but it does have a message which is put across by means of satire and sometimes just plain gut-faws.

It is a highly entertaining show, with a great many humorous situations and was acted in a spirited and competent manner almost all the way.

The plot revolves around an English professor who is commended, in print, by a student editor for reading a letter by an early-day radical to his class.

It turns out the plot had only considered reading the letter, but he gets in deep water with the trustees of the school, who suspect him of being a "Red."

As if that weren't enough, the professor (a young one) has wife trouble, the co-respondent being a former football hero who likes to use salt shakers and highball glasses to demonstrate plays.

In the end, virtue triumphs, but there's some doubt about whether academic freedom does. Although within many years ago, "The Male Animal" is timely in many respects.

Of the cast, we liked Jack Tetu as a droll university dean, Marvin Cloyd as yesterday's football hero, Gary Thomas as today's football hero, and Ray Konard as the English prof.

There was also good work done by Debby Fagish, Kay Shuman, Phyllis Mitchell, George Bruce, Barbara Bartko, William Bolt, VI Coulter and Robert Milner.

Director Herbert Yenne squeezed out a lot of action from a play that could be static if permitted.

MGM Signs Another Boyish Actress

HOLLYWOOD—(AP). It's the season for Hollywood studios to sign Audrey Hepburn-type beauties, and MGM came up with its version, Finnish dancer Taina Elg.

Last year it was open hunting for Marilyn Monroes. But this year the film factories are following a recent Paris fashion for glamour girls to be "young, boyish and hot-eyed."

Like Audrey, Taina hails from Europe and started her career as a ballerina. And, also like the willowy Miss Hepburn, Taina was behind the door when the Jane Russell curves were passed out.

"Oooh, I get self-conscious when people talk about bosom," gurgled Taina as she wrapped a tent-like coat around her slight figure.

"Sometimes I wear those pads when I dance ballet but otherwise, no."

It's been 30 years since MGM signed a Scandinavian, and the last one was the great Garbo.

Violet Society Meet

Mrs. Carolyn K. Rector will review the book, "How to Grow African Violets," at the meeting of the African Violet Society of Long Beach Friday in Linden Hall. The noon coffee hour will precede the business meeting and program at 1:30 p. m. Mrs. Ethel Thalheimer, program chairman, announces that the meeting is open to all persons interested in the propagation and culture of African violets.

New officers are Mrs. Viola M. Wilson, president; Mrs. Helen Koran, vice president; Mrs. Lorraine Stine, secretary; Mrs. Marie Henning, treasurer.

grows easily and rapidly in the Long Beach climate.

The use of dwarf Dusty Miller (Centaurea Candidissima) for borders is advised. It is a compact grower with thick silvery leaves that set off a flower bed to advantage. However, due to the foot-high growth that it attains it would be wise only to use it in conjunction with medium and tall growing bedding material such as calendula, stock and snapdragons, the California Bedding Plant Advisory Board advises.

For bare corners or to hide a water faucet or some other distracting spot it is best to use plants of Centaurea gymnocarpa, or tall Dusty Miller. This variety grows to 1½ or two feet and spreads 2½ to three feet across. The leaf is finely cut or indented and is also of a silvery gray color. It is particularly useful as foliage material in flower arrangements.

In winter planting of Dusty Miller, good drainage is essential as the plants are subject to stem rot under too wet conditions. Light sandy soil is preferable, but Dusty Miller will thrive in any good garden soil. Try a planting along the driveway or spot a plant or two at strategic points throughout the garden. The result will be pleasing.

form well during the cooler months of the year. Pastel shades predominate. The plants are easy to grow, requiring very little care or attention.

Watsonias which resemble glads are a rather interesting novelty for planting at this time. The flowers appear in great masses and have a bell-like shape. Set the bulbs from three to six inches deep.

During the cooler months of the year when houses tend to be over-heated make certain that your plants do not suffer. Stuff rooms are not ideal for indoor plants. It may prove advisable to remove your ornamentals when a room becomes crowded or filled with cigaret or cigar smoke. Also make sure that your indoor subjects have plenty of water, evaporation being faster in a warm room.

Golf Brand flourished anywhere—in sun or shade, on level or grade

Because Golf Brand is blended to meet all the various conditions found in every lawn, there's no need to buy special seeds for special lawn conditions. Golf Brand gives you sun-loving grasses—including famous Merion Bluegrass—to keep the lawn green in hot weather—grasses that stand deep shade . . . grasses with root structures that cling to slopes. Wherever you plant Golf Brand, the particular grasses best suited for the conditions take over. With reasonable care, you get a lush carpet of green over your entire lawn, all season long, year after year.

This blend of grasses grows a lawn so thick it crowds out weeds

True, most seeds give you a good looking lawn in a hurry. But they gradually thin out after the first season, leaving the lawn a perfect target for weeds. Golf Brand Lawn Seed, on the other hand, blends 11 perennial long-lasting grasses for an ideal combination: early lush growth plus ever-increasing turf thickness. You get a dense tightly-knit turf that grows constantly thicker, resists weed invasion for years and years.

Don't plant lawn seed until you read this important fact

Let's be realistic—it takes work to build or repair a lawn. It requires spading, raking, fertilizing, seeding, rolling, watering. Work that must be done no matter what kind of seed you plant. So doesn't it make sense to plant the very best seed money can buy? The kind that gives you a permanent lawn . . . a lawn that grows thicker, more luxuriant, more beautiful as time goes on. Golf Brand is blended to give you just that kind of lawn. And to make doubly sure that these fine selected seeds sprout into sturdy grass, Golf Brand is treated with Du Pont Arasan that protects against most grass-killing diseases. Plant this finer seed now.

Are You Baffled by Big Board? Stock Market 'Code' Deciphered

Now that stocks are being curities, inactive securities and suddenly sold on the installment plan, those not listed on exchange.

changes are you may be taking a new interest in the financial news.

The Big Board can baffle you if you're a lamb.

So here's an introduction to some of the technical terms you may encounter following the ups and downs of your favorite stock.

The Big Board, of course, is the New York stock exchange. A lamb? That's an inexperienced speculator. A regular customer is known as an operator.

200'S WHO

The rest of the zoo includes bulls, bears, cats and dogs. Bulls are traders who have bought securities in anticipation of a rise. They are prospective sellers. Bears are traders who hope to sell short in anticipation of a decline.

Short sales are those of securities not owned by the trader, or who plans to buy them later at a lower price. Cats and dogs are securities of doubtful value. They cannot be used as collateral for a loan and are considered a lamb.

Digested places with investors who may be expected to hold them for a long period of time.

The phrase "over the counter" refers to a market, not an organized exchange, for large blocks of high-grade listed securities to push down the price.

POOL AND PLUNGES

In the stock market you don't have to be in a pool to take a plunge.

A pool is a combination which is organized to exploit the market in an active stock.

A plunge, however, refers to reckless speculation on a large scale.

Watered stock, by the way, is that issued to insiders for a small consideration and without a fair increase in the assets of the corporation. Naturally, this reduces the value behind each share held by investors.

Other market terms: Two-Dollar Stock—A member of the New York Stock Exchange who does not conduct business on his own account, but rather handles business for other members at a certain charge.

Air Pocket—Denotes abrupt change in price. During a weakness during which time the security sinks in value without encountering a nearby bid.

Arbitrage—Buying in one market and selling in another to take advantage of a temporary disparity in price.

Assented Securities—Securities which have been pledged by their owners in favor of some change, such as a reorganization, in which the status of the securities will be altered.

Bulge—Small and quick advance in prices.

Bonus Stock—That issued to purchasers when new venture is started. It ordinarily consists of common shares given to purchaser of preferred stock.

Common Stock—The junior security of a corporation. It receives no protection in event of failure of the firm until all previous obligations have been paid off. It represents ownership of an equity in a business after all other claims have been satisfied.

Preferred Stock—This stock has prior claim to earnings and dividends over common stock, yet is secondary to bonds.

Day Order—Issued in denominations of $50 or $100 to attract investors of small means.

Scaling—Trading in securities by placing orders at regular price intervals instead of placing entire order all at one time.

BIGGEST passenger elevators in these parts, maybe the biggest in the west, are the two giant conveyances which can lift from 75 to 80 people each from one floor to another at the Municipal Auditorium.

An elevator man tells this dept. that the lifts at Boulder Dam are the only ones he knows of that approach the L.E. elevators in size, but that they're considerably smaller.

The auditorium cages are 17 ft. 7 in., by 7 ft. 11 in. in floor dimensions, and they're 22 feet high. They can put about 4000 persons on the upper level in less than an hour. A ton-and-a-half truck or a passenger car fits nicely into one of them.

When circuses are held in the auditorium, the elephants are taken up on the elevators. Two elephants are always put in one elevator. An elephant, in one of the big cages alone, gets terrified and tries to break out. Seeing another in the same fix is evidently reassuring.

THEY tell about a little Long Beach girl, the daughter of a doctor, who happened to answer the telephone the other eve.

A patient was on the line, wanting to talk to the doc. He wasn't around, and the tiny daughter offered to take the message.

The patient outlined her aches and pains.

"Tell you what," said the doc, who had often overheard her father's telephone conversations, "take two aspirin and call the office for an appointment tomorrow morning."

THIS dept. has invited suggested names for the huge, oval building to be built on a site adjoining the Municipal Auditorium, which under the unimaginative cognomen of "Auditorium Annex" has been approved by Long Beach voters.

Several good suggestions have come along and today we have quite a list from Ralph Breshers, director of sales at the Wilton Hotel, who agrees that something more descriptive and glamorous is needed.

Here is Bro. Breshers' list: Pacific Palace, Palace of the Pacific, the Pacificade, Seaview Arena, Strandorarena, Seaview Marina, Universe Garden, Auditorium, Palace Nationale, Palace Universale, Surf Palace, Palace de Universale, Palace of the Universe, Universe Palace.

Percy Lee Stedley suggests Beacharena and Audarena. Robert Foster likes Amphidrome—a combination of amphitheater and hippodrome. A one-time executive in the show business in N. Y., he agrees a good name for such a facility is of "inestimable value."

Any other suggested names?

IF YOU'RE fed up with the word "scramble" for the new traffic system at certain downtown intersections, maybe you'd like the term invented by Johnny Wiedrick, 7.

Johnny is quite adept at scrambling the English language. After a downtown visit on which he found the diagonal crossing at scramble corners a great thrill, he asked mom to take him down there again so he could "go corn caddy."

RECENTLY the Associated Press put on its national picture wires a photo of a 2-year-old boy making snowballs in front of a sign reading: "Los Angeles County Line."

The picture, of course, made the front pages in Florida. Avery Reeves of Bellflower got a copy of Page 1 of the Daytona Beach Morning Journal from a friend back there who invited him to come to Florida and quit shoveling snow.

Caption on the picture gave the impression that if you lived anywhere in California, you probably had to dig out of the drifts. It just happened to be featured beside a picture showing the cast of the show "Oklahoma" in beach attire cavorting on the sunshine-flooded Florida sands.

Just to add to the confusion among Daytona Beach newspaper readers, Reeves can send his Florida friend this true account of a newcomer from Iowa who visited Long Beach's Lincoln Park Friday. After a few minutes he removed his coat and growled:

"This is too hot for me. I'm going back to Iowa."

Independent-Press-Telegram

LONG BEACH 12, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1954

Sports ... Pages 3-7 ★ Business and Real Estate News ... Pages 8-11

AT USC, Miss Carmen Perez, California-born, Long Beach-reared, was an honor student. She was secretary of the senior class, president of Tri-Delts Sorority, member of Amazons, vice president of Spurs. At Cleveland Elementary School her kindergartners find their teacher smartly but simply dressed, calm, poised, well-modulated in voice. As a Long Beach teacher she is paid well above the national average, enjoys social freedoms that would have stunned, if not horrified Dad's teacher, earnest, starchy Miss Priddy.

Majorettes Make Good Models, Twirlers and Coaches Contend

"Majorettes have atrocious posture," Pat Blakeley said that in last Sunday's Independent-Press-Telegram—and started a war.

Southland defenders of the majorette stance have strutted out in battle array. They have flung down the baton in challenge to the pretty charm school instructor who dared to declare:

"A strutting majorette thrusts her chest out, invariably carries one shoulder higher than the other on parade, walks stiff-necked . . . over-emphasizes the bust . . . stealing her fanny out."

Miss Blakeley concluded it was much easier to train for modeling—an untrained girl than one "schooled in the rigid overemphasis of the marching strut."

That did it!

SO FAR PROTESTS have rolled in from twirlers, twirler teachers, twirler parents and twirler converters (Twirler converters convert twirlers into models.)

Triumphant as both model and majorette is Jo Ann Burdick of Anaheim, who led the 1953 Tournament of Roses march as a baton-twirler and teaches twirling in colleges from here to Texas.

"I have been in the employ of Bill Gordon, vice president of Universal-International Pictures, modeled for KTLA and appeared with Kathryn Grayson at the Ambassador," Jo Ann writes.

"For a majorette to have a graceful strut she must be relaxed and co-ordinated at all times. I would like to see Miss Blakeley arch her back and see what happens to the anatomy. The first thing she would notice is the hips automatically tuck themselves in."

Only the majorette who struts improperly sticks her fanny out."

Said Ted Otis, Southland specialist in twirl instruction: "We have no quarrel with Miss Blakeley in regard to undisciplined majorettes. However, it is the untrained majorette who exaggerates awkwardly."

"Our aim is good posture and an erect stance."

Otis said his conception of the strut is "not an exaggeration, but a graceful, erect posture that you would like to see anywhere—in a parade, in a ballroom or at tea."

Majoretting, he declared, develops "rhythm, poise and confidence."

MAJORETTES not only make good models, Otis argued, but also have a head start for success in the entertainment world.

Sonic Rogers, 1953 Miss Majorette of America, is a top-flight model on the side, the twirling coach pointed out.

Among lovely ladies who have flipped a baton or two en route to national fame he listed Barbara Britton, Elise Knox, now Mrs. Tom Harmon, and Betty Atkinson, who did a baton twirling act on ice and ended up marrying Sonja Henie's former skating partner, Charles Hahn.

During her Poly High career Betty was proclaimed the first drum majorette in Southern California. She graduated to fame with Fred Waring and became a national figure modeling for posters as the Chesterfield Girl.

"I have received no complaints," Otis stated firmly, "about exaggeration in my majorettes, whether of the bust-line or the derrière."

The record shows plenty of cases of majorettes succeeding as models, Ted concluded.

"Who can show me a girl trained only as a model who can prance gracefully as a majorette?"

MAJORETTES have terrific posture and co-ordination and a fine sense of rhythm," declared Jan Rineila, instructor at Lorraine Doyle School of Modeling.

"Most untrained girls come to us with shoulders slumping from carrying schoolbooks," she said. "Majorettes have straight shoulders—after all, you use both hands in baton twirling. They also have smooth footwork and graceful, erect walk. As modeling prospects, they have nimble poise. Besides, they're usually very pretty."

Two of Miss Rineila's majorette-models are featured Saturdays on the Tele-Teens program—Dorene Brewster, 16, and Donna Walker, 12.

THE OUTRAGE of majorette parents reacting to Miss Blakeley's attack was summed up by Mrs. Dorothy Routh of 6120 Lemon Ave.

She said the Blakeley complaint was "an insult to the Twirlerette World."

"As president of the TPA—Twirlerettes Parents Assn.—I feel I can speak for all mothers who have children taking baton lessons," she declared.

"My daughter, Lana, is now 8 years old and one of the top twirlers of her age group. She is also majorette mascot for the North Long Beach Lions Club All Girls Band."

"Twirling has helped her a great deal in poise and grace."

"After a twirling performance in North Hollywood, Lana was approached with an offer from a very prominent modeling school."

So, there, Miss Blakeley!

How Teacher's Changed Since Dad Was a Boy!

YOU WOULDN'T know her, Dad. Today's teacher dares to be well groomed. She styles her hair instead of piling it high and stringy as Miss Priddy did. Sometimes she goes dancing. Miss Teacher of 1954 has a lot more freedom than Miss Priddy could have dreamed. These photos show some of the changes.

FOR AN EVENING OUT, Carmen combs her hair into soft waves, applies a light curve of lipstick. Dad's teacher, Miss Priddy, could only bite her lips pink—any artificial color would have brought censure. The theory in Dad's day was that teachers should be heard, but not seen. All Miss Priddy needed was a firm grip for the knuckle-wrapping ruler.

DATE NIGHT brings a corsage and a smiling escort. Time was, and not too long ago, when teacher dated mainly at the faculty banquet, at the convention in State Center and stealthily in strange towns. It got so Miss Priddy didn't bother with dates.

Russia Was Abe Lincoln Target, Too

Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday comes next Friday, is usually thought of in terms of the Gettysburg Address, the War Between the States and the great problems at home.

Was he also conscious of problems abroad? Frances Henselman, assistant librarian, says "Yes!" She points out that Abraham Lincoln was highly cognizant of the troubles of Russia, Spain, Hungary and Greece.

Here are quotations from Lincoln's letters and speeches, in tones in the public library: "As a nation, we began by declaring that 'All men are created equal.' We now practically read it 'All men are created equal except Negroes.' When the No-Nothings (political party) get control, it will read 'All men are created equal, except Negroes and foreigners and Catholics.' When it comes to this, I shall prefer emigrating to some country where they make no pretense of loving liberty—to Russia, for instance, where despotism can be taken pure, and without the base alloy of hypocrisy."

—Letter to Joshua Speed, Aug. 21, 1855.

"Henry Clay's efforts in behalf of southern Americans and afterward in behalf of the Greeks in the times of their respective struggles for civil liberty are among the finest on record, upon the noblest of all themes."

—Speech in Springfield July 16, 1852.

"That the sympathies of this country and the benefits of its position should be exerted in favor of the people of every nation struggling to be free; and while we meet to do honor to Hungary, we should not fail to pour out the tribute of our praise and approbation to the patriotic efforts of the Irish, the Germans and the French who have unsuccessfully fought to establish in their several governments the supremacy of the people."

—Resolution for Hungarian freedom, Jan. 8, 1850.

"Spain has one of the worst governments in the world."

—Speech in Springfield Aug. 25, 1852.

TODAY'S TEACHER can dance . . . in most communities. She can also play slightly undignified games at parties, swim or sun in reasonably brief togs. Smoking in teachers' restroom is now permitted at many schools. (When Dad was in college, even the coeds retreated to the fire escape to light their fags.)

SOMETIMES TEACHER even gets married! The man Carmen chose to help guard the coffee for life was Paul Parrish, who met her in college and now heads the public relations department of Long Beach Chamber of Commerce. These days at the P-TA meetings you can't always tell whether teacher is there as a teacher or a parent!

Love and the Law Topic Set for CC Program

"Love and the Law" will be the first lecture topic in a new series of adult law forum lectures to be presented by Mrs. Elizabeth Cochran, Long Beach attorney, beginning Tuesday in Room 502 of the City College art building, Lakewood campus, at 7:30 p. m.

Three additional lectures, all open to the public without charge, will be presented on successive Tuesday evenings under the general title "California Law and the Workingman's Family." The new series, according to forum director Fred A. Dow, is the first of its kind ever offered.

In Tuesday's lecture Mrs. Cochran will discuss the legal, financial and human aspects of divorce, romantic entanglements, adoptions, obligations of parents to children and other problems in domestic relations.

Other lectures in the series will be "The Law and Installment Buying" (Feb. 16), "Property Law" (Feb. 23) and "After You've Gone" (March 2). A special discussion of the California workmen's compensation laws will be part of the Feb. 16 lecture.

Mrs. Cochran, who has long been concerned with the serious domestic problems and financial

Drama Critic Will Give Talk

Mooring, formerly editor of a film magazine in London, came to the United States as a technical adviser on the film, "Cavalcade."

NO COFFEE BILL

Hosmer's Proposal Runs Into Slow Going

WASHINGTON—Rep. Craig Hosmer's "let's-NOT-h-a-v-e-another-cup-of-coffee" bill has run into slow going in the House administration committee.

The Long Beach Republican reported Saturday that Committee Chairman Karl M. LeCompte (R-Iowa) has promised "early hearings"—without a definite date—on Hosmer's bill to ban sale of coffee three days a week in House restaurants, coffee shops and snack bars.

Dentists Back Fluoride Plan

Dr. Lawrence Cowan of those recommended for dental Compton, president of Third-District Dental Society, announced Saturday that the society had joined state and national dental associations in recommending a stand in favor of fluoridation of water supplies.

"The evidence that fluoridation reduces tooth decay up to 65 per cent in children under age 12," Dr. Cowan stated, "has been proven."

"For generations over three million persons in the United States and Canada have been living in areas where drinking water is naturally fluoridated in as high or higher amounts than S. Ralls, program chairman."

"The lecture will aid local dentists in making better artificial teeth and will help improve treatment of diseases of the gum," declared Dr. Morgan S. Ralls, program chairman.

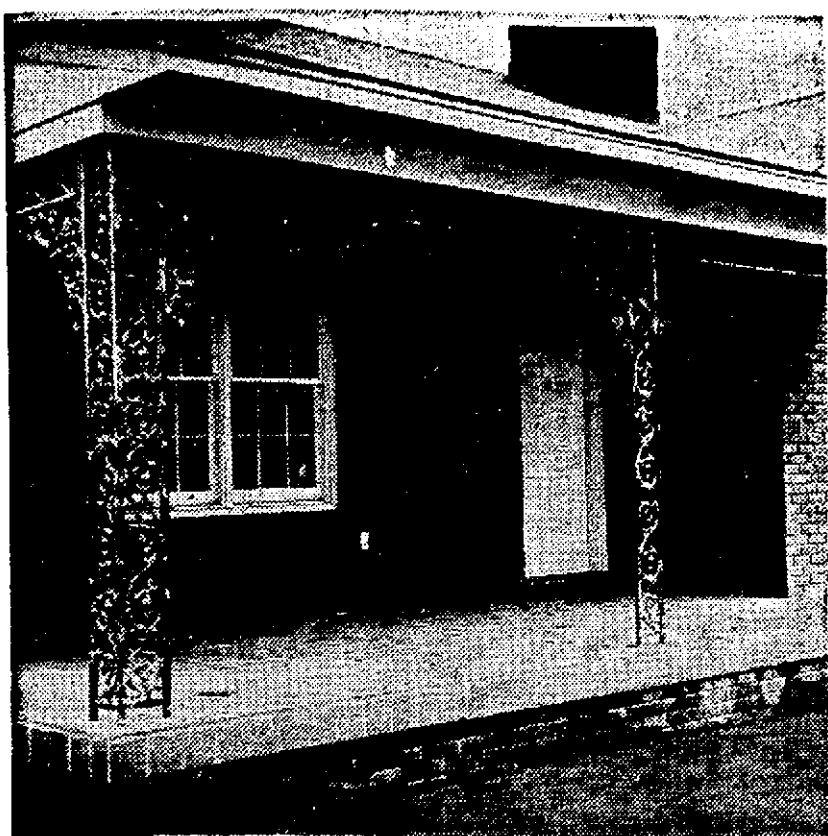

Hosmer would have the nation

the matter could be taken up but he gave no indication that it might really be soon."

Hosmer's measure would prohibit sale of coffee in House-run eating places three days a week until the average retail price of the brew nationally drops to 90 cents a pound or lower. The Long Beach Congressman called on the American housewife to back up Congress in this coffee boycott to drive the price down.

The permanence of ornamental iron is illustrated in the Pont-and woodwork has been replaced, the original ornamental iron still is an integral part of the building.

THE MAN WHO NEVER WAS, by Ewen Montagu (Lippincott, $2.75).

Operation Mincemeat was one of the best-kept secrets of World War II, and only now does it come forth out of its grim nomenclature and testify to one of the greatest hoaxes ever perpetrated upon an enemy nation. This is the fantastic tale of how a dead man served to distract the German High Command from a defense of Sicily, when the Allies were poised in North Africa for the thrust into the underbelly of Europe.

It took careful planning and high luck to get the dead "Major Martin" into the hands of the Spanish, and thus subject to the curiosity of German agents. The papers the dead man carried had been planted and prayed over in the hope they would be accepted as genuine. They were, and this is the story of how it was done and what came of it.

YOUR CALIFORNIA GOVERNMENTS IN ACTION, by Winston W. Crouch and John C. Bollens (University of California Press, $2.75).

Every Californian seriously interested in his state's welfare should have a growing interest in its governmental functions, and there is no finer book that we know of from which to learn the rudiments than this one. From the making of California's constitution it tells the progressive story of organization of our state, county and city governments, and points up how each is aimed to operate for the good of the majority. To read it carefully is to have a basic knowledge of California government as it develops from your state capitol, the chambers of the County Board of Supervisors, and the City Hall.

EPISODE, by Peter W. Denzer (Dutton, $3.50).

The lad who went into the

Illustration by John O'Hara Cosgrave from "God and My Country."

LEM SIDDONS, central character in MacKinlay Kantor's newest novel, "God and My Country" (World, $2), was an ordinary sort of man who worked with Boy Scouts for 40 years. That's pretty much what the story is and in other hands than Kantor's it would be pretty slight. But this is a most compelling and moving tale of good people and ordinary situations. It will leave the reader slowly, and he will remember it for a long time.

service hospital for a physical ailment was surprised when a dream world began to surround him. And the disorder sent him through the neuropsychiatric ward and into the hands of the most brutal attendants. From there he goes into a private sanatorium, where he planned escape to his girl, Julie. It is all grim and pretty terrible, but so is madness.

English is a rich and lively language, filled with idiomatic expressions. Many of these expressions have lost their original meaning and now are alliterative. As we use them daily in our conversation and our writing, it is informative and entertaining to know where they came from. "Why We Say . . ." gives the answers to just why we say what we do. The book is filled with drawings and engagingly written material.

THE RIBALD READER, ed. by A. M. Krich (Dell, $5.00).

They say that in ribaldry anything goes, and this is demonstrated in this thick anthology. With wit aimed at those aspects of love and sex that have most amused men and women for centuries, contributions range from Ovid's "Art of Love" to Mark Twain's "Eve's Diary," with tales by Boccaccio, Villon, Cervantes, Voltaire and many others thrown in for a veritable ribald riot.

TO MY LOVE, by Bertin Jones ($2).

Two previous books, "More of Life's Beauty" and "California Is Calling," established Mr. Jones as a poet of rank in the Golden State. Now comes his third book, containing two score reflective or sentimental poems which bring a sweet nostalgia of romantic days. Mr. Jones rhymes beautifully.

POCKET-SIZED BOOKS of the week: "The Sea Around Us," by Rachel Carson (Mentor, $3.50), spectacular best-selling story of magic and mystery of the deep; "Star Science Fiction Stories No. 2" (Ballentine, $3.50), containing 14 stories never before published; "Basic Selections From Emerson" (Mentor, $3.50); "Riders to the Stars," original science fiction story by Curt Siodmak that was made into a movie (Ballentine, $3.50); "Six Great Short Novels of Science Fiction," by six great storytellers, an original volume (Dell, $3.50).

THE SOUND OF THE TRUMPET, by Leicester Hemingway (Holt, $3.50).

This is the novelized account of a film unit that struck the Normandy beaches following the assault waves of Allied forces, and of its progress toward final documenting of the victory deep in Germany. The novel seems to lack an overall theme that might have been achieved with a bit more care. As it is the story is made up of a number of unrelated incidents, most of them bloody beyond need. But Leicester, whose big brother also writes, must be credited with an Ernest effort in his first novel.—G. L.

The World of Stamps

By Harry Rickard

Collectors now have an opportunity to look for the newest U. S. rarity.

It seems that some time last summer, someone in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, in error, used a quantity of the watermarked paper set aside for revenue stamps to print some of the $1 Wilson stamps.

Get out your watermark detector and see if you have one of these desirable specimens showing a watermark. The normal copies have no watermark.

Flower stamp collectors will like the beautiful new set from San Marino, with flowers in color. Each of the values has a different flower portrayed.

The already-issued Royal Visit stamps of Fiji, Bermuda, New Zealand and Jamaica, and also the Bermuda Conference set of two, are now obsolete and rising in value. Be sure to get the coming Royal Visit stamps as issued.

Supplement time is here. You will find most all the new albums supplements on your dealer's shelf for the 1953 stamps. The Scott line will appear in the spring.

One in Each 10 U.S. Men Does Not Possess a Suit

NEW YORK (UPI). One of every 10 American men doesn't own a suit of clothes, it was reported today.

Officials of the clothing industry said 20 per cent of the wage earners who do own a suit have had a new one in more than five years.

Results of a survey made public by the Men's Wear Industry Council showed purchases in the United States add up to an average of a half a suit per man per year. Eighteen per cent of the men who own half the suits sold over a five-year period.

Twenty-two per cent of the laborers and men who work in uniforms said they stuck to sportswear: said the job.

Max Schmitt, president of the Wool Bureau and an official of the council, said the clothing industry has been inspired by the figures to start what he regards as a most modest campaign. He wants to persuade every wife to let her husband have at least one suit of clothes, with or without a vest and two pairs of pants.

It's a ticklish business, too, Schmitt admitted. Ways have to be found to increase male clothing purchases without trimming the feminine share of the budget. That may not be too difficult, he said, now that so many homes are equipped with television sets, mixers, beaters, vacuum cleaners, dish washers, air conditioners and other gadgets dear to a woman's heart.

"It is no new thing to say that under our social setup, many women last on the shopping list."

Determine Captures San Felipe Handicap

SANTA ANITA—Mix a little Crevolin luck, Molter mastery, add a dash of Ray York, and you have a combination hard to beat in this horse racing business.

This was proven again Saturday very convincingly when Andy Crevolin's Determine, saddled by Willie Molter and ridden by the one-time world traveler, joined forces to take down the $29,350 San Felipe Handicap under ideal conditions before 48,000 fans.

Despite the fact that Determine's victory margin was a comfortable length and a half over Rejected, and a half over High Scud, and Mr. Mustard, who dead-heated for the place, it took a bit of doing on York's part to get the job done as he was hemmed in on the rail to the final bend, and there was always a big question as to whether he would be able to get through.

However, Master York was equal to the situation through-out, and with the coolness of an Arcaro, one of the jockeys with whom he was matching wits in the fray, he eased his mount between horses to obtain running room. Once he found the path clear, he went to work with a vengeance, and by mid-stretch he had collared his rivals, ran them into the ground, and then he eased his mount back to the finish line, a belated but not a futile stretch bid from James Session, the fourth horse, almost. Determine, a son of Alibhai-Koubi, is another of Crevolin's spectacular Keeneland yearling purchases, and although he was knocked down to the Alhambra automobile dealer for what now is a scant $12,000, the colt was one of his more expensive purchases at the Kentucky venue where he has been more or less a regular for the past six years.

When Crevolin first went back to the Kentucky sales, head-shaking veterans among the horse set regarded him as a lamb going to slaughter, as their considered opinion held that Andy would be little more than fair game to the Kentucky hard-boots whose hospitable smooth sales methods rate them among the best merchandisers in the country.

He has come up with such fine stakes winners as Valquest, Be Fleet, Imbros, Decagat, Schatzl

SURVEY SHOWS ELIGIBILITY VARIATIONS

NEW YORK—(UP). Where can a college athlete start playing varsity sports when he's a freshman and still be playing when he's a graduate student? Why, the Southeastern Conference.

Where can he play as a freshman only if his school has a male enrollment of less than 750 and if it supports teams in eight different sports? The Eastern College Athletic Conference.

Where can he be declared permanently ineligible if his coach has bought him a dinner in the good restaurant across town instead of the hash house by the campus? The Pacific Coast Conference.

Such major variations in eligibility rules were brought to light in an Associated Press survey stemming from the recent mid-fur over the University of Kentucky basketball team.

Kentucky, apparently, just discovered that its post-graduate stars, still eligible under Southeastern Conference rules, wouldn't be allowed to play in the NCAA tournament. And a lot of people just discovered that the SEC allowed grad students to play.

The NCAA, like virtually every major conference, limits varsity competition to three seasons with a five-year span. And, like most of them, it rules out anyone who has completed his undergraduate work and is eligible for a college degree.

The South's three major conferences—the Southeastern, Atlantic Coast and Southern—don't have that last stipulation. If a boy still is in college it's okay with them as long as he hasn't used up his three years of eligibility. Of these three, only the Southeastern still permits freshmen to play on varsity teams, but that goes out Sept. 1. Boys now in school who competed as freshmen still will be able to play for the fourth season.

Because the 100-college ECAC includes a lot of very small schools, it has a special rule that permits freshmen to play for colleges whose male enrollment is less than 500 and for colleges under 750 if they support at least two fall, three winter and three spring sports.

The ECAC also includes the influential Ivy group, which does not allow freshmen to play and counts any year of scholastic ineligibility against the three years of competition allowed.

The border conference permits the use of freshmen and a couple of others have minor exceptions to the general rule. The rules on recruiting and financial aid to athletes show the widest variations and usually brings the severest penalties. Hence the matter of the dinner mentioned previously.

A customary Pacific Coast Conference penalty for a recruiting violation is to make the school and declare the athlete ineligible to compete for the offending institution. And it has ruled that "entertainment" of a prospect—like a dinner—must take place on or adjacent to the campus.

Barthel Takes Mile in Swift 4:07.5

Mal Scores Double; Richards Triumphs

NEW YORK—(UP). Joseph Barthel, Luxembourg's Olympic 1500-meter champion, scored his third straight American triumph in the Millrose Games Saturday night when he won the Wanamaker Mile off by himself in 4:07.5.

Barthel took the lead three laps from home and won by 25 yards over Fred Wilt of the New York A. C., the American champion, with Leonard Truex of Columbus, O., the Big Ten indoor champion, third.

It was Barthel's best clocking after 4:10.2 and 4:07.7 victories. Barthel was off last in the six-man mile field as it broke from the starting line but quickly moved into second place behind Lawton Lamb of the University of Chicago. Lamb set the pace with a 61.4 quarter and a 2:04.1 half. He maintained the lead through seven of the 11 laps when Truex jumped on top for one lap. Then Barthel made his move and it was no contest.

On one circuit, he opened a 10-yard gap, on the semi-final lap he made it 15 and at the end he was a good 25 yards in front of Wilt.

Wilt was clocked in 4:10.6, Truex in 4:12.8 and fourth-placed Gordon McKenzie of the New York Pioneer Club in 4:12.9. For 1500 meters, Barthel's time was 3:42.

EIGHT IN ROW

With world record-holder Cornelius Warmerdam watching, Rev. Bob Richards of Long Beach won the pole vault for the eighth straight year but failed to reach 15 feet. He scored his victory at 14 feet, eight inches, while there was a three-way tie for second among Don Laz, Fred Barnes of Fresno State and Jerry Welbourn of Ohio State.

Sharing honors with Barthel and Richards was marvelous Mal Whitfield, who won the 880-yard run in 1:54.2, and then came back to win the 600-yard dash in 1:10.1.

Whitfield won the 880 easily by a five-yard margin over Carl Joyce of the Quantico Marines, with Roscoe Browne of the New York Pioneer Club a close third.

Arthur Bragg captured the 60-yard dash in 6.2 seconds by nosing out Ed Waters, Morgan State sophomore, Andy Stanfield was third.

Harrison Dillard of Cleveland scored his 37th straight hurdles triumph when he won the 60-yard high hurdles for the eighth straight year in 7.2 seconds, equalling his own meet record. Midshipman Donald McAuliffe was second with Henry Johnson of the Panthers third.

A coach for the East team will be named next week.

Colts Sign First Choice

BALTIMORE—(UP). The Baltimore Colts Saturday announced the signing of their top college football draft choice—Baylor University Quarterback Francis (Cotton) Davidson—to a 1954 contract.

The Colts said Coach Weeb Ewbank flew to the campus at Waco, Texas, this week to get Davidson's signature on a National Football League contract, failed to reach 15 feet. He scored his victory at 14 feet, eight inches, while there was a three-way tie for second among Don Laz, Fred Barnes of Fresno State and Jerry Welbourn of Ohio State.

Sharing honors with Barthel and Richards was marvelous Mal Whitfield, who won the 880-yard run in 1:54.2, and then came back to win the 600-yard dash in 1:10.1.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Lindborg, Ex-Compton to LSU Coach

Former Compton High football star, while alternating in the outfield, and baseball star Leonard Lindborg has been signed to play with the Hollywood Stars, President Robert H. Cobb announced Saturday.

The 6-2, 185-pound youth is undecided on which position to play but will work out at both when he reports for spring training with the Stars Mar. 8 at Anaheim.

The top major league news Saturday had the St. Louis Cardinals ready to sit down and talk terms with their two halving stars, Second Baseman Red Schoendienst and Pitcher Harvey Haddix, and New York Yankee ace Mickey Mantle leaving a Springfield, Mo., hospital after a second operation on the knee.

Schoendienst, who received about $35,000 last year, reportedly is seeking about $50,000 to team up with Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter again this year as the club's "old reliables." Haddix received about $7500 last season and reportedly has asked double the figure.

The pair, the Redbirds' only major holdouts, will have their say this week in meetings with Gen. Mgr. Dick Meyer.

Mantle departed from Burge Hospital for his home in Commerce, Okla., on the crutches he will use for the next two weeks. Although the surgery was reported successful, the Yankees are expected to keep the 22-year-old switch hitter under wraps through most of spring training.

On the contract signing front, the Red Sox snagged a big pair in veteran Relief Such stars as Eddie Mathews, home-run slugger of the Braves, Bob Lemon, a local boy who has become a Cleveland Indian pitching great, Gus Zernial, Irv Noren, Johnny Lindell and Freddy Baczewski will be doing their best for major league managers Chuck Dressen and Fred Haney and the Southern California Baseball Association which will benefit from the affair.

Regular Coast League prices will prevail.

DISTANCE ACE

Barnes to Enter Ministry

By JOHNNY DIXON

Johnny Barnes, greatest distance runner in Long Beach history, has given up Officer Candidate School at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio and will prepare himself for the Presbyterian ministry.

Decision by the former Wilson High track and field captain was not a sudden one, for he long has been interested in Christian work and even in high school considered a possible future with the church.

Barnes will be transferred to an instructor's school at Chanute Air Force Base, near Chicago, within the next few days. He will serve out his final year in the Air Force as an enlisted man and will enter the San Francisco Theological Seminary in the spring of 1955. He will remain there for about two years.

In a letter to his parents, Charley and Mary Barnes of Long Beach, John wrote: "I want to serve God through the church. It seems odd that He should choose me to enter the ministry. I'm kind of overawed and a little afraid. I hope I'm capable of carrying God's word to others."

John, Air Force chaplain, Capt. Vernon J. Meordink, has been an important influence in his life. In a letter to John's father, the chaplain wrote: "Sir, you may be assured that I make no reservations in believing that John has experienced a truly divine calling to the Christian ministry. Nearly every day he comes into the office for a brief discussion and question-answer period. In my humble estimation John has found himself and in turn has found himself by Christ."

Alhambra Rider Killed

TUCSON, Ariz.—(UP). Jockey Curtis Day, 28, Alhambra, Calif., died here Saturday night three hours after he was injured in a fall during the running of the ninth race at Rillito Park.

Jockey Day and his mount, Don's Girl, was in fourth place in a field of seven horses. As the horse rounded the far turn, Day's mount appeared to stumble and the 114-pound rider was pitched to the ground. As he hit the ground, Day—appearing stunned—tried to lift himself off the track and to safety but riders on the last two horses in the field were unable to miss him as they came out of the turn.

Day was rushed to a local hospital where he died without regaining consciousness. Death was attributed to a fractured skull and chest injuries.

Jackson New Heavy 'Find'

NEW YORK—(NEA). "It is a pleasure," Morris Binstein, ob-served, "to leave the ring when you find methods and a fighting style born in Georgia."

A fight starts and know that you're going to have to strain yourself pickin' your guy up off the floor."

Whitey Binstein is one of the fight game's oldest trainers and by his own modest admission has handled just about every good fighter since Napoleon.

As he was talking about the effort it takes for his thin frame to derriek a dead-as-a-nackerel pug from the canvas, Whitey was giving a soothing massage to tall Tommy Jackson, the latest addition to the thin line of questionable stars who constitute the heavyweight division's higher echelon.

"Nobody's going to put this guy on the floor, not never," Binstein said. "This guy don't know exactly what he's doin' in the ring, but we don't care. You can't hurt him with a bat."

Hurricane Tommy, as they call him, is a lanky 22-year-old 194-pounder who has won 16 of 17 bouts and in his first nationally televised engagement joined the ranks of those who have knocked out Rex Layne, doing it in six rounds at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena.

Jackson is an "out" choice to go right to the top of the heavy-weights. "Nopes," Tommy replied. "Was born in Georgia."

Franksters in the gym constantly bark, "Telephone for Tommy Jackson," and it sets the lanky youth to trying to hide in dressing rooms.

"The two first telephones," Binstein says. "He's never been in one, wants no part of it."

Told of an impending duel with hard-punching Clarence Henry, Jackson observed, "Be a miracle if both of us comes out in one piece."

In a fierce battle with Joe Lindsey, powerful hitting light-heavy, Jackson appeared through mid-way in the fifth round. His left arm dangled at his side and he clutched the top rope with his right hand. Lindsey blasted away with both hands at his chin for 20 seconds.

"Ah was jus' takin' a rest, lettin' him punch hisself out," Jackson said in the dressing room afterwards.

"The two gotta correct... I eat meat—steak is bad for you. Had a steak once and an hose the 'cause of it. Gimme veg-ta-can take," concludes Whitey Binstein. "He'll fight Marciano some day soon."

When Manager Lippy Breitbart sat down with him to fill out a boxing license form, he asked that.

RED SCHOENDIENST Seeks $50,000 Contract

Platter Plutocrat

By Elaine Hauck

AT PRESENT, perhaps, the most successful executive in the popular record field is RCA-Victor's Joe Carlton. As manager of RCA's pop division, he's just finished a terrific year. He had much to do with Perry Como's comeback, Eddie Fisher's surge, Eartha Kitt's getaway and the Ames Brothers' hits. He seems to have the golden touch.

So his thoughts on the record business carry weight. Here are a few assorted Carlton thoughts:

"There's a faster turnover in record stars today. That's because of the discovery complex — every disc jockey thinks he's Christopher Columbus. He wants to claim he's discovered a new star. So he plugs newcomers' records much more than the records of established stars.

"We get maybe 600 applications a week from would-be singers. I look for three things in every applicant — a distinctive sound, good experience and managing, and appearance, which is a must because record stars have to appear on TV these days.

"For some reason, hit records last longer today than a few years ago. Look at 'You, You, You' and 'Vaya Con Dios.' They were up on top for months. It's harder for a record to get to the top now, and it's also harder for it to be dislodged once it's there.

"There won't be any great reduction in the price of records. It costs less for a manufacturer to make a record now — it's down about 6 cents — but the other costs keep going up. Artists' fees, union fees, the actual cost of a recording session — they keep going up."

That, briefly, is Carlton. He is a big, vibrant personality, who loves and lives his job. His description of his work: "It's fracturous, but delightful."

ELAINE ELECTS: There's wonderful listening in "The Merry Widow," Elizabeth Schwarzkops on Angel lp, with music by Franz Lehar. Or, if it's jazz you prefer, Norman Granz' Clef label has issued two more "Jam

TOP TEN TUNES: Eddie Fisher's "Oh Mein Papa" is still top disc on your local hit parade; (2) "Heart of My Heart," Four Aces; (3) "Changing Partners," Patti Page; (4) "That's Amore," Dean Martin; (5) "Stranger in Paradise," Tony Martin; (6) "Secret Love," Doris Day; (7) "Rags to Riches," Tony Bennett; (8) "Ebb Tide," Frank Chacksfield; (9) "Ricochet," Teresa Brewer, and (10) "Young in Heart," Frank Sinatra.

SOME of the most thrilling vocal performers ever heard are represented in this week's lps at Long Beach Public Library. Especially recommended are Banchieri, "Festino" (Primavera Singers and the Pro Musica Antiqua of New York); Honegger, "Jeanne d' Arc du Bucher" (speaking roles, chorus, and vocals, with Ormandy conducting); Janacek, "Slavonic Mass" (Moravian Mixed Chorus, with organ and orchestra); Stravinskii, "The Rake's Progress" (starring Gueden, Thebom, Conley, and Stravinskii conductor, and Wagner, "Tristan and Isolde" (starring Schock, Flagstad, Thebom, etc.)

Three Long Beach products are figuring in the baseball picture at UCLA as the Bruins go through rehearsals for their opening game Feb. 27 with the All-Star team at Joe E. Brown Field on the Westwood campus.

One, Bob Decker, has the makings of a regular. Another, Dave Levy, may see part-time service, while the third, Verlyn Crook, will serve as coach of the freshmen.

It's a little too early to say for certain, but Decker, who played at St. Anthony's High 1947-1950 and won All-Catholic League and All-CIF honors, appears destined for an outfield job, although he was a pitcher last season.

Art Reichle, beginning his 10th season at the Bruin diamond helm, is rebuilding from scratch, so to speak, and figures Decker will be more valuable to his club as an outfielder than as a pitcher.

Decker won five and lost four last season, earning his letter.

Only six letters are on the squad of 40 which opened drills a week ago. Of these, only two were regulars. So Reichle, at the moment in the Orient on a tour of military bases for instruction to soldier baseball teams, is starting from the ground up.

Chief reason for Decker's switch to the outfield is his great hitting ability and experience. Reichle lost all his flyballs via graduation last spring. Decker, after starring with the Bruins, played one year of ball at Long Beach City College.

Actually, Reichle figures Decker is a sure thing in the Bruin outfield, and on occasion can be called upon for timely relief pitching. He's more valuable in this dual capacity than he would be if confined to mound duty alone, Reichle reasons.

Levy, a guard on the Bruins' Rose Bowl football team, is having a fling as a senior on the Bruin diamond. He played some baseball at Poly High School in his prep days, but heretofore has confined his college athletic efforts to football.

Crook, one of the Bruins' star pitchers last season and a former LBCC flash, is running the varsity show in Reichle's absence, then will switch back to the rearlines on Reichle's return.

THE JAN. 27 "Oldtimers' Reunion" at the YMCA was so successful that it will become an annual late January event on the National YMCA Week calendar here.

The oldsters responded with such zest, according to Al Fish, physical director, that it will be continued in future years.

Maybe we can double the attendance next year," said Al. "We'll have more time in which to get ready."

Ex-Caddy Leads at Phoenix

PHOENIX — (AP). Young Bob Inman, ex-caddy from Tulsa, Okla., caught and passed three of the finest professionals in the business and took the lead at the end of 54 holes in the $10,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament Saturday with a total score of 200.

The 26-year-old player shot a five-under-par 66 and goes into the final round today 13 strokes under par.

Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., former National Open champion, took a 68 and ended up one stroke behind Inman.

Inman, who learned about golf as a caddy on this tournament course — the Phoenix Club with par 36-35-71 — started the third round one stroke behind Middlecoff; the Australian star, Peter Thompson, and Canada's Stan Leonard.

At the windup before the largest Saturday crowd in the tournament's history, the 136-pounder from Oklahoma was on top, Middlecoff second, Leonard was in fourth place and Thompson was tied for fifth.

Leonard shot a 70 and Thompson a 71.

John Weitzel of Hershey, Pa., another newcomer to gain prominence, fired a 67 for 202.

Thompson was tied with Ed Furgol of St. Louis, Mo., who shot a brilliant 65, and Jack Harden of El Paso, Tex., who had a 68.

Inman, playing in a threesome with Leonard and Weitzel, just ahead of Thompson, Middlecoff and Harden, played evenly. He bagged three birdies on the first nine and two more on the back side.

Lloyd Mangrum, seeking his third straight victory here, got back into the running with a 64, in what he called "the best round I've had all winter—make it a year."

Selvy Hits Record 40; Furman Bows

PHILADELPHIA — (AP). LaSalle rolled to its 10th straight victory Saturday night by defeating Furman, 100-83, and throwing a wet blanket on a 40-point performance by Frank Selvy which set a Convention Hall record for a visiting player.

LaSalle, with Tom Gola ex-collaring on rebounds, snapped Furman's seven-game winning streak in the nightcap of a double-header which attracted the season's high crowd of 9164.

The point production of school star Selvy came on 13 field goals in 26 shots from the floor, and 14 out of 17 free throw attempts.

All-American Gola, before fouling out late in the game, collected LaSalle's high of 25 points.

NO PENNANT GUARANTEE

Thomson, O'Connell 'May' Make Up 13-Game Deficit

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK — (AP). Before Milwaukee fans line up for World Series tickets, it might be wise to note that no pennant guarantees go with Bobby Thomson and Danny O'Connell.

Thomson and O'Connell may make up the 13-game gap that separated the Braves from Brooklyn in 1953, but the word still is "may" at this date.

Let's look at the 1953 averages to see just how much of a joint Thomson and O'Connell figure to give the Braves.

Thomson, of course, replaces Sid Gordon in the Braves' lineup, batting cleanup, Milwaukee will have more power than it did last year. With Thomson and Bill Bruton it will have blinding speed in two positions.

The power edge of Thomson over Gordon, however, can't be expected to make up all of the 13-game gap.

Here are the '53 figures:
Gordon 134 88 123 28 8 10 271
Thomson 134 88 123 28 8 10 271
O'Connell's power contribution as compared to Johnny Dittmer, the '53 second baseman, may be much less.

Here's the way they shaped up last year:
Gordon 134 88 123 28 8 10 271
Dittmer 134 88 123 28 8 10 271
As these tables illustrate, the Braves actually pick up only five home runs and 23 runs batted in by substituting Thomson and O'Connell for Gordon and Dittmer. Of course, they still have Dittmer too.

TRAILED IN BATTING
Although Milwaukee benefitted by fine pitching last summer and was not appreciably weakened by the trade of Johnny Antonelli and Don Liddle, they trailed the Dodgers by 19 points in the batting averages, by 52 home runs and 196 runs batted in, according to the team figures.

Here are the homer-RBI comparisons in the new lineups (eight regulars):
BROOKLYN MILWAUKEE
Hodges 31 122 16 Adeock 18 50
Gillon 13 65 29 O'Connell 11 32
Reese 13 61 19 Lopez 11 73
Clem 12 58 29 McMahon 11 32
Robinson 12 58 29 McMahon 11 32
Spiller 12 58 29 McMahon 11 32
Zamparelli 12 58 29 McMahon 11 32
Totals 178 744 Totals 142 413

Thomson's speed certainly should help the Braves' pitching staff for he will cover much more ground than Gordon, who often was lifted in the late innings for defensive purposes.

O'Connell also may be a better double-play man than Dittmer, although Dittmer helped make 55 last season.

NEWCOMBE BACK
The Milwaukee club certainly seems to have helped itself by its two major trades, strengthening itself where it needed help most.

Brooklyn, however, welcomes back Don Newcombe, who was a 20-game winner when he went away. Dodger pitching should be steadier with big Newk to help Carl Erskine share the heavy load.

Return of Chet Nichols and Phil Paine, plus the expected "arrival" of Gene Conley, a 23-9 performer at Toledo, fill up the roster left by Antonelli and Liddle. But they'll miss Max Surkont, especially in the first half of the season.

But the Phillies, too, will be stronger with Murry Dickson to team up with Robin Roberts and Curt Simmons. The Giants' pitching has to be better (how could it be much worse?). St. Louis has put up plenty of cash for new pitching from the Coast League, a new first baseman and a highly touted rookie shortstop.

Cincinnati hopes to pop up with some right-handed pitching to back up its new-found power.

With spring training still a few weeks off, it's too early to try to balance all the angles of the off-season swaps. But it's also a little early to talk World Series.

Pitcher Ellis Kinder and newly acquired outfielder Jackie Jensen, bringing to 23 the number of players in the Boston fold.

Both Kinder, who set an all-time American League record for five appearances in 1953, and Jensen, who should find the short Fenway Park left-field wall just what the doctor ordered, are being counted upon heavily by the Sox in their attempt to head off another Yankee title.

Another junior circuit pennant-contender, the Chicago White Sox signed a key player Saturday in Shortstop Chico Carrasquel. Carrasquel batted .279 in 1953 and was the top defensive shortstop in either league.

Other contract contented were Clyde McCullough of the Cubs; Lefty Burdette, Bill Bruton, Jim Fendley and George Metekovich of the Braves; Johnny Podres, Ron Negray, Glen Mickens, and Don Bessant of the Dodgers; and rookie Clyde Schell of the Phils.

The Portland Beavers announced the release of veteran Catcher Aaron Robinson and the signing of Jim Livesay, a backstop from the University of Oregon.

Another Compton product, Pitcher-Third Baseman Gale Dennis, signed a Boston Red Sox pact and was assigned to their Albany farm club in the Eastern League.

The Hutchinson Elks of the Western Assn. announced the acquisition of two more California products — First Baseman Cliff Crawford of San Leandro and Infielder Phil Belmonte of Hollywood.

UPSETS WILSON

Fistic Nod to Harper

SACRAMENTO — (AP). Maurice Harper of Oakland jabbed his way into the national welterweight picture Saturday night with a unanimous 10-round decision over favored Al (Sugar) Wilson of New York.

The 23-year-old West Coast Negro, appearing in Sacramento's first nationally-televised fight, out-jabbed and out-hit his more experienced Eastern opponent, who was warned repeatedly for low blows.

Referee Max Baer, former world heavyweight champion, called a three-minute rest in the fifth round and took one point from Wilson after Harper was hit on the right hip.

BOWLING ALONG

Don't forget to get your tickets to the Valentine Dance at Lakewood Country Club next Saturday. Ducats are available at all bowling establishments.

And speaking of Valentine, Virginia Bowl is offering a Valentine Mixed Doubles Sunday, a week from today. Shoot as often as you wish but change partners each time. $5.00 per couple.

GEORGE GOJUN really whipped out a good one in the 940 Thursday—686. Teammate Paul Morgan notched a 641 and still they only won one (1) game. Things are tough all over.

CHANGES AND MORE changes at Lakewood Bowl. The restaurant has switched pilots, which makes one wonder if they change tablecloths as often. Also, Short Yarbrough has given up bowling management for auto parts work. Guess more cars break down than sponsors or ideas for special events.

MORE THAN 7000 entry blanks to the state tournament to be held in Long Beach in May have been distributed. About 350 posters range up and down the state announcing the event.

The first complete entry in was from Pomona.

World Swim Mark Set

COLUMBUS, O. — (AP). Two American records and one world record mark were posted Saturday as Ohio State swimming set a new record in the 150-yard yard backstroke event with a time of 1:34.7 to top the old mark of 1:35 set by Ed May of Boston in 1928.

Ford Konno of Honolulu tied the pool record in the 200-yard freestyle in 2:06.6.

"The Man With the Healing Hands"

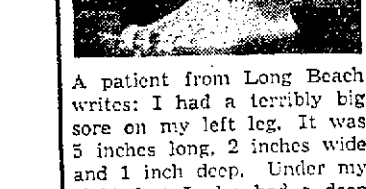

Some people are afflicted with open sores that will not heal. Here, Mr. Eriksson shows a sore that finally healed after being open 27 years. Note the long scar.

This patient has had this open sore on her foot for 19 years. She couldn't walk on it at all. Now it is completely healed by Mr. Eriksson's healing hands.

A patient from Long Beach writes: I had a terribly big sore on my left leg. It was 5 inches long, 2 inches wide and 1 inch deep. Under my right foot I also had a deep sore, which was so painful that I could hardly walk on it. After my first treatment from Mr. Eriksson I felt much better. After four months of treatments from Mr. Eriksson only, the sores were healed completely. Mr. Eriksson has pictures of my sore leg before and after healing. Many of my friends have watched my sores. They, too, can tell you about it. Mr. Eriksson uses nothing else but his own healing hands. I want to express my many thanks to Mr. Eriksson. I highly recommend Mr. Eriksson to any one suffering with this sickness or other kinds. Mrs. M. C. Brown, 4518 Josie Ave., Long Beach. Mr. Eriksson has several hundred letters of testimonials and pictures showing the patients' condition before and after complete healing. Hanks Enters Carrell Race

Sam Hanks, the money bags of the speedway fraternity and 1953 AAA national champion in the big cars, Saturday filed his entry in Promoter J. C. Agajanian's AAA national midweek race, scheduled for Saturday night.

Hanks, known as the Glendale Thin Man and one of the smartest money drivers in the go-fast game, will toe Slusher Cole's Little white beauty in Sunday's sprint.

Although Hanks didn't capture the big car crown until this year, he's a former national and coast champ of the doodlebugs.

And there's a common saying among the speed clan to the effect of "where Hank goes and that's where the money will be."

25th Jubilee Prelims Top Sail Agenda

By BOB RUSKAUFF

With the 25th annual Silver Jubilee edition of the Southern California Yachting Association's midwinter regatta hard ahead (Feb. 20-22), a host of preliminary events are on the agenda.

Tops among them will be next week end's small boat tuneup series, a traditional fixture sponsored by the Alamitos Bay Yacht Club, plus Saturday's annual 25-mile race from Newport to San Pedro and regatta site, for PC and Rhodes class sloops.

Today winter series races continue for three classes at Balboa YC. Though details have been lacking, also slated is the team race dinghy series between Newport Harbor YC (defending) and Los Angeles YC.

The 25th running of the Mid-winter will be a virtual recurring affair.

This time the dinghy divisions will race Feb. 20-21 on Alamitos Bay, with small boat fleets under wing of Cabrillo Beach YC at inner Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor. Large boats will sail under auspices of LAYC.

Power yachts will race predicted log for the Brittain and Bobrick trophies, in one 25-mile event conducted by Southern California Cruiser Association.

The long-motored joint conference of motorboat delegates from various member clubs of Regions 11 and 12 of the American Power Boat Association has been set.

It falls Saturday night at the Alhambra Cafe on Highway 41, five miles north of Fresno. All speedsters are welcome.

The big job on tap will be to dovetail the 1954 race schedules between north and south. Already some 42 race meets in the south's Region 12 have been scheduled, according to Chairman Tommy Thompson, Hollidale.

Southland Said to Have More Snow Than Sweden

Southland skiers, who have been scowling through their sun-glasses at the overheated weatherman, can at least be sure that he hasn't been picking on them alone.

There's been more snow on the Southern California mountain slopes during the past two weeks than on the mountains of supposedly wintry Sweden, Eric Sundin, leading Swedish manufacturer of skis, told friends in Long Beach Saturday.

Sundin said he was surprised at the wide interest in skiing in the United States, and especially on the West Coast. The development has been amazing during the 16 years since he last came to America, he said.

"You really have a marvelous setup in Long Beach, with the ocean at your front door, comfortable days all year long, yet you can reach the snow in two or three hours," Sundin declared. "You have all the fun of winter without having to endure the storms and slush."

Sundin made his first ski by hand more than 30 years ago. Today he produces more than 100,000 yearly in his modern factory at Hudiksvall, Sweden. The plant is reported to be the largest in the world. The manufacturer was the guest of Harvey Wood, who has handled Sundin's Scandia skis for many years.

Extinct Wrestlers

BOZEMAN, Mont.—(U.P.) Wrestling candidates for Montana State College's 167-pound class nearly became extinct. Coach Max Kimberly said the top three aspirants were eliminated by a setup in Long Beach, with the aspirant's hunting accident, a recurrent football injury and ineligibility.

WITH THE BUILDERS

Construction Here Keeping Busy Pace

Long Beach construction, record breaking for many months, has continued at a fast pace in 1934. This is shown by building permits issued by the city for the month of January.

Permits called for $3,125,605 in construction in the city. This does not include some new tract construction started just outside the city limits.

Noticeable is the jump in permits for improving older properties. During the month 729 such permits were issued, calling for expenditures of $774,570. Real estate officials have been pointing out that in the past, with the heavy construction of new tracts in this area, there had been a letup in home improvement and remodeling of older properties.

Banks and building and loan associations have begun stressing loans for improving older properties and these projects now are under way all over the city.

There were no tracts figuring in the building permits for the month except for some custom-built homes in the Park Estates section of L. S. Whaley. Those homes are averaging about $20,000 each.

There were 42 single family dwellings started during the month valued at $381,695. Two two-family dwellings costing $127,980 and 12 multi-family units costing $228,670 were begun.

Permits for plumbing improvements were $323,560 and electrical work was $150,060. Improvements on home properties included 33 garages worth $27,295.

Maps for 15 housing tracts in Kern County around Bakersfield have been filed with the state. The 15 tracts contain 1416 houses.

Aldon's Last Plaza Unit Draws Throng

Visitors to Lakewood Plaza is a few minutes away from doubled the past week following the announcement that the "king-sized" unit of four-bedroom, two-bath homes at nothing down for veterans but costs and impounds would be Aldon Construction Co.'s last in the Lakewood area.

The new 509-home unit is at Studebaker Rd. and Los Santos Dr., one mile south of Spring St., in the Lakewood area.

Singular among popular-priced homes, the new dwellings, described as "king-sized" because of their spaciousness, are offered to veterans on terms like rent for principal and interest, with no down payment required other than regular costs and impounds.

Each home has 1350 square feet inside the house. Some of the homes have four conventional bedrooms, while others have three bedrooms and a den.

Still claiming the major attention, it was explained, are the three-bedroom, two-bath homes, which feature an extra, multipurpose room, which may easily be adapted for TV or rumpus room, den or guest quarters.

Among the other "luxurized" appointments are 50-gallon water heaters guaranteed for three years, a minimum of seven closets, and parquet block hardwood floors.

A completely planned community, Lakewood Plaza is improved with sewers, curved and dead-end streets for greater traffic safety, sidewalks, curbs, gutters and parkway trees. It has its own shopping center and

Solon Demands Probe in Firing of Barber

WASHINGTON.—(AP) Sen. Holland (D-Fla.) said Saturday he has asked Secretary of the Navy Anderson for an explanation of the reported firing of 30 white civilian barbers at the Jacksonville (Fla.) Naval Air Station because they refused to serve Negro sailors.

THIS IS NEWS: MOTHER GOOSE RISQUE, LOOSE

ALBANY — (AP) Sen. Fred G. Monitt, in proposing a curb on motion picture censorship powers of the New York State Board of Regents, quotes the following anonymous poem: "Your honor, this book is full of swill, it portrays a young couple alone on a hill, and a woman who lived in a shoe as a house. With her brood, but not once does it mention her spouse. I submit that this volume is obscene, vile and loose. And demand its suppression. It's name? Mother Goose."

BACK TO SCHOOL

Buffum, Desmond Return to Junior-Sized Chairs

Harry Buffum and Walter Desmond Jr. went back to school the other day.

They found themselves on the familiar campus of the Burbank Grammar School, Fourth St. and Junipero Ave., but for some reason they had difficulty fitting themselves into the junior-sized seats at the junior-sized desks. And although they are expert now at merchandising and finance and law, they were stumped at naming the Great Lakes and the capitals of the states.

Most familiar face to them was that of benign William F. Huff, who was principal in their time, but who, they say, never licked them.

"Harry and Walter didn't give me any trouble and I tried not to give them any trouble," said Huff.

REHEARSAL FOR PROGRAM

The return to school of the two former students of the Burbank Grammar School was a "rehearsal" for the Burbank Alumni Day next Tuesday when former students will be welcomed back at a program beginning at 2:30 p. m. The Burbank PTA believes it will be the first time an elementary school in Long Beach will have an alumni day.

Other "firsts" are claimed for away since 1927.

Burbank Huff says it had the first elementary school library west of the Mississippi River. And he believes that the Burbank PTA and the cafeteria established in 1912 and the print shop in 1916 were the first in elementary schools in the state.

Prominent Burbank "grads" include besides Buffum and Walter Desmond Jr., the latter's brother, Atty. Gerald Desmond, Rep. Clyde Doyle and wife, Lydia Yocmans Doyle, and Harold Lovemans Doyle, who went to school at Burbank, who was its principal in 1951-52 and now is principal of Gompers School.

FOUNDED IN 1895

The school began in 1895 as the Alvarado School at Bishop (now Third) St. and Hermosa Ave. In 1903 it was moved to the Alvarado School at Bishop (now Third) St. and Hermosa Ave. In 1922 it was named the Luther Burbank School.

Huff is proud that he is the one who named it.

Teachers long in service at Burbank include Mrs. Lovie Jackson, who has been there since 1919; Mrs. Edna Lewis since 1926; and Miss Edith Dun-Should a Bridegroom's Mom Give Him Away?

STOCKFORD, England.—(AP) The Rev. F. F. Rigby contends a bridegroom's mother should give him away at his wedding. Said the Anglican vicar:

"One thing a wife cannot bear is to believe her husband is dominated by his mother in any way. When a father gives a bride away it means he regards her position as another man's wife as more important than her position as his own daughter. What an excellent idea if mothers of sons were made to realize the same thing applies to husbands."

SUNNY SIDE UP

HEREFORD, England.—(AP) British farmers have started a campaign to induce Britons to eat more eggs, now a glut on the market. A spokesman said Britons got out of the habit of eating eggs during wartime and postwar rationing.

Fairybook Tour for Carlsons

It will be off to the Caribbees, Venezuela and way points on a one-month pleasure trip for Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. (Bob and Bobbie) Carlson, 293 St. Joseph Ave., starting Tuesday night. The Carlsons will fly via American Air Lines out of Los Angeles at 11 p. m. First stop is New Orleans.

With mundane matters temporarily under control following Saturday's launching of the USS Pluck, which ceremony featured a brief address by Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, the president of Wilmington Boat Works and his wife are taking the opportunity of the West Indies junket.

Nice thing about it, say the Carlsons, is that during the trip they will enjoy much of that storied Caribbean cruising and some of it in the company of other Southland Corinthians.

At Port-au-Prince, Haiti, the Carlsons will meet Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. DuPont of Wilmington, Del., now cruising Caribbean waters in their 70-foot motor sailing Nor'easter.

Later, after flying to Curacao and thence to Caracas, Venezuela, to meet oil man Bob Ford, the peripatetic Carlsons will fly to Port of Spain, Trinidad.

There they'll meet with other voyaging Southlanders. These include another Long Beach yachting couple, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Elliott, 271 Park Ave.; Andy Kirk of Balboa and Bob Taylor. The Elliotts et al. are chartering a 60-foot schooner for a West Indies cruise.

Continuing what bids to be a romance-laden, storybook grand tour, the Carlsons will then fly to Puerto Rico. There they will make San Juan a base for flying trips to the fabulous Windward and Leeward Islands, which Bob and Bobbie missed on a previous trip a year and a half ago.

A high light in the month-long odyssey, however, may well come during their time with the DuPonts. While in Haiti the Carlsons plan flying to Cap Haitien, where they will go—neither by sea nor by air, but by donkey—to visit the eighth wonder of the world.

This is the fabulous citadel of La Ferriere, built in the early 18th Century in the fastnesses of the Haitian Mountains by the despotic self-appointed "king of Haiti," Henri I.

A PROFUSION OF RED HEARTS will form the background for the Valentine dance Saturday evening by Young Matrons of Temple Israel in the Wilton Marine Room. Working on the decorations are (left to right, rear) Mmes. Sam Roska, Nat Harrison, Norman Gottlieb, and (seated, center) Mrs. Norman Abrams. Herb Silver's Orchestra will play for dancing beginning at 8:30 p. m. and a special attraction will be the selection of the youngest grandmother in attendance. Mrs. Abrams, chairman, is being assisted by Mrs. Dewey Rudolph, tickets; Mmes. Frank Stipanick and Sam Kerns, decorations; Mmes. Matt Harrison, Sam Roska and Norman Gottlieb, entertainment; and Mmes. Sidney Schulman and Albert Passy, publicity. Proceeds will go to the philanthropic projects of the group. —All photos on page by Steff Photographer H. S. Melvin.

Elegant Ball Gowns Will Glitter at Formal Junior League Event

Independent Women's Editor

There is nothing more prosaic than a rummage sale, but if one is arranged on a large enough scale it is lifted out of the ordinary and becomes an event. Just so with the Junior League's recent and astonishingly successful effort which has netted the organization approximately $5000.

We preface our column with this remark as a springboard to the fact that the League's are planning to sell forth next Saturday at 9 p. m. to their annual Valentine Ball at the Pacific Coast Club, and, believe us, we think they couldn't be more deserving of a gay evening following their yeoman efforts amid their mountains of rummage.

Virginia Waters is dance chairman with Janet Taubman as her busy assistant. The party is formal as always and will culminate with a midnight breakfast. There's many a cocktail party and buffet supper being planned preceding the dance, and forthwith we give you a few of them.

One of the largest will be hosted by Ellie and Frank Person at their ocean front peninsula home. They've invited Messrs. and Mmes. Charles Van de Water, Morris Stimson, William A. Graham, Bill Barbee, Albert Vignolo Jr., Roy McCullough, Lynn O. Hosson, Myrl Ott, Norris Nesmith, Richard Gardiner, Art Holtz, John McWhinney of Lido Isle, George Osborn of Sierra Madre, and Peter Long of San Bernardino.

Ellie, by the way, plans to wear her Jean Dessea black silk chiffon evening dress, artfully draped, with scarlet slippers as accent. Our crystal ball also divulged a picture of Carolyn Wooding's elegant new ball gown. It's an Adele Simpson in a mouth-watering shade of palest pink Chantilly lace over net and satin, its bodice embroidered with opalescent sequins and brilliants. Carolynne and husband Dr.

Jack Wooding will be co-hosts with the George Hedleys at a pre-ball party. Their guests are to be Messrs. and Mmes. Noble Millie, Travis White, Raymond Parker, Charles Severson, Preston Johnson, James Pino, Donald Wells, Paul Wheeler and Dr. and Mrs. John Lewis.

Another convivial group will enjoy cocktails and a buffet at Margaret and Bob Sully's, 3508 Myrtle Ave. Sue and Art Buell and Berta and Earl East will assist. Margaret will receive in a bouffant green taffeta gown with narrow rhinestone straps.

Miss McBride Is Honoree

Thirty close friends of Miss Donna Ann McBride will gather this afternoon in the home of Mrs. Fred Kracht, 6230 Klidde Ave., to honor her at a bridal shower between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock. Miss McBride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leo McBride, will wed Capt. James Sorensen later this month.

Mrs. Kracht has arranged an attractive centerpiece on the buffet consisting of a white wishing well, to be filled with white flowers. Assisting the hostess will be her daughter, Mrs. James Blacketer of Laguna Beach and Miss Joane Keane.

Ladies Day at Rotary

Wednesday will be Ladies' Day at Rotary Club in Pacific Coast Club during the luncheon hour. Rotarians planning the party are Mmes. O. W. Van Derhoof, Ralph G. Anderson, Carl B. Shank and Ely E. Somerville.

Dr. Van Derhoof, acting president of Rotary for the third quarter, and Donald C. Spring, vice president for the third quarter, are in charge of the party which will feature as guest speaker Mrs. Mildred Eberhard Younger, vice president of Republican State Central Committee.

Rotarians Dr. Hugh J. Prichard and Robert W. Magin will provide troubadour music during the luncheon hour and chairman of the day will be Lawrence A. Coffey.

Fashions Reflect Happiness

By NADEANE WALKER

PARIS — (AP). Fashion designer Hubert De Givenchy is in favor of happiness and good luck, and who can quarrel with that? His new spring clothes, beside being sprinkled with lucky emblems, are so fresh and pretty that the women who wear them should be happy indeed.

A nippy waisted, fluffy skirted silhouette shared honors with a slim sheathed one at the Givenchy Collection Thursday morning. The theme of happiness and good luck was carried out with four leaf clovers, wheat, fish, lily of the valley and tortoiseshells—all emblems sacred to lady luck in various countries.

The designer described his line as "young, effervescent, and caressing the body." He gave his creations such names as "Kiss Me"—for a lipstick red suit with loose-waisted middy top—and "Sweetie"—for a gala-skirted strapless formal in pale pink organza, with a ruffled black lace bolero trailing long satin streamers.

To go with dress-up styles there was everything from laurel wreaths on the head to a $250,000 Parmentier necklace flashing 200 carats' weight of diamonds. Round and square stones in the whole range of diamond colors (choney, burnt sugar, pale and deep yellow and garden-variety white) made up the piece, with the center pendant a 50-carat hunk of burnt sugar.

Favored dress colors were white, blue, pink and yellow. For the first time in a Paris fashion show, an American orlon material was used. Another novelty was wool embroidered organza.

The short ball-skirted silhouette with a breathlessly tight corselet top was Givenchy's star this time. Fluffy, stiffened petticoats puffed it out. Jersey sheaths had touches of bias draping. Big-scalloped hems and scalloped capes adorned some jewel embroidered formal fashions.

A pale blue organza with short full skirt, corselet bodice and low standaway neckline was called "tailing in love." A necklace of four leaf clovers on a pink satin ribbon was tied around the neck in a bow. A lily of the valley corsage was worn on the back of the shoulder—emphasizing the fact that some of Givenchy's models have a turned-around look, with the neckline high in front and low behind.

On princess-line silk print gresses flaring from the hip, an inverted V of permanently pleated white orlon was inserted at the front of the skirt.

Little useless belt tabs and buckles dangled from jacket basques. Suit lapels were faced with pastel leather. Coats were slim, princess-lined and flattering to the figure. Often they were lined with silk matching the dress worn beneath.

The princess line also was paraded last night at the Naggy Rottif opening. Jewel colors such as coral, turquoise and pearl gave the show most of its sparkle.

Pianist to Make U. S. Debut Here

By SUE ROBERGE

The opportunity of attending an "American Debut Week" performance by the gifted Spanish pianist, Alicia de Larrocha, has been made possible for Long Beach concert-goers through the efforts of Dr. Alfred Wallenstein, director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra.

Dr. Wallenstein, who marveled at her artistry two years ago when he was guest conductor in Barcelona, is introducing her to American audiences in a series of Southland concerts this month.

Next Sunday night she will appear with the orchestra in its final Long Beach concert of the season in Concert Hall, Municipal Auditorium. Her only two preceding concerts in this country will be Thursday and Friday in Los Angeles.

In Europe, where she is frequently acclaimed as "captivating" by critics, Miss de Larrocha is famous for her interpretation of Granados.

However, for her concert here she has chosen music by another countryman, "Nights in the Gardens of Spain" by Manuel de Falla. Her major work for the evening will be Mozart's "Piano Concerto in A Major" (K-488).

The Barcelona-born artist showed unusual precocity at the age of 4 and gave her first recital when 5. Her early training was under direction of the renowned teacher, Frank Marshall.

Miss de Larrocha's European career has included touring the Iberian peninsula, which merited her several Spanish awards. She has been heard with the Lamoureux Orchestra and in London, Edinburgh, Geneva, Lausanne, Brussels and Liege.

At Sunday's concert, Dr. Wallenstein will conduct the orchestra at its full strength of 100 musicians in the following selections in addition to the piano works:

Mozart's overture to "The Abduction From the Seraglio"; Eugene Zador's "Elegie" and "Dance," and excerpts from Albeniz' "Iberia" suite, "Triana" and "Festival of Seville."

The customary symphony salon preview for members of the Long Beach Auxiliary of the Southern California Symphony Assn., which sponsors the orchestra, is slated Wednesday at 10:15 a. m. at Assistance League Clubhouse. Giving preview program notes to the women will be William C. Hartshorn of USC, supervisor of music for Los Angeles public schools.

Another musical event of a Latin nature, but concerning this side of the Atlantic, is a lecture-concert on contemporary Cuban music which the Municipal Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., will present at 4 p. m. next Sunday.

Dr. Aurelio de la Vega, president of the Cuban Section of the International Society for Contemporary Music, though he will emphasize Cuba's current place in modern serious music, will give a composite picture of Latin American music as a whole.

Not only is this speaker highly qualified to analyze Latin music in his position as president of the Cuban National Council of Music and director of the School of Music at the University of Oriente in Santiago de Cuba, he is also a famed essayist, composer and pianist. His musical compositions — including orchestral works, chamber music, vocal and piano works — have been widely performed in Cuba, the United States and Europe.

Admission to this unusual program, which the lecturer will supplement with selections at the piano, is free to the public.

Note to chamber music enthusiasts: The following all-Brahms concerts will be staged at the Los Angeles County Museum, Exposition Park, every Sunday in February beginning at 3 p. m.

Today: Schoenfeld Trio playing "Sonata in D Minor" (Opus 108) for violin and piano and "Piano Trio in B Major" (Opus 8).

Feb. 14: Musart String Quartet, "Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano in A Minor" (Opus 114) and "Clarinet Quintet in B Minor" (Opus 115).

Feb. 21: Hollywood String Quartet, "Two Songs for Contralto, Viola and Piano" (Opus 91); "Intermezzo in C Major" (Opus 119, No. 3); "Capriccio in C Major" (Opus 76, No. 8), and "String Quartet in A Minor" (Opus 51, No. 2).

Feb. 28: Coriolan String Quartet, "String Quintet in F Major" (Opus 88) and "String Quintet in G Major" (Opus 111).

Margaret Fenwick Receives Pilot Gavel; Other Service Groups to Meet This Week

By ANNE GILCHRIST

That exciting date on every club's agenda—election of new officers — occurred for Long Beach Pilot Club at their regular dinner meeting Wednesday at Pacific Coast Club. With ballots counted, charming Margaret Fenwick (Fenwick Travel Agency) was announced as new president. She will be installed, with her board, at ceremonies in April.

Elected to serve with Mrs. Fenwick were Ruth Tay, 1st vice president (with Lester Ryons & Co.); Martha McRae, 2nd vice president (assistant manager Security Bldg.); Rho Pennell, recording secretary (clinic administrator for Oddo-White Clinic); Marian Tripp, corresponding secretary (elementary school teacher); Betty Davis, treasurer (Severn Motors); and elected to serve 2-year director terms were Margie Cate (Inspector, Juvenile Dept., Long Beach Police Dept.), and Margaret Darby (City Recreation Dept.).

In addition to the election, business matters discussed concerned the club's rummage sale in March and the style show which they will sponsor in conjunction with Altrusa and Quota women's service clubs.

Red and white, favorite colors of this time of year, will be used to advantage tomorrow evening for the decor at the regular dinner meeting of the Long Beach Medical Assistants. President Thelma Swenson will call the meeting to order at 6:30 at Eaton's Chicken House.

Speaker will be Dr. Samuel I. Richmond, who will outline his views on "Psychosomatic Medicine in the General Practitioner's Office." Hostesses for the evening are to be Geneva Carson and Ann Boehm.

Many of the plans for tomorrow night's meeting were made last week when President Thelma entertained her board of directors and committee chairmen in her home. In addition to this, plans for other future meetings were made as well as discussion held on the club's philanthropic activities for 1954.

Important business was the order of the evening when members of Margaret Ives Business and Professional Women's Club gathered at the YMCA last Monday evening. President Vivian Shonwalter led the group in a serious discussion concerning a review of by-laws with proposed changes being made to conform with the National Federation.

Members also voted to establish a scholarship fund, the money to be raised by the finance committee, which would be made available to some woman over 40 finding it necessary to enter the business world. In all fairness, terms of the scholarship would enable Margaret Ives to award it to a younger student found particularly deserving. The scholarship will be a gift, not a loan. However, the recipient may, if she so wishes, repay at a later date and in any amount. This would automatically go into the scholarship fund.

It was also unanimously decided to continue the club's project with the John Dewey High School women students.

Connie Richards, new president of Executives' Secretaries, entertained her directors at an at home dinner preceding regular board meeting last Monday evening. The president announced her committee selections for the club year and called for a generalized discussion for plans for 1954.

It was agreed that Long Beach chapter would sponsor a pre-convention cocktail party on the Thursday preceding national convention which will be held in May at the Hotel del Coronado in San Diego. The directors also made all final plans necessary for the club sponsored booth at the "Have a Heart Carnival."

Altrusa Club of Long Beach will meet for dinner tomorrow at Lafayette Hotel when topic for discussion will be "Vocational Training." Susan Whidden will preside and Myrtle Poultnery will report on "Grants-in-Aid," a national project to finance foreign students at American universities and colleges. Irene Trepanier will give report of nominating committee.

L. B. Air Force Base Reception Fetes New Commanding Officer

By VIRGINIA NEWTON

One of the gala events of the past week was a formal reception Saturday night at Officers Club, Long Beach Air Force Base, honoring the new commanding officer, Col. Thomas Wiper, USAF, and Mrs. Wiper. Attending the affair were officers of the 2347th AFRTC and their ladies and representatives from the tenant organizations on the base.

"All hands" invited to the Service Wives Co-ordinating Committee luncheon party Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. at the Officers Club, Allen Center, are reminded by the chairman, Mrs. C. M. Tooke, of the date, Feb. 10.

And a happy birthday to two fine members of the younger service set, Mike and Pamela Cano, who will celebrate with a big, bang-up valentine birthday party with a gang from the junior crowd. Mike was 4 years old on the 6th and Pamela will round out 2 years on Feb. 14, so the party is all set for Valentine's Day.

Last Thursday the Officers Wives Club of Long Beach Air Force Base enjoyed a valentine luncheon at the base with Mrs. Michael Ognisty and Mrs. Fred Bongard as hostesses.

Former shipmate Lt. (jg) John William James, with Mrs. James and pretty little Cindy, was up from San Diego, where they moved recently from Key West, Fla., to see Lt. and Mrs. William W. Lee Jr. and their two darling daughters, and visited with Mrs. Lee's mother, Mrs. Edwina P. Gladden.

Ens. Betty L. Thomas, NC, USNR, became the bride of Lt. (jg) Vincent B. White, USN, yesterday at St. Bartholomew's Church.

Mrs. White has been stationed at the Corona Naval Hospital and Lt. White is stationed at the Naval Air Station, Los Alamitos, where the reception was held. The young couple plans to reside in Belmont Shore.

One of the most hilarious parties of the season was the gay Hardtimes Party at the Officers Club, Ft. MacArthur, with the General Staff Sections of the Third Corps at the post sponsoring the event. Lt. Col. Albert C. Lawrence was general chairman.

The affair included cocktails, dinner and dancing and a high light of the evening was when Maj. Raymond Harvey, Congressional Medal of Honor winner, presented a bronze plaque to Johnny Grant for his outstanding services to the armed services. Also in a starring spot was Roscoe Ales with his rendition of "Sad Sack." Awards for the really old, beaten up costumes went to Mrs. Robert L. Johnson and Lt. Col. Frederick Lagasse.

Comdr. F. G. Springer, who has been attached to the Long Beach Naval Shipyard for the past three years, will report shortly to Field Activities at the Bureau of Ships, Washington, D. C., for new duty and he and Mrs. Springer and two small daughters will leave next week for their new residence and duty. They are long-time residents of this city and many wonderful events have been given in the past weeks by their many friends here.

Last Friday night the personnel attached to the Long Beach Naval Shipyard, military and civilian, enjoyed a big birthday dancing party at the Municipal Auditorium, with Leighton Noble entertaining with his dance band. It was the yard's 11th anniversary.

Voted top speakers of the evening when the Long Beach Shipyard's Toastmasters and Toastmistress Club held a joint dinner meeting were Marguerite Claborn and Lawrence Lohman. Serving as toastmaster for the evening was Capt. G. W. Bailey, and topic toastmistress was Ruth Teel, who presented an old-fashioned spelling bee, with the ladies emerging the final victors.

Later in the week the Toastmistress Club met at the Apple Valley Steak House and installed new officers. Members of the Toastmasters Club and their wives were guests.

Last Tuesday the Officers Wives Club of the Long Beach Air Base held a cake sale at the base and the proceeds were presented to the nursery there. Chairman of the event was Mrs. Edwin Elliott.

At the last meeting of the Officers Wives Club of Fort MacArthur Mrs. Earle O'Brien was senior hostess, assisted by Mmes. M. Ortiz, R. Applegarth, F. Trayer and J. Williams.

Turkish Leader's Speech to Congress Draws Celebrities

By VIRGINIA WELDON KELLY
Press-Telegram Washington Correspondent

Turkey's President Bayar probably did not realize that those were rebel yells which greeted the speech he made before the joint session of Congress.

President Bayar's calm, resolute statements that force should be used to check aggression were received with yells, cheers, and hammering applause by the legislators.

Among celebrities in the packed galleries were screen star Dorothy Lamour (appearing here at the Sheraton Carlton's Harlequin Room), Mrs. Perle Mesta and Lady Astor. After President Bayar's speech, Mrs. Mesta lunched with Rhode Island's senator, Theodore Francis Green — at 86, one of the capital's most illustrious and wealthiest bachelors.

Mrs. Mesta was in Washington for a few days before starting off on another leg of her lecture tour.

The center of a whirlpool of social activity—which always surrounds her — Lady Astor was honored at a luncheon given by the former Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Stark and Mrs. Stark. Another luncheon was given for Lady Astor by Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Carney, and Mrs. Carney.

On Sunday afternoon, the Virginia-born celebrity and peppery wit was honor guest at a tea given by Marine commandant, Gen. Shepard, and Mrs. Shepard by Rear Adm. and Mrs. Neil K. Dietrich at the Shepard's marine barracks quarters.

The new president of the Women's Army and Navy League is Mrs. W. P. T. Hill, wife of the quartermaster general of the Marine Corps. She succeeds Mrs. C. B. Mickelwait.

Among the other newly elected officers is Mrs. W. B. Ammon, wife of Rear Adm. Ammon, who will serve as membership secretary-treasurer.

In her final report as president, Mrs. Mickelwait stated that the league which sponsors the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's Club at 1015 L St. N. W. lodged more than 24,102 men and had to turn away 4,000 others for lack of room.

Canteen chairman, Mrs. Francis Ulen, wife of Navy Capt. Ulen (D. C.) announced that the club served 24,451 meals to servicemen in 1954. The cost of the food came to more than $13,000.

Mrs. C. E. Wilson (wife of the Defense Secretary) and Mrs. Arthur W. Radford, wife of Adm. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, attended the election meeting of the league.

Those who are interested in menu planning may like to mull over the delicacies served to President and Mrs. Eisenhower at the dinner given in their honor at the Turkish Embassy by Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin. The first course of tiny pancakes with caviar was accompanied by Turkish vodka.

Then followed consommé with amontillado sherry, lobster Americana with Montrachet, roast partridge with truffles, braised omelette, peas and potatoes soufflé (served with Chateau Mouton Rothschild), a green salad and a luscious dessert of baked Alaska flambee with black cherries and Kirsch completed the Lucullan repast. For the occasion sparkling new crystal with a gold border and a gold star and crescent had been imported from Turkey. Turkish glass is as lovely as Venetian crystal — in the opinion of many experts.

Rebal-Shuck Vows Spoken

A princess style gown of Alecon lace over satin was the attire of Miss Suzanne Sydney Shuck Saturday evening when she approached the candle-lit altar of Los Altos United Church to become the bride of Richard Raymond Rebal.

Accenting the ballerina-length gown was a jeweled necklace with a yoke outlined in iridescent sequins and pearl medallions. The bride's brief veil was caught to a crown of orange blossoms. She carried a handmade lace handkerchief belonging to her grandmother and an arrangement of white rosebuds and carnations surrounding a white orchid.

Attending the couple were Miss Diane Shuck, the bride's sister, and Robert Harrold.

Donald Ashworth and Kenneth Ashworth ushered.

Hostesses at the church reception were Mrs. Arthur R. Larson of Glendale and Mrs. Ernest Hogan of La Crescenta.

After honeymooning in Palm Springs, the couple will be at home Feb. 14 in Huntington Park.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Thomas Shuck of 2324 Stearns Ave., the bride is a graduate of Montevia High School and Lawton Medical Assistant School in Beverly Hills. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. Rebal, 3136 Prospect Ave., attended Glendale High, Glendale College and was just graduated from UCLA where he was a member of Delta Sigma Phi.

new safe All-In-One capsule discovery for Easy Reducing!

science now helps you take off your fat while you eat the foods you choose

Do you like sweets, candy, cake and are you a real glutton when it comes to butter, gravy, potatoes? Have you tried one thing after another to reduce, spent dollar after dollar for pills and tablets and in spite of everything you've tried you're still too fat? Well, be as skeptical as you like, but now, right now, there's a wonderful new kind of capsule that helps you take off pounds and inches of ugly fat safely, quickly and so much easier you hardly know what's happening. You don't suffer starvation dieting hunger, you take no drugs, you don't exercise, in fact you don't even diet one bit more than you want to, because you automatically eat less and here's why...

Just recently a well known scientist perfected a new tiny capsule that combines not one but ALL the ancient known aids to reducing he found in all the advertised products offered today. It contains the concentrated proteins you've read and heard about. It combines the vitamins and minerals often lost when cutting off fattening foods containing these needed vitamins and minerals. It combines the vegetable cellulose that has no calories yet expands when it absorbs water thereby helping to give the feeling of a full contented stomach. Yet these tiny new capsules contain not just one but ALL the drugless reducing aids he found to be needed to actually automatically make you eat less without conscious effort and like it! In fact these tiny capsules are so packed with vitamins and minerals, protein and non-caloric filling foods, they actually equal and exceed many a meal.

You'll be surprised at the fat you lose the first week, the inches that disappear the first month. No hunger, no strict dieting, no drugs, no exercise. And the cost is absolutely nothing unless you grow more slim, more youthful looking, more active and enjoy better health.

Women loose 70 pounds!
"Thanks to your plan I lost 70 pounds and I honestly feel lots better. You can really lose weight with them."
Mrs. A. L. C., St. Paul, Minnesota

"After everything I wanted!"
"I lost 70 pounds quickly and I ate anything I wanted. In only a few weeks I went from 204 pounds to 130. I think they are grand and they really do what they claim to do. You can actually eat anything and not be hungry."
Mrs. D. M., Pine Bluff, Arkansas

Reducing plan certainly is easy
"I have enjoyed your Reducing Plan, and it certainly is easy. I have gone from a size 18 to a size 14, and my husband thinks I look like the girl he first married."
Mrs. D. R., Black River, N. Y.

Can now wear attractive clothes
"I have lost 24 pounds and I am feeling fine. I feel so much better and can wear the attractive clothes I have wanted to for so long."
Mrs. E. F., West Terre Haute, Ind.

Numerous Groups to Participate in TV Series

The "Looking at Long Beach" TV series has been advanced to 8:30 p. m. each Wednesday evening instead of the former 9 to 9:30 half hour over KTLH, Channel 28. Announcement of this complimentary rearrangement was made at the evening TV Workshop in the home of the president of the Long Beach Council for Educational Television, Inc., Mrs. Frank J. Hardesty, 3850 Jotham Pl. Free telecast time is provided through the courtesy of the Hancock Foundation at USC.

TV Workshop members are now preparing a variety of programs for this community television series. For Feb. 10, Dr. Walter Buerger, as chairman for the Unitarian Church, is now rehearsing a TV script featuring the "Liberal Forum" presenting subjects of timely controversy at a monthly public meeting.

"Traffic" will be tellingly televised in a show now being arranged by the public relations director of the City Police Dept., Bill Meyers for Feb. 17. Pilot Club will dramatize the roles played by their members as executives in business and service with Mrs. Walter Boyd writing the script in which she will appear as the narrator, Feb. 24.

Two TV workshops are being conducted regularly each month for members who wish to learn television production by participating, writing and directing programs in the "Looking at Long Beach" series. Day meetings are scheduled each Tuesday afternoon at KTLH studios from 1 to 3 p. m. and evening sessions on the fourth Tuesday will be at the president's home.

Subject for this month is "Adaptation of Subject Matter to TV Technical Restrictions." Equipment at KTLH will be explained and the workshop problem will be diagramming the TV show. All men and women interested are invited to join.

Speech Unit Plans Forum

The therapeutic value of laughter was emphasized in a discussion by Mrs. Sidney Coco on "The Origin of Wit and Humor" at a meeting of the public speaking department of Ebell Club at the clubhouse. The chairman, Mrs. Rex Ewing Mhoon, presided. The symposium on wit and humor had Mrs. Coco as leader with a group of members participating, including Mmes. Josiah Mertz, John Gordon and Rex Mhoon.

Mrs. Mhoon announced that the program at 11 a. m. tomorrow will feature a forum discussion on "Should Club Women Devote More Time to Civic Affairs." Moderator will be Mrs. James H. Darsie, assisted by Mrs. James Bryan Murray.

One of the most popular study groups in Ebell Club, the public speaking department believes that through the practice of public speaking a bridge is built between fear and confidence. Its aim is to build confidence by encouraging group participation, and many club members take advantage of the course offered.

March programs of the TV series already booked are being planned by Helen Fuller for the public library, Virginia F. Clark for the Recreation Dept., and Robert C. Walker on Release Time Education for the Council of Churches.

Some of the other members now working on scripts for telecasts are: Mrs. Pauline Mattox of Music Teachers Assoc., Mrs. Odessa Russell of the Medical Auxiliary, Eugene L. Warner of YMCA, Mrs. Bess Bulgin of Goodwill Industries, John V. Thompson for Infantile Paralysis Foundation, Mrs. Alexis Jacobowsky for United Nations and Mrs. Tom Hendig for the Mental Hygiene Society.

Although many have converted their television sets to receive ultra high frequency, Mrs. Hardesty continues to hold open house for members and friends to view the "Looking at Long Beach" TV series each Wednesday evening from 8:30 to 9 p. m.

Beauty Aids Varied Today

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

There are so very many fine products on the cosmetic market today that modern woman has a big advantage over the woman who lived years ago. She has a better chance to delay aging and to enhance herself with make-up than even her sister who lived only a short time ago. Many new ideas have appeared in make-up and complexion aids during the past few years. Let me call your attention to some of them today.

Great-grandmother used to have to bite her lips and rub her cheeks just before her best beau arrived in order to have any flattering color. She also used chalk for powder. Today we have a great array of make-up aids in varied colors. Lipsticks and rouge and make-up bases in myriad shades, eye shadow for every type, mascara, eyelash curlers and eyebrow pencils and false eyelashes and fingernails, are only a part of these beautifiers. There is also an invisible chin strap and a product which lightens shadows on the face.

So far as care of the skin to delay aging is concerned, many new ideas have appeared recently. There are the hormone creams, a cream which holds the moisture in the skin, creams with vitamins in them. There are circulation creams and eye creams, as-tringents and beauty grains; lubricating oils and creams, disappearing night creams. On and on it goes!

Bath salts and water softeners, body lotions, cuticle creams and oils, hand and elbow and heel mitts for softening these portions, and the most wonderful hand lotions, are all on the modern scene. If a woman used all of them, she would spend most of her day sunk in creams and oils. She should select what suits her particular complexion.

If your skin is oily, it is soap and water for you. If it is dry, use cleansing creams and lubricants. If you have trouble in the winter with rough, dry skin on your body use a bath oil when you tub. If the skin of your elbows and heels is dry, use the mitts after massaging cream into these areas.

Signals Will Pay in Game

The purpose of a defensive signal is to give your partner vital information. If the signal cannot be read, it has failed its purpose. These obvious facts were missed in a recent team of four match, with rather interesting results.

Strangely enough, at both tables the South player decided to open the bidding with one no trump. The count is only 15 points, but the strong five-card suit seemed to offer adequate compensation. Both South players got their just desserts when they were bounced into a slam contract by their partners.

It is impossible to blame North for taking an ambitious view with his hand. He had a count of 16 points and knows that his partner should have from 16 to 18 points. North has two fairly good four-card suits and should expect that there will be a reasonable play for the slam.

The fault for the rather foolish bidding lies with South. Almost any bid can be shaded by one point, but it doesn't pay to shade bids that promise a definite number of points, such as opening bids on no trump.

In the first room West opened the king of clubs and his partner signaled enthusiastically by playing the three of clubs. This card may have looked like an enthusiastic signal to East, but it was far too deep for West to read.

West feared that South was holding off with the ace-jack of clubs. He therefore shifted to a spade, hoping that declarer would not have 12 tricks. South heaved a big sigh of relief and spread the hand for the rest of the tricks, making his slam contract.

When the hand was played in the other room at the same ridiculous slam contract, West likewise led the king of clubs. In this case the East player was too cautious to leave anything to chance. Fearing (quite wisely) that South would not be able to read the meaning of the three of clubs, East overtook with the ace.

East then returned a club to make sure of defeating the contract. West continued with the clubs, taking five tricks to set the contract four! The difference amounted to 1840 points.

Homelife With Alyce

By MARYALYCE RIVARD

Loafing is a good deal, I guess, but the only bad thing about it is that when you get tired of it you can't quit it and rest... the only change left is going back to work and that's no good either... Sometimes life gets so complicated...

Are your holiday dinners sufficiently in the background so you can look a cranberry in the face again? Here's a wonderful cranberry glaze to try... For the last half hour of cooking... stick a ham loaf with cloves, glaze it with one can jellied cranberry sauce mashed with a fork, mixed with 1/4 cup light corn syrup...

Funny how you can yell and yell at the offspring to make their beds, wash their hands, etc... and never quite reach the inner ear... but they can hear you cutting a piece of cake three rooms away... acute, no?

If you're an "easy-does-it" cook have you ever sprinkled minute tapioca into your fruit pies to thicken them instead of "yesterday's way" of cooking cornstarch, etc... The tapioca cooks and thickens as the pie bakes.

Seems it doesn't pay to be too good a cook... your husband never wants to take you out for "restaurant food"... your friends hesitate to invite you for dinner because they "can't hold a candle to you" and your young hopefuls are always bringing home some undernourished offspring to partake of your "swell cooking." Fine irony, what? Alright, ladies... so we love it!!!!

FOUR tanks of tropical fish and a parakeet which warbles a wolf call, a son 6 and a daughter 3, are among the at-home interests of Chef of the Week Dr. Kenneth C. Brandenburg, 704 Security Bldg. Vacationwise he's an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.—(Staff photo by H. S. Melvin.)

Chef of the Week

Medical Specialist Joins Ranks of Culinary Experts

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

He's an all-around man of many talents, not the least of which is his knowledge of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Today's Chef of the Week is Dr. Kenneth C. Brandenburg, 704 Security Bldg.

A product of Chicago and the University of Illinois College of Medicine, he took his post-graduate work in his specialization at Rush Medical College and his residency at the Westside Hospital in Chicago. World War I and private practice preceded his arrival at Long Beach in 1929.

Musical, yet mechanical, our "chef" can play the piano or dismantle it, and install electric organ attachments with equal aplomb. He can lay floor tile—create window cornice boxes or practically wig the kiddies—that is, so he can hear them from another room should they be in distress. The art of plumbing, however, is not his forte; as "Brandenburg's Folly," his basement set-up, will attest. Photography, high-fidelity recordings, a good pick-up of the humorous aspect of things, an amazing repertoire of events and an ability to relate them—all add up to Brandenburg, the man.

It was during World War II he pioneered good will and a better understanding between doctor and layman. His newspaper articles, witty, logical, well written and most informative. As secretary to the local Medical Society, he was a natural at public relations. He

Child Care

Sandwiches Not Enough for Lunch

By BEULAH FRANCE, RN

Q—"I have two children, 6 and 7. They come home for lunch. They have only a half hour and like only ham or bologna sandwiches. What foods would comprise a nourishing noonday meal?"—Mrs. R. N.

(A)—With so little time for lunch, a leisurely breakfast is of great importance. Your children should not leave for school mornings without having spent a full half hour getting needed nourishment after the long night's rest.

Breakfast should consist of cooked whole grain cereal served with evaporated milk in place of cream; a full glass of orange juice, some slices of crisply broiled bacon, a soft-boiled egg and one or two cups of milk.

Have a delicious, nourishing luncheon all ready for the children the minute they get home and "get washed up" at noon. One-third of the whole day's body-building supplies should be eaten then. Lean ham or bologna sandwiches made with vitamin-enriched bread and spread with butter or enriched margarine are all right but they're not enough for a whole meal. Serve creamed split pea, dried bean or tomato soup, too. Fix a tasty salad. Children should learn to like salads.

Make one with tender green lettuce leaves and slices of a real ripe banana mixed with tiny bits of orange. Give them plump prunes stuffed with cream cheese, into which you have tucked broken bits of English walnuts. Surprises stimulate lunch-time appetites. Liver boiled 'til tender, then mashed and seasoned tastily makes an excellent sandwich filling. A hot dish of lean lamb or beef stew made with various vegetables tastes good when poured over slices of enriched bread. On cold days a hot dish at midday is essential, especially when a child comes home to eat.

It takes time and thought to tempt some youngsters' appetites, but food is so important that the effort should be made every day.

Ask Beulah France to help you with your child care problems. Write her in care of the Press-Telegram, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for her reply.

served two years as area medical director for Civil Defense—is a member of the Downtown Lions Club and a past president. He has performed his duties as president of the Long Beach Branch, Los Angeles County Medical Society, and of the Los Angeles Society of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology (that's all pertaining to the head).

Brandenburg's pet project, however, is mental hygiene, and when he gets on a rolling "binge" for that cause, no one can turn him down. He pioneered the mental hygiene movement in Long Beach, and though having retired recently as president of the Mental Hygiene Clinic, he still serves on the board.

Oh, yes, we forgot to relate among his other talents that of whipping up a hot cake. Here's his recipe:

BUTTERMILK HOT CAKES
2 cups flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. soda
1 tsp. baking powder
3 cups buttermilk
2 eggs separated
1 tsp. sugar
1 tbsp. oil or melted butter
Sift flour before measuring, then sift all dry ingredients together. Beat egg yolks, sugar and oil together. Add buttermilk to egg mixture. Add dry ingredients all at once and stir only slightly. Leave it lumpy. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into batter. Bake on griddle.

Suggested Solutions to Relieve Nervous Tensions Listed

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
Case K-318: Philip, aged 23, is the second eldest of our five children.

"Dad, just look at my hands," he exclaimed, and thrust both of them in front of me. They were cracked and bleeding at several points.

"How did they get this way?" I inquired.

"Oh, I keep picking at any rough spot on the skin, just as a nervous outlet," he ruefully confessed.

"And when I go to a movie and get interested, I'm hardly aware of the fact but I apparently just pick at the broken skin till my hands begin to bleed all over again."

In this hectic modern age, people are afflicted with unused nervous energy. That's one reason for the continuation of the tobacco habit after it has once been started. For smokers expend some of their nervousness by waving their arm back and forth at stipulated intervals in the act of smoking. Without a cigarette between their fingers, however, they'd look silly if they sat and waved their arm, in the same manner.

We humans crave outlets for energy. This is even more evident with school children who fidget and pick their hangnails, or chew their fingernails to the quick.

So we have recess periods in school, just to let the kids run outdoors and try to drain off part of this pent-up energy via the leg action involved in foot-races, football, baseball, etc.

"Dr. Crane, when I attend a party, I soon begin to feel self-conscious about my hands," a coed recently informed me.

"Then they begin to feel as big and awkward as hams of meat. So what can I do to overcome this embarrassing situation?"

One reason why cocktail shaking is popular is the fact that modern young people crave something to occupy their hands. So you hostesses should try to meet this need by quickly making it possible for guests to pick up something in their fingers and toy with it.

Instead of cocktail shakers or cigarettes, give them mechanical puzzles, such as metal rings that can be taken apart by certain motions. Novelty stores have many of these clever gadgets that will preoccupy one's hands far more constructively than with cigarettes or cocktail glasses.

But if you hostesses don't have such things scattered around the room, then your guests feel jittery.

Chewing gum is also an outlet for nervous tension and is actually prescribed for neurotic youngsters by psychiatrists. Many men will also toy with their key rings, just as a nervous outlet. Others keep twisting their wedding ring around one of their fingers.

Teaching History to Young Open to Much Improvement

By ANGELO PATRI

Intelligent children like a good story. The more dramatic, the better. One of our great patriots was born in January and two others this month. They are Benjamin Franklin, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

What a wonderful story for children is the biography of Washington! The boy who could not tell a lie—and never mind whether the cherry tree incident is apocryphal or not. There is, later, the young soldier serving what was an apprenticeship in leadership in war under the English flag. Then his magnificent leadership in the Revolutionary War.

Our pupils do not know enough about Washington's part in that war. Yet, that history is of great importance to them. Ask them about Paul Revere's ride, the Battle of Lexington and the Declaration of Independence, Valley Forge, and it will be found that their knowledge of these great events is very hazy at best.

Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston, Jan. 17, 1706. When he was 10 years old he was taken from school to help his father, who was a tallow chandler and soap-boiler. He became a versatile genius and a great statesman. He drew up the first plan of the Union laid before Congress, organized our postal system, and was a member of the committee which drafted the Declaration of Independence. In his old age he crossed the Atlantic Ocean and was welcomed with extraordinary enthusiasm in France. The story of Franklin's mission to France alone would thrill any boy or girl.

How much do our children know about Abraham Lincoln? How many of them recite the Gettysburg address?

Hubby Shuns Home Problems

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

What do you do with a man who absolutely refuses to discuss problems, whether they concern sex or the roast that burned for dinner?

After 10 years of living with this man and never discussing little or big problems concerning our relationship to each other, our family, our home, our daily lives, the strain of daily living is terrific.

Nothing is ironed out, or has been. The same problems we faced our first year together are with us today. When he enters the house it is like having a cloud pass over the sun. He knows it. I know it. The children are beginning to know it.

He is a good conversationalist on any subject that isn't personal. I've pleaded and coaxed and egged and thrown tantrums, threatened, and even left him. I've tried everything I can think of. Always he'll try, but so far no change. He won't talk to a doctor, a minister, or counselor. I've tried the suggestions of all three—but after all it takes two to make a success of marriage.

Our happiness and our health are at stake. Though he seems to realize this, he does nothing about it. His attitude seems to be that if you ignore a "personal" problem, it will blow away. Sometimes maybe it will, but then again they can grow, and mole hills can become mountains.

I'm desperately in need of something to eliminate tension and make a happy home.

HOPEFULLY.

DEAR HOPEFULLY: I hesitate to encourage you because if you haven't been able to get this man to talk—I mean, of course, discuss personal problems—after 10 years, then I don't see how you can in 11, or 12, or even 15.

As you say, you've tried every which-way, and no results.

Is there any way you could

The story behind the C-46 crashes

You don't often see a full-length picture of Communism's top leader, Georgi Malenkov. Only three have been released. He's with Voroshilov.

Take a good look at these men...

The face and figure of Stalin's successor are still unfamiliar to most of the Western World. Only a dozen pictures of Malenkov have been released since he took office.

Of these, only three have shown the stocky

Red chief full-length, as he appears above.

Even more mysterious is Malenkov's family. Recently, for example, pictures of three different women, all of whom are supposed to be Malenkov's wife, have been in circulation.

But there have been no official family portraits of the Malenkovs.

Interestingly, Malenkov and Voroshilov—in their dark coats and fur hats—look as grim as the 10,000 other Russians who filed into the fancy red and black marble tomb at the rate of one a second on opening day, Nov. 17, 1953.

THIS OFFER EXPIRES IN 10 DAYS!

A six-year-old stands aside from 49 playmates at Highbridge Play Center in New York. He represents the only one who doesn't like nickels.

NEW YORK.

WHAT DO boys and girls think of money these days? They still like nickels (see picture), but they don't think much of pennies.

One boy standing out from 49 other kids illustrates the small percentage who now consider nickels almost worthless.

To learn this, the Washington Heights Savings & Loan Association here conducted a survey. To 3,260 children in the city and suburbs, it put the question: "What good is a nickel?" One out of 50 replied, "No good!"

As for pennies, one child in five didn't even consider them worth picking up.

The reason, says the Association, is that modern children think in terms of dollars. Moreover, they're shrewd judges of values.

As a test, they were asked, "Which would you rather have right now—a dollar or a big, delicious ice cream cone?"

Almost all of them, ranging in age from 6 to 11, said, "I'll take the dollar!"

About one child out of five earns his own money by helping around the house, baby sitting or delivering newspapers—and they put the money in the bank.

Asked what he would most like to have in a candy store, one 6-year-old replied, "The cash register!"

C-46 TOLL REACHES 23 AS STEWARDESS DIES

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 29 (AP)—The death toll from the crash of a chartered airliner climbed to twenty-three today when Dorothy Jean Bush, 32 years old, of San Antonio, the stewardess, died. Twenty-two persons, including twenty Puerto Rican soldiers, were killed when the two-engine plane nearing the end of its journey went out of control late yesterday and crashed in the center of Louisville's Standiford Field. The ship was on its way from New York City to Louisville.

● By DONALD E. KEYHOE & ROBERT P. GOLDMAN

Here are facts behind the biggest UNKNOWN TO most Americans, a furious battle is being fought over the C-46, an airplane that daily carries passengers and cargo all over the U.S.

The battle is loaded with dynamite because:

- 1—In the past six years, C-46s operated by private companies have been involved in 93 accidents. More than 300 lives have been lost.
- 2—C-46s are often used by airlines on which the Army sends troops.
- 3—More than 40 airlines, scheduled and non-scheduled, use the plane in their multi-million dollar operations.
- 4—The C-46 has recognized deficiencies involving its fire-protection system, and its engine.
- 5—Next March 31 has been set as a deadline for C-46 operators to submit proposed improvements in the plane.
- 6—The Air Force is reported to have more than 300 C-46s on hand which it would like to lease or sell.

Those are only a few of the reasons why government civil air officials find themselves juggling the hottest airlines potato in years.

Two Sides to the Story

THREE GOVERNMENT agencies, the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Civil Aeronautics Administration, have two basic responsibilities: safeguarding the American public; and regulating the ever-growing aviation industry.

There are two sides to the C-46 story. On one side is the grim account of the crashes. On the other are the C-46 operators' claims of what the plane has done and can do.

Here, first, are the facts on the grim side:

Back in 1951, the CAB (which sits as judge and rule-maker for airlines) issued a report following a rash of C-46 crashes. The report said in part:

Investigation of tragedies indicated an apparent laxness by some airlines in some or all of the following aspects:

- 1—Failure to maintain pilot training at a desirably high level.
- 2—Failure to ensure aircraft and engine maintenance at a desirably high level.
- 3—Failure on the part of the companies and their personnel to follow certain operating procedures . . . including those pertaining to maximum operating weights.

What happened is a matter of record.

On Sept. 28, 1953, 23 soldiers lost their lives in a crash in Louisville, Ky. Eight months before, 37 other soldiers died in a crash at Fish Haven, Idaho.

Both these crashes involved C-46s. Both were flown by airlines hired by the Army to haul troops.

Death and Escapes

FOUR MONTHS before the Louisville crash, another C-46 belonging to the same airline had crashed at Des Moines. The company, incidentally, is still approved for Army charters.

In July, 1953, another group of soldiers flown by a charter airline narrowly escaped death in a C-46 crash at Cheyenne, Wyo. The airline was later grounded.

On Sept. 22, 1952, a C-46 with 37 GI's aboard crashed and burned at Miles City, Mont. The men miraculously escaped with their lives.

In still another case, a large group of soldiers had a close call when their Army-rented C-46 crashed at Prescott, Ariz. In two C-46 crashes at sea, involving civilian passengers, 80 persons were killed. The crashes took place between Puerto Rico and Florida a few years ago.

Fifty-six other civilians died at Elizabeth, N.J., in another C-46 crash and 12 more were killed and another 14 seriously injured in another C-46 disaster at Seattle.

A CAB report on the Elizabeth crash said that in addition to engine fire, the C-46 had been overloaded. It also revealed that the airline operating the plane had a long series of violations for overloading.

Actually, Civil Aeronautics Administration records show that there have been

WHO FLIES THE C-46?

- A total of 42 airlines in the U.S. fly the C-46. According to the CAB, here is the boxscore:
- 10 scheduled airlines use the C-46 for cargo-hauling only.
- 20 non-scheduled airlines use the C-46 exclusively for cargo and passenger service.
- 12 non-scheduled airlines have mixed fleets—46s and other planes.
- 26 non-scheduled airlines do not use any C-46s.

a great many instances of overloading plus negligence in maintenance of engines and planes.

That is the tragic side of the C-46 picture.

Here is the other side. Last summer, the C-46 operators set up the Aircraft Engineering Foundation, Inc. Its purpose is to find ways to improve maintenance and operation of the C-46. In addition, it is committed to make basic recommendations on how the plane itself can be improved.

By March 31, Foundation representatives must come before the CAB to make their recommendations. If the CAB approves the recommendations, the life of the C-46 will be extended for just enough time to make the necessary changes.

In defense of the C-46, George C. Prill, an official of the Foundation, claims that the plane has been subject to a great deal battle in American aviation in years . . .

of unjustified criticism. Here is the gist of his and the C-46 operators' position: The plane is rendering outstanding service. Every plane has shortcomings which can be corrected. The DC-6 and the Constellation both had "bugs" when they were first introduced, but they were corrected. That is also true of one of aviation's greatest workhorses, the DC-3. It, too, has undergone progressive improvement.

The Defense

THE C-46 is no exception. It has shortcomings, but they, too, can be corrected. When the Foundation comes before the CAB, it will bring a blueprint for improved C-46 fire protection and engine cooling. In addition, there will be recommendations to install automatic devices to show a pilot immediately if an engine fails, and an automatic optimum speed indicator. Those are just some of the major improvements the Foundation will recommend. Says Prill: When correctly maintained and operated, the C-46 can do a wonderful job. Accidents in the past were due in large part to the fact that C-46 pilots and maintenance were not what they should have been.

However, the CAA and CAB, through their directives and enforcement have changed that picture, he claims. Prill adds: The C-46 is THE cargo plane most widely in use in the U.S. There are about 150 C-46s now in commercial use. "It's a wonderful workhorse and it flies beautifully." Asked why so much criticism has been levelled at the C-46, he replied: It's an orphan. The company which made the C-46 for World War II use discontinued production some years ago. Because there is no parent company to "mother" the plane, and defend it when criticism is levelled, the critics feel free to take whacks at it. In addition, other transportation interests which are opposed to airlines expansion, have found the C-46 a convenient target. PARADE asked both the CAB and CAA for facts concerning the C-46 and its operations here and abroad. First, the two government agencies provided vital data concerning the 93 accidents, many of them fatal crashes, in which the C-46 has been involved. According to the CAB breakdown of causes, here's why those accidents occurred: The primary cause in 48 out of the 93 accidents was said to be "pilot error." In 13 out of the 93, it was "other personnel error." In 10 of the accidents the primary cause was "power plant failure." In eight cases, "landing gear failure;" in two cases, "air frame failure;" in one case, "air frame and accessory failure;" in five cases, "weather;" in one case, "airport terrain;" and in two cases, "no determined cause." Three accidents are still under investigation.

The Government Side

IN 21 OF THE 93 accidents there were fatalities. Eleven of these 21 cases involved passenger flights. The other 10 were in cargo, training or other flights. A CAA official told PARADE: The C-46 was approved for transport of passengers in the late 30's when it was first built. It was then diverted for use in World War II. The plane is licensed to carry cargo on scheduled and non-scheduled airlines and to carry passengers on "non-skeds." The C-46 does not meet what is termed full-transport category of the CAB. Say the CAA and CAB: The C-46 was built before present transport category regulations were put in force. Each year, the agencies evolve new, stricter standards. These standards are, considered to increase the safety factor in flying among all airplanes licensed for commercial use. However, with each new set of tighter standards, all planes which have been in previous service cannot be grounded or the air travel industry would be subject to periodic paralysis. The C-46 now does not have automatic propeller "feathering." So it cannot meet transport-category standards at its presently-approved carrying capacity, about 45,000 pounds. To meet "T-category," it would have to fly at about 36,000 pounds. However, this lowered weight would make it unprofitable to use the plane.

The Job Ahead

THE CAB HAS been pressured repeatedly by the C-46 operators to raise the weight limit. PARADE asked the CAA and CAB why companies which have records of violations for overloading are allowed to continue flying. In each instance, the government regulatory agencies said they try to make "the punishment fit the crime." In some instances, they feel they should ground an airline, or a pilot, and in some cases, they feel they shouldn't. One vital fact emerges: Both the government agencies and the C-46 operators say the plane needs improvement. The deadline for proposals to change the plane is next month. There is an obligation to the American public on the part of all the parties concerned. That obligation is to make the necessary changes—or ground the plane.

DONALD O'CONNOR SAYS:

HOLLYWOOD.

I'VE STILL GOT to find a place in life as a human being, not a machine," says 28-year-old Donald O'Connor, nimblefooted funnyman of movies and TV.

Donald claims his life has been so full of work, he hasn't had time to develop a philosophy and a personality.

People think of him in his movie roles—and forget there's a Donald O'Connor—human being.

"I'm no angel," says Donald. "I'm the same as everyone else, with the same temperament and temper. I resent having people tag me as a perpetual, super-polite juvenile. I'm subject to fevers and headaches and bad temper just like anybody else."

Donald's been called the "youngest old-timer in show business"—with justification.

He toddled in front of the footlights when he was 13 months old—and from then on, he was never away from them. Even the two years he spent in the Army, he entertained U.S. troops.

▶ "I was born and raised to entertain other people," says Donald. "I've heard laughter and applause and known a lot of sorrow. Everything about me is based on show business—I think it will bring me happiness. I hope so. I'm working to make it that way."

Donald may not always be happy himself, but he never fails to get a chuckle out of an audience.

He brought down the house at his debut. It was in 1926 at a Cincinnati theater. Wearing a little white dress, he shuffled on stage to the tune of "Black Bottom." He ended his part of the act by turning around and vigorously patting his backside.

He Added $25

MY MOTHER had to grab me before I fell down," Donald says. "I didn't want to stop."

Life began for Donald on August 30, 1925 at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Chicago. He was the youngest of seven children of Effie Serge O'Connor and Charles "Chuck" Dixon O'Connor.

The O'Connor Family Theater Act toured the country, doing vaudeville shows and old standbys like "David Harum" and "Shepherd of the Hills."

"My father was glad I was born," says Donald. "With each kid, the O'Connor family act made more dough. As soon as we could walk, we went to work, adding another $25 a week to the family income."

(Donald and a brother, John Edward, are the only children living today—three died in childbirth, one in an auto accident and one of scarlet fever.)

"My father started out as a circus 'leaper,'" says Donald. "He'd run down a ramp, jump over an elephant and land on a mat."

grindstone. Now he wants some "time to live"

Donald's mother, who ran away to join the circus when she was 14, was a bareback rider.

"When she and dad got married, she was only 15," says Donald. "Dad was much older—about 28. They formed their own act which they called 'The Nelson Comiques' for a while. I think they switched to Nelson because they owed a hotel bill."

Not long after Donald's "Black Bottom" debut, his father died backstage of a heart attack.

But the "O'Connor Family Theater Act" kept going, thanks to the determination of Donald's mother. When one of the boys married a dancer, the troupe got a new member.

"Everybody thought I was going to be a midget," says Donald. "I wore bangs and curls and was very small. I'd come out onstage to 'Hail, Hail the Gang's all Here' in a suit that made me look like a little old man. I'd keep strutting right out towards the audience till my brother Billy caught me by the coat tails, and swung me back onstage. Then we'd go into some aerobatics."

Our Way of Life

DONALD even did a solo song, "Keep Your Sunny Side Up" and a dance.

"I earned $25 a week but I didn't get my own salary till I married," he says. "I lived on an allowance and whatever I could snatch from my mother's pocketbook."

"Maybe it all sounds brutal, but it was our way of life and we liked it. Our family was very close. I didn't miss what other kids had because I really didn't know how they lived. School? Between the ages of five and 12, I took correspondence courses with my mother as my teacher. Later, I finished up my education in studio schools."

Being a child actor had its bumps and bruises for Donald.

► Once in San Francisco, he was playing tag near the stage door. A youngster slammed the door on his hand just as his cue to go onstage came.

"I could hear them playing 'Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here,'" says Donald, "but I couldn't get the door open. I kept yelling upstairs to vamp the music. Finally, I pulled out my hand. I was crying, my finger hurt, but I bounced onstage."

It turned out that the finger was broken.

Another time, brother Billy missed catching Donald by the coat tails as he leaned out over the footlights.

"He grabbed me by my left ear and swung me back before I hit the orchestra pit," says Donald. "My ear was bleeding, my white suit was a mess, and I was crying like mad. But I still kept singing 'Keep Your Sunny Side Up.'"

In Chicago, he slipped off a wall while playing between shows.

"I didn't tell anybody, but went on and did my handstands as usual," he recalls. "I got sicker and sicker. Finally, after the fourth show my mother took me to a hospital where they told me I'd been balancing on a broken arm."

Donald's "big rebellion" came when he was about 10. He got tired of hearing other kids call him a sissy so he sneaked off to a barber and had his Buster Brown bangs cut off.

"My mother looked at me and cried," says Donald. "She kept saying, 'My baby has grown up and ruined the act!'"

In 1938, the O'Connor family played a benefit for the Motion Picture Relief Fund in Los Angeles. After the show, a movie scout asked Donald to take a test at Paramount. He wound up in a picture with Bing Crosby and Fred MacMurray. It was called "Sing You Sinners."

► "I was pretty excited," says Donald. "About that time, I had a terrific crush on a girl named Judy Garland. She was about two years older than me, but we'd played the same bills in vaudeville. As a movie 'star' I figured I'd impress her. I didn't. She got in movies, too!"

Donald worked hard during the year he was under contract to Paramount. He made 11 pictures, including "Beau Geste," "Men with Wings" and "Million Dollar Legs."

At that time he began to wonder if there wasn't more to life than work.

"I saw how other boys could stay home and play and I resented having to go to a studio every day," he said. "I remember once all us kids started building a playhouse. I couldn't stay and finish it because I had to go to work. So the kids started to tease me. 'Look at the big movie actor,' they'd say. I didn't resent what they said; I only resented having to go away and leave them."

Hit the Road

WHATEVER HE DID, Donald strove for perfection. He did well in baseball, boxing, swimming, bowling and any sport "that didn't take too much time to learn."

At 14, he lost his job at Paramount when his voice began to change and he grew into the "awkward age."

"There was nothing left for us but to take the O'Connor Family Act out on the road again," he said. "Things got pretty rough. My brother Billy died and I tried to do both his act and mine."

A wire from a Hollywood agent saved the day. It was an offer to do "What's Cookin'?" a musical for KID WITH the accordion is Donald. It's his movie debut in "Sing You Sinners" with Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray.

Universal. Donald did that and 12 others for the same studio. Not one of them grossed less than $2,000,000.

On February 6, 1944, the day before he reported for Army service, Donald married Gwendolyn Carter. They were divorced last year and have a little seven-year-old daughter, Donna.

His latest movies like "Singing in the Rain" (MGM), "Call Me Madam" (20th Century-Fox) and "Walking My Baby Back Home," (Universal) have established him as one of Hollywood's top dancer-actors.

His performances on NBC-TV's Colgate Comedy Hour have earned him honors in television as a comedy star.

"I think I've learned to gratify the audience instead of myself," says Donald, "and it's a satisfying thing. A real entertainer would rather give than receive. Now if I can just peel off the layers of stage superstition and narrowness that my early years piled on me, I'll be all right. I think I have a 50-50 chance."

One clerk operating 10-key unit (foreground) feeds information into Distributon. With aid of electronic brain, she does work of 14 girls (rear).

This 'brain' is smarter than 140 girls

A new electronic machine can think of 39,000 things at once... By KARL KOHRS

CHICAGO. JOB WANTED: secretary. Efficient, esp. accounting. Can think of 39,000 things at once. No pay.

Any businessman reading the above ad probably would rush out to hire this fabulous secretary at once.

Her name is "Distributon," one of the first electronic "brains" to be put to work in the age-old business of keeping tabs on goods sold over the counter.

The Distributon has been installed at John Plain & Co. here, a mail order house that does about $2,000,000 worth of business a week in peak seasons.

To tabulate the orders involved, the firm normally would hire 150 temporary girl clerks. But with the Distributon doing most of the work, the entire operation is handled by 10 girls. That's why the company calls the Distributon a "140 GP (Girl Power)" machine.

The other morning, for example, one of the firm's clerks sat down at her desk and picked up an order which read: "One dozen woolen sweaters, stock number 351-551 at $4.45 each. Ship to Blank's General Store, Middletown, Kan."

The girl reached over to a device that looked like a 10-key adding machine, which feeds the Distributon. She pressed the keys. Instantly the Distributon recorded the sales order—one of the 15,000 received by the firm that day—filed all the information, and figured out how many sweaters were left in stock. The entire operation took exactly three-tenths of a second.

A Magnetic Drum

THE CENTER of the electronic brain is a magnetic drum that revolves at 1,750 r.p.m. It is magnetized in tiny spots, and there are 39,000 spots on the drum. These are "pockets" for information supplied in the form of numbers. When the girl clerk presses a key on her unit (see photo) the information is popped into one of the pockets.

The Distributon is the "brain child" of Walter H. Richter, president of John Plain, and Harold Lachman, chairman of the board. They conceived the idea, then got electronic engineers to design and build the machine.

It actually thinks for itself, has a fool-proof memory, won't accept wrong information and measures its work in split seconds. The memory drum can:

► Figure out how much food a restaurant will need on the basis of such factors as weather, tourist trade and comparison with last year's business.

► Show an airline clerk instantly the exact number of seats available on every flight 10 days in advance.

► Make it possible for passengers on a self-service elevator to call out floors, as they would to a human operator.

How it does these things is something only electronic engineers can tell you. As Harold Lachman said: "The other day I passed the desk of one of our clerks, and—just as a joke—I asked her: 'Do you know what you're doing?'"

"She looked at the Distributon quietly clicking away in the corner and then said in a kind of awed voice: 'I haven't the least idea. But it works.'"

TEN GIRLS in the accounting department, can process 15,000 orders a day. The Distributon works at such fantastic speeds that the 10 operators, pouring in figures simultaneously, can't keep pace with the capacity of the machine.

Science reveals startling news about the "meat" of fresh oranges

HERE'S WHAT YOU GET FROM THE "MEAT" OF FRESH ORANGES

● PROTOPECTINS	Help prevent many digestive ills and upsets in both adults and children. Aid regularly. Improve digestion, so you get more good from the food you eat.
● INOSITOL (of the B vitamins)	One of the substances credited with protecting the liver from harmful fatty deposits. Similar deposits are associated with hardening of the arteries and other degenerative diseases.
● BIOFLAVONOIDS	Research indicates the bioflavonoids strengthen the tiny blood vessels of the body—help them keep youthful in their function.
● PRO-VITAMIN A	Pro-vitamin A is changed in the body to vitamin A, necessary for children's growth and important for normal vision and healthy skin.

The peeled whole orange contains 10 times as much protopectin and bioflavonoids, 3 to 6 times as much pro-vitamin A, and up to twice as much inositol as the strained juice alone. Few other foods even approach the fresh whole orange as an all-round source of elements the body needs.

Orange juice is your best breakfast juice, important for its rich content of vitamin C. But more and more, nutrition scientists are stressing the value of the whole fruit.

They now advise that you regularly include fresh oranges among the eating fruits you buy for your family.

That's a special pleasure now during the navel season. Sunkist Navel Oranges are the finest eating oranges in the world. They're also the finest oranges for juice, because they give you more vitamin C per glass than any other orange or orange juice.

Look for the navel. It means:
Richer flavor . . . easy to peel . . . no seeds.

FROM CALIFORNIA AND ARIZONA

For better health, eat a NAVEL orange every day.

THE PROTOPECTINS and 3 other remarkable health factors in fresh oranges are found, to a large extent, not in the juice but in the "meat"—in the walls of the juice sacs and segments.

TO PEEL AN ORANGE—Score skin in sixths. Strip off as shown, leaving the white material that clings naturally.

2-WAY ICE CREAM CAKE ROLL

By Beth Merriman,
PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

FEBRUARY has three festive holidays, Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays, and St. Valentine's Day.

This two-way dessert is adaptable to any one of the three—just add appropriate favors. The cake may be baked as a large roll, filled with ice cream, or as little jelly rolls to serve with ice cream.

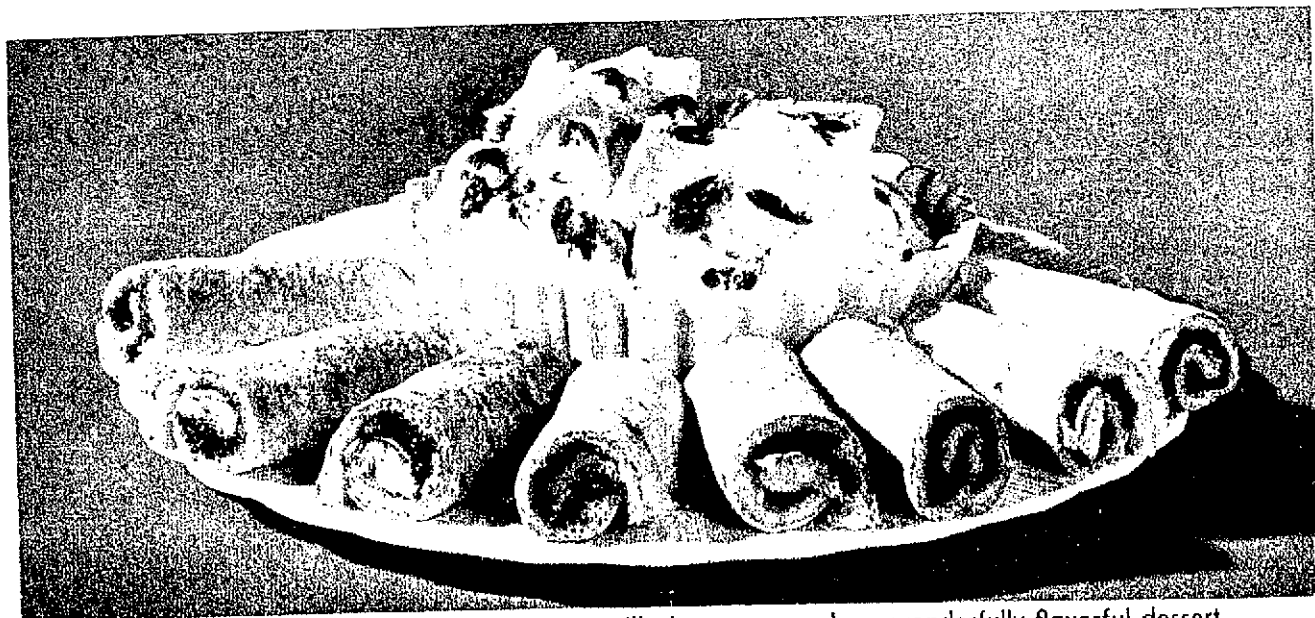

CHERRY-VANILLA ICE CREAM ROLL

4 eggs $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder 1 teaspoon vanilla
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sifted cake flour
2 pints pre-packaged cherry-vanilla ice cream
Have eggs at room temperature for greater volume. Grease bottom of a 15 x 10 x 1-inch pan; line with waxed paper and grease lightly. Beat eggs until foamy. Add baking powder and salt; beat until very light. Add sugar, about 1 tablespoon at a time; continue beating until very thick. Fold in vanilla and sifted flour a little at a time. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400°F., 13 minutes. While cake is baking, sift confectioners' sugar lightly over towel or brown paper. Loosen cake from pan with point of paring knife. Invert onto towel or brown paper. Remove pan; quickly remove waxed paper and trim off crisp edges. Roll up cake from narrow side. Wrap towel tightly around roll to hold it in shape. Cool. Unroll cake carefully. Cut ice cream into slices approximately $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick, or enough to cover roll. Reroll quickly. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

FOR INDIVIDUAL ROLLS

Pour half the batter into prepared pan. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400°F., 9 minutes. While cake is baking, sift confectioners' sugar lightly over towel or brown paper, and beat $\frac{1}{2}$ cup jelly with fork until smooth. Invert pan onto towel or brown paper. Remove pan; remove waxed paper. Trim crisp edges. Spread with jelly. Cut in half lengthwise, and four times crosswise to make ten small rectangles. Roll each rectangle as for jelly roll. Bake remaining batter; repeat. Serve with pre-packaged cherry-vanilla ice cream. Makes 20 rolls.

Individual jelly rolls, served with cherry-vanilla ice cream, make a wonderfully flavorful dessert.

KITCHEN HINT: if wrapped cake roll is hung lengthwise from a hook during cooling it will not flatten on bottom.

The BIG MEAL in the BIG CAN

Geo. A. Hormel & Co., Austin, Minn.

"We don't have to do anything with it...
it washes and dries our clothes all by itself"

The Bendix Duomatic is the only washer in the world that turns itself into a dryer...automatically clothes go in dirty, come out clean and completely dry.

Nobody has to do anything on washday—except the Duomatic.

"Not having to watch it is the real thrill. I have time for other things."

Mrs. H. W. Fulcher, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Stay home and bake a cake or go out and have fun while the Duomatic does your laundry. No wet wash to struggle with. No running back and forth. Just set the dials and the Duomatic takes over... washes, triple rinses and completely dries your clothes. All in one continuous operation!

"I even dress the children right out of it. Most of their things don't need ironing."

Mrs. J. C. Klempay Jr., South Bend, Ind.

There'll be no sorry wrinkles in Junior's jeans when they come out of the Duomatic. Fluff and tumble washing and drying makes clothes soft and fluffy, cuts ironing way down. Another great Duomatic advantage is Cycle-Air Drying. It sends heat and moisture down the drain so your room never gets damp and muggy.

"We only had room for one machine, and now am I glad. I wouldn't want anything but a Duomatic."

Mrs. J. Corcoran, W. Hartford, Conn.

The Duomatic actually does the work of two machines in the space of one. Use it as a miracle-making combination... or as a washer only... a dryer only. Set it and forget it, or stop it at anytime to add or remove clothes. As thousands of women can tell you—however you use it, the results will be wonderful.

"The way it keeps wash water hot is marvelous. Gets the clothes so much cleaner."

Mrs. Rose Hofsetz, Denver, Colo.

What Mrs. Hofsetz means, of course, is the Bendix Magic Heater that gets wash water extra hot and keeps it hot while the clothes are washing. Dirt can't hold out against the combination of fresh, hot suds and the remarkable Bendix hi-lift, deep surge Tumble Action.

THIS is what happens if you're caught kissing in Rome: young couple, seen by motorcycle cop, is nabbed, forced to pay $1.60 per kiss.

KISSING is permitted at railroad station, a favorite meeting place of teenagers. They sit happily on baggage trucks, ignore the cops.

A kiss costs you $1.60 . . .

ROME, Italy.

PEOPLE IN LOVE have a tough problem over here. They're in one of the world's most romantic cities—but under Italy's "public decency" law, they can get a ticket (above, left) for kissing in public.

Except at railroad stations or the airport, where they can pretend to be kissing goodbye, they get fined a minimum of 1,000 lire (about $1.60) a kiss. If a kiss is returned, the fine is doubled.

Police seldom bother a husband who gives his wife a dutiful peck on the cheek, but they keep a sharp lookout for young lovers. One of the reasons: police are allowed to keep 50% of the fines.

As a result, there's a constant search for places safe from police. Some of them: docks along the Tiber River (below), under bridges, behind park hedges and among the ruins along the Appian Way. Recently, an American tourist was fined 2,500 lire (about $4) for kissing his girl at a Rome sports stadium.

One wise Roman tried to beat the law. He rented a police uniform, handed out counterfeit tickets and kept 100% of the fine. (P.S. He got caught.)

Boat landing on Tiber is choice of these lovers. Police can see from opposite bank, often shout a warning.

FEEN-A-MINT is different because you chew it. It's different, too, because it removes mostly waste—not good food!

You see, FEEN-A-MINT does not work in the stomach, where food is being digested. That's why it does not take away a lot of the good food you need for energy.

Doctors know that FEEN-A-MINT works chiefly in the lower bowel... removes mostly waste, not good food!

What You

Meat, milk, eggs, water, potatoes and fish:

An authority blasts some

NEW YORK.

A MAN WENT into a restaurant in East Orange, N. J., to order breakfast. He got a glass of grapefruit juice and then asked for some milk.

The waitress looked aghast and said: "Oh, no. You can't have milk after grapefruit juice. You'll get sick."

She didn't know it, but she had picked a "food argument" with the wrong man. The breakfast customer was Dr. H. F. Kilander, an authority on what people know—and don't know—about food.

For more than 20 years, he has studied popular beliefs and misbeliefs concerning everything from drinking water to eating eggs, potatoes, meat and fish.

► The waitress was simply expressing a widespread misconception about eating—that grapefruit juice and milk can make you sick.

Even in this day and age, when people are eating better than ever, superstitions and misconceptions concerning food are still widespread.

What are the most common? Dr. Kilander, associate professor in the New York University School of Educa-

EVERYBODY COULD LEARN SOMETHING

... useful from a good course in nutrition, says Dr. Kilander (left). Just about everybody has some beliefs concerning food and his daily diet that are false or only half-true. Good courses in nutrition are offered by the Red Cross, by educational institutions in most communities and other agencies.

Don't Know about Food

People have strange ideas about all these—and other foods on every dinner table throughout the U.S.

beliefs you may have about what you eat . . .

tion and president of the American School Health Association, lists these:

1—About 25 per cent of the public still think there's some truth in the idea that fish is a "brain food." Of course, it isn't. No food "feeds" a specific part of the body.

2—White-shelled eggs are better for you than brown eggs. Although some people still believe that, it isn't so.

3—You need red meat in order to do continued, heavy manual work.

Not a "Must"

Again, meat is not a "must" for the manual laborer, but should take its place in a properly balanced diet.

4—Water is fattening. Actually water contains no calories, but there's evidence that 50 per cent of the people think it can make you fat.

5—Combinations of food like grapefruit juice and milk, pickles and milk or fish and milk are "unhealthy" and make you sick. Those ideas have no basis in scientific fact. They probably started back before the days of refrigeration when milk, fish and other foods spoiled because they weren't kept cold.

Perhaps one of the most widespread areas of misconception concerning diet involves so-called "fattening" and "thinning" foods.

A lot of people believe that grapefruit, pickles, lemons and other acid or "sour" foods have reducing powers. They don't.

On the other hand, many people feel that potatoes, bread and milk are fattening foods. Then, when they exclude potatoes and bread from their diets, they can't understand why they stay chubby.

The point is this: Whether you are fat or thin depends more on the volume of food you eat than on the kind. Your total calory intake is most important. If you eat in moderation, your diet can include milk, bread, potatoes and gravy—and you still won't get fat.

If you believe that you can eat a lot and then work it off with a few minutes exercise, you're in for disappointment.

You'd have to exercise almost constantly to take off appreciable amounts of weight. A few minutes a day of bending, stretching or walking would do little or no good.

Perhaps the source of most irritation among children concerns spinach. Children are told to eat it often because "it has iron—and iron's good for you."

Spinach Is Oversold

SPINACH is a valuable food, but it is somewhat oversold. The iron value is not as great as most people believe. And you get about the same food value from broccoli, chard and other greens.

There are some unique eating habits determined for the most part by sex.

For instance, some men tend to steer away from those diet necessities, vegetables, salads and fruit because they are not "he-man" foods. Twenty years ago, that was more pronounced than it is now.

While Dr. Kilander finds that young women know the most about what constitutes a well-balanced diet, they tend as a group not to be the best eaters.

Dr. Kilander's studies indicate that one-third to two-thirds of all high school girls eat an inadequate breakfast or no breakfast at all.

While fewer college girls omit breakfast, a significant number of them fail to eat lunch. So while young women know the most about proper diet, many of them do not apply their knowledge in every day living. Often the reason they eat the wrong foods, or not enough of the right ones, is that they want to keep slim figures.

So the best group, from the standpoint of eating well-rounded meals is the young male from about age 18 to 25.

Older Men Are Worst

WOMEN at middle age or older are second best, and finally, young women and older men are last.

Education has done much to make America's eating habits and attitudes toward food more intelligent.

Says Dr. Kilander: you don't run into as many people as you used to who think that raw meat is the "treatment" for a black eye. (Actually it has little if any physical value.)

Nor do you encounter the old saw about "eating crusts of bread to make your hair curly." That one used to be passed off regularly. It has gone virtually out of existence, but a good many other misconceptions are still widespread among the tens of thousands of people Dr. Kilander has surveyed through the years.

The Man in Charge

room is one of the showplace
restaurants of the West for two very good reasons: Its large picture windows, which present incomparable views of the Southland, and its superb cuisine.

The view is equally good by day or night. The Skyroom's
14th floor advantage provides its diners with brilliant technicolor
scenes of Long Beach's spreading harbor or such faraway
points as the Hollywood Hills,
Catalina or Balboa.

And the food is moderately priced, too. A splendid prime rib, served semi-a la carte, is priced at $2.95. A whopping,
16-ounce Texas steak — with French fries, garlic rolls and beverage—is $3.50. Other en-treees are lower priced. The service extended by Maitre
d' John Farrel and such red-
jacketed waiters as George Ross
(who waited on my wife and me
the other evening) is always extra-attentive. In addition,
there is always a good show at the Skyroom. Currently featured are Daryl Harpa's orchestra and petite Shanna Crockett,
the darling of Manila.

HOST at the Wilton is Ernest Glaser, cosmopolitan "caterer to kings" who has been associated with the hotel for 15 years. As catering executive, he is in charge of the Skyroom, the hotel's coffee shop and five banquet rooms which last year cattered to the staggering total of 1600 parties, receptions and other functions.

A native of La Tourbie,
France, Glaser puts in 65 hours a week at the Wilton. In his spare time, he cavorts in a Tyrolean costume as cellarmas-ter of the Wilton Cellar Club which has 3300 members who gather for community singing and to sip such Glaser specialties as "Flaming Dolls" and

He also puts in 25 hours a week

This is fabulous Ocean House, on the Santa Monica ocean front. Marion Davies, onetime film star, spent $4,000,000 building it.

World's Most Sumptuous Sea Shanty

ON THE WIDE, sandy beach of Santa Monica's ocean front there stands, forlornly today, a fabulous treasure house wherein kings, princes and tycoons once strolled in frank astonishment at the sight of luxury and opulent grandeur on a scale such as even they found hard to believe.

But royalty and other glittering VIPs tread the priceless inlaid teakwood and marble floors no more; nor do the genuine 18-carat gold ceilings any longer reflect the sparkle of diamond-studded tiaras that once were as common on the premises as costume jewelry on a dime store counter. Gone, too, is the petite, blonde hostess, Marion Davies, one-time reigning film star, who presided over this magnificent menage — an establishment once aptly, though irreverently, described as the "world's most sumptuous sea shanty."

Today, anyone may wander through the gilded halls. Well, perhaps not just anyone. But cracked, muddy boots might not be a bar to admittance if the wearer were in a buying mood and could back up his yen for a 110-room beach shack with around a million dollars in cash plus its equivalent in a triple-A credit rating. That's because the incredibly palatial Ocean House is for sale again — the second time since 1917, when Miss Davies sold the vast property to J. W. Drown, hotel and restaurant owner, who has been operating the establishment as an exclusive $50-a-day hostelry.

Drown also acquired a king-size mortgage to match the regal residence — a $654,000 plaster held by the Hearst Corp. — and he's found this even harder to lift than the multi-ton wrought iron ornamental gates separating the reception hall from the main drawing room. Therefore, he's seeking a bargain-hunting prospective buyer who might be inclined to take over the mortgage and his equity in the place. He estimates the latter as being worth $1,000,000.

THE CURRENT ISSUE of the National Buyers Guide, a unique journal of business opportunities which is distributed monthly to 15,000 prospective purchasers of business properties, carries a double-page, illustrated advertisement of Ocean House. The ad asserts that the place is "suitable as a de luxe highway hotel, exclusive health and recreation establishment."

Thus, when Drown declares in the publication that he'll consider any bona fide offer from a qualified investor, he may find a surprising number of inquiries. The National Buyers Guide has a reputation for locating buyers for some mighty strange properties.

For instance, the publication took on the job of locating a prospective purchaser for famed Mt. Wilson and was deluged with dozens of sincere inquiries within a week. And it's routine for it to find buyers for such unusual enterprises as nudist camps and earthworm farms. It even assumed the task of locating a cave for an apparently misanthropic citizen who wanted to get away from it all. In the light of such accomplishments, Drown's Georgian Colonial white elephant should be a cinch.

With the wide Pacific as its front yard, this 20th Century architectural fantasy is like no other week-end hideaway on earth except, maybe, King Louis XIV's historic 17th Century Palace of Versailles. However, those who have toured Miss Davies' Santa Monica cabana declare that not even Versailles could have surpassed it for sheer luxury and elegance of super-regal living.

AS A BEACH HOUSE, this sprawling establishment is a complete paradox and could qualify easily as Hollywood's Versailles. The house occupies most of the lot right up to the boundaries and this property, in turn, runs 756 feet on the street side with a depth of 190 feet to the water's edge. There are 55 bathrooms (a lot more than Louis ever had) and 37 fireplaces — some large enough to accommodate a championship basketball team without any player stooping.

A quarter century ago, when Ocean House was growing, rare mantelpieces were imported by the dozen. Entire rooms from famous British mansions were shipped intact — paneling, doors and sometimes ceilings, too.

The estate consists of five Colonial houses, strung along the beach and ingeniously integrated into a single structure. Miss Davies took possession of the property in 1926, when Santa Monica was still a quiet resort town with a long string of plush beach houses nestling cozily between beach and palisades. Now their rear walls are sooted by the exhaust of heavy traffic on a major highway which passes immediately behind them.

THE FILM STAR chose two then-remotely-situated and identical houses at the base of the palisades and proceeded to build a connecting center section between them. The famous architect, William Flannery, was engaged to integrate the structures into a single house.

Ocean House's impressive reception lounge has hand-cut crystal chandeliers created for the mansion by Tiffany, and rare imported Japanese wall screens.

Huge floor-to-ceiling mirrors enliven nearly every room of Ocean House. This is a corner of a bedroom suite sitting room in mansion.

A "small" bedroom in a guest house addition to main structure. No expense was spared to make visiting kings and princes comfortable.

The resulting two-story, U-shaped building was not considered adequate for the large-scale social plans of the new owner, though, and several partitions were removed. This elongation of rooms made the ceilings appear too low, so Miss Davies decided to jack up the second story. Then she changed her mind.

"As long as we've gone this far," she reasoned, "let's start all over and build the kind of house I really want."

And thus was the present peerless Ocean House begun. It was completed in 1930 and Miss Davies resided in the three-story main house for 15 years, until 1945. Adjacent were the homes of her father, her sisters and the building housing the family's 32 servants. Gardens filled with rare plants, tennis courts and two swimming pools completed the layout.

The 110-foot swimming pool in front of the main terrace is lined with imported Italian marble. The building's facade is of Vermont marble.

BEYOND the impressive fan-lighted entry hall is an open stairwell with hanging staircases on either side which rise two full stories. Seventy-five wood carvers worked more than a year on the balustrades alone! And in the moldings around the hall ceiling are 2300 little wooden buttons, each individually bored and glued in place.

The dining room, reception room and drawing room — each 60 feet long — came from Burton Hall, County Clare, Ireland. General Burton built his castle in 1749.

Dining room doorways are from Beckington Abbey, and the carvings in this room are originals by Grindling Gibbons from Cassiobury Park, the country home of the Earl of Essex, in Hertfordshire. Gibbons (1648-1721), England's famous wood carver, decorated Windsor Castle and St. Paul's Church, in association with the renowned Sir Christopher Wren.

CEILINGS are exact reproductions of famous European castles and all chandeliers are hand-cut crystal from Tiffany's. The drawing room ceiling is embellished with 18-carat gold leaf, untarnishable even from sea air.

Scenic wallpaper in the second and third floor hallways is from the old Zuber works in Alsace-Lorraine, handprinted from blocks saved from the bombings of World War I. The second floor papering consists of American landscapes; that of the third floor depicts the history of horse racing in Europe.

Miss Davies' suite on the third floor has an antique English marble mantelpiece from a 1760 Georgian mansion at Sutton, Surrey. Insets are of tan striped marble, and the carved center plaque shows bacchantes pulling a barrel of wine.

Two bathrooms adjoin the huge bedchamber. An equally expansive solarium-sitting room and a balcony overlook the sea.

All the main suites have two closets as large as the average hotel room, cedar-lined and equipped with vaults for fur storage.

The baths of the Davies suite are colored marble, the walls ringed with mirrors. Bathing pools are reminiscent of Roman days.

THE GREEN ROOM, or reception lounge, on the main floor is paneled in honey-colored pine. Its 18th Century fresco ceiling was imported from an old London town house. New York artisans worked six months applying its gleaming gold leaf. The Georgian mantelpiece is of carved marble from the 18th-Century Hatton Hall, home of Oscar Wilde's mother.

Grecian columns, outlined in gold leaf, and a white marble mantelpiece dominate the Gold Room, now a hotel-bar lounge. The mantelpiece in this room came from the library of the home occupied by King George

V while he was Prince of Wales.

A vast projection room — in reality, a nearly full-size, luxuriously-appointed theater — has a regulation motion picture screen that rises out of the floor at the touch of a button. The paneled walls are carved deal wood, from Cassiobury Park.

Adjoining is the banquet room, a marine room and a great library also paneled and carved exquisitely. Once this was the sitting room of Eleanor, Duchess of Northumberland.

Below the main floor level, flanking the swimming pool, are a dozen bath dressing rooms and the rathskeller.

The latter once was the interior of an inn located in Surrey, England. It dates from 1560. Its three small rooms were redesigned into a single room in Ocean House. Paneling is Tudor, and the mantelpiece is the oldest in the house, having been built in 1642. Bar, backbar and door trim are hand carved, dated 1560, and came from Charles of London.

In one second floor suite is a green-and-white marble mantel with delicate oval Wedgwood medallions, from Admiral Batey's London town house. The East Suite has a mantelpiece of green marble, from the Duke of Windsor's country house.

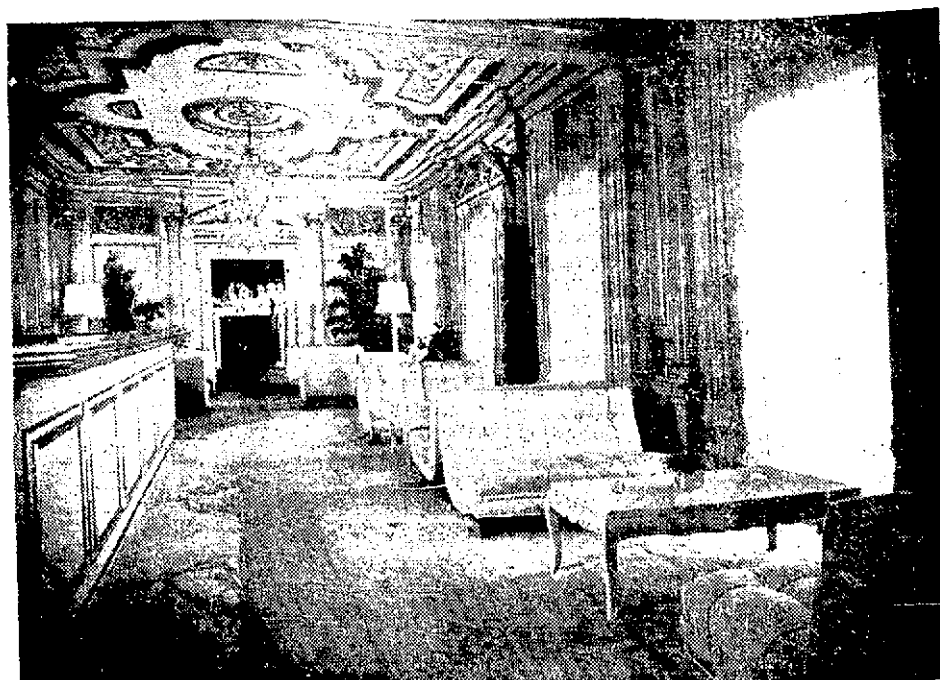

FROM ALL THIS, the present owner, J. W. Drown, has created an ultra-plush seaside resort hostelry for tired businessmen and other vacationers with a taste for the rare and beautiful. In addition to master suites at $50 a day, there are many single rooms which rent at correspondingly lower rates. All guests may use either of the two restaurants, banquet room, two bars, the 1700-locker beach house, 24 cabanas and the two swimming pools.

And, inasmuch as the Wheel of Fortune still spins, it develops at long last that Joe Doaks — who once could enter these magnificent and hallowed halls only in his dreams — may now enjoy the kind of living which not many years ago was reserved for only the world's upper-upper crust. That is, he may enjoy it — if he can stand the tariff.

And what fate awaits Ocean House if no prospective buyer appears? Will it succumb to the fearful fate met by many other of the world's showplaces in recent years — ruthless dismantling at the hands of a wrecking crew?

The present owner sincerely hopes that the saga will have a happy ending, after all. "I'm optimistic about the chances," he declares. "Business and art are not always homogenous factors in such a situation, but in the case of Ocean House they can be blended nicely. And the glue that holds them together is the undimmed glamour of the place's glorious past — and everybody knows that glamour is a very marketable commodity!"

The magnificent Gold Room, a 60-foot-long music room, is now one of two private bars serving $50-a-day guests who patronize converted mansion-resort.

When Valentines Played Cupid

THERE WAS A TIME when valentines were not the lightly affectionate or pleasantly casual affairs they are now. They were not sent then to mother, father, Cousin Kate, the children, the landlord and the boss.

They were deeply serious and the sending of a valentine was tantamount to a proposal. That is, if a man sent it. If a girl sent it, the hint it conveyed was that she was in a mood to accept a proposal.

And this was the pay-off: In those days, valentines weren't signed. Couples were supposed to be sufficiently - ahem, good friends, to be able to guess the identity of the sender.

Collecting old valentines, particularly with the envelopes in which they were sent, has been a 20-year hobby of Stephen M. Farndell, 413 E. Third St., who moved here a year ago from Chicago. And he has some honeys.

HOW ABOUT THIS lithograph valentine, embossed and gold-decorated, sent to Sally Palmer of Greenville, Green Co., N. Y.:

"Give me, thy heart, I ask no more.

Unsulled, free from guile,
Unto no other wealth I soar
Blest with thy sweet smile.
Give me thine heart just as it is,
'Tis all I wish to own.
And let me enjoy the bliss
Of that sweet gift alone."

It bears a 5-cent stamp and the date Feb. 11. Farndell estimates the year as 1845.

And this one, also a lithograph but more carefully done, of a dandy of the period and a girl in a low-necked gown in a garden, was sent probably also 1845 from Boston to C. J. Capen of Dedham, Mass.:

"Dearest, each bird is choosing now

A partner to his mind
And this should give a timely hint

To us of human kind."

If that valentine didn't help C. J. Capen make up his mind, nothing could have. Not only was the valentine amorous but it was in an amorous envelope, embossed with cupid, a shell, a bird and flowers.

By Vera Williams

ALONZO TODD of Jackson, Mich., was cherished by some cousin in the year 1869. This is the paper lace valentine he got from her:

"TO A COUSIN

Dear Cousin, from a Cousin
Thou

Will prize this little heart I own

Which speaks the language of the heart,

Though for a while we've parted been

Prove that thy welfare care will be

Derived by one who loveth thee."

"Derived" doesn't seem to be exactly the right word; what "aye" is doing in there is a matter of conjecture, and "been" has to be pronounced "been" to make it rhyme. But no one can say that is not a spirited valentine.

HERE'S A VERSE that goes with a valentine of a little girl with a white cat in her arms playing the piano (the girl, not the cat):

A WISH

"May Cupid's shafts, by love impress

Sink softly, soothing in thy breast

Inspiring, raising love for me
As chaste and true as mine for thee."

Here is a valentine of 1880, and what could be more direct?

"I have a little kiss or two
which I myself can't use;
If they be any use to you,
Why take them -- if you choose."

George Ralph of Fort Howard, Wis., now Green Bay, Wis., rated a valentine adorned with flowers and little captions like "Truth," "Devoted to You," and "My love for thine, Dear Valentine," and inside this message:

"MINISTERS OF LOVE

All joys, all passions, all delights

The thrills of this mortal frame

Are but the ministers to Love
And feed his sacred flame."

Dearest, each bird is choosing now
A partner to his mind,
And this should give a timely hint
To us of human kind.

If a man sent this Valentine (circa 1847-1850), it meant just what it says, a marriage proposal.

All right, get your great-grandmother to explain that one to you.

AMONG THE INTERESTING valentines is one bearing a Benjamin Franklin stamp, which Farndell says was the first stamps of the United States, issued in 1847. (Before that, stamps sometimes were issued by individual postmasters.) This valentine was sent to Miss Sarah C. Simmott of Albany, N. Y., and the Troy & White Hall railroad cancellation bears the date of Jan. 9. Farndell thinks the year was about 1850. "Maybe somebody didn't know the date of St. Valentine, or maybe he thought it would take a long time to get to Albany," he comments.

Farndell has some of those fancy turn-of-the-century valentines that opened up like a fan. One is a super cut-out affair with Cupid shooting a volley of hearts from a forget-me-not cannon.

Did Farndell ever send a valentine and mean it?

"Yes," he admits, with a twinkle in his eye. "That was about 1910 or 1911, I think. . . . Valentines weren't quite so elegant then, and I don't think they said as much."

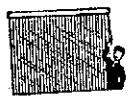

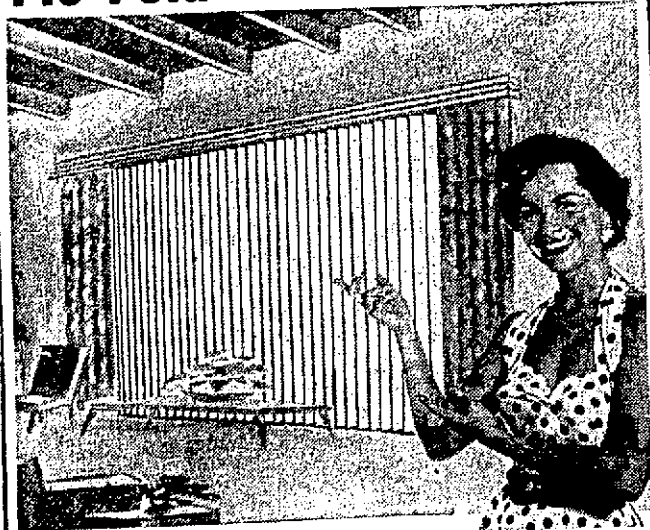

Comic Valentine, 1902: A few of these are still around but usually were torn up when received.

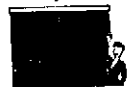

Stephen M. Farndell, collector, displays one of the collapsible-type Valentines popular at the turn of the century, and usually delivered in person.

Build a Cabinet for That Table TV

By De Vita Breslin

IF YOUR TABLE MODEL television set seems to have an overgrown look and doesn't quite blend in with its background in your living room or den, you can make it a really attractive addition to your room by tucking the set into a versatile cabinet that can be built for it easily and inexpensively, a cabinet that doubles in brass for many other uses, too.

The cabinet illustrated above, which was constructed for less than $10, was made of pine and was given a maple finish to harmonize with the tan leatherette of the set.

Your own needs will dictate the size of your cabinet, and, of course, the dimensions of the center section will be determined by the size of your television set. Shelves may be spaced to accommodate books, magazines, record albums, trophies or art objects.

The cabinet can be built most economically by using 1x12-inch second grade white pine. Of course, a better finish is obtained with more expensive wood. For the TV section, where wider lumber is needed, two 1x12s may be joined with corrugated fasteners, giving the 24-inch depth needed for most sets. One-inch molding is used for shelf supports, and 1x2-inch strips are used on the TV shelf to support the set and across the back of the cabinet for

DOES TIPPING BOTHER YOU? HERE'S HOW IT'S DONE 'ROUND THE WORLD

DO WAITERS SCARE YOU? Does worrying about the tip spoil your meal? If you suffer from this waiter neurosis, don't be concerned; you're just like everyone else.

In an effort to find out if this problem exists even in such far-away spots as the Fiji Islands, Pan American World Airways' representatives in the Pacific and Orient areas have conducted a survey on tipping and what to do about it in that part of the world.

The answer: Ten per cent. That's the average, but nearly all points say if you get a little extra service, you raise the ante a bit.

Reports from Australia are precise about amounts but blame present-day tipping there on Americans.

The British races are not "tip-happy." Visitors are the only ones who tip taxi drivers.

Tips for ordinary services revolve around the humble shilling (10 cents). For more service, two shillings will do. For good service at one of the better dining rooms or night spots waiters expect five shillings and seldom get more than a 10-shilling note ($1).

AN AUSTRALIAN pays what he thinks is enough if he intends to tip at all. He tolerates no kicks about the size of the tip. In general, Australians take a dim view of tipping.

Across the Tasman Sea, in New Zealand, they are more conservative. Only persons who expect a tip are porters, waiters and waitresses, and hotel room maids. And these are tipped when they render the service.

The recommendation is that you tip them with the coin nearest in size to what you would tip at home. If you give a quarter (7 cents) for subsequent rounds. New Zealand taxi drivers don't expect tips and there are no shoe shine boys.

If you should happen to go to the Fiji Islands, the tipping tariff is well laid out. To porters carrying your bags and waiters bringing your drinks to the room give one Fijian shilling (12 cents). Waiters get 10 per cent of the bill (if you can figure it out in pounds, shillings and pence) but not over five shillings (60 cents).

IN JAPAN, where they had American tourists before the war, and are beginning to have them again, they are used to tipping. The rule here is 10 per cent, and often the hotel puts it on the bill. In Hong Kong the custom is from 10 to 15 per cent, with a Hong Kong dollar (16 cents) for ordinary bag carrying.

In the Philippines those who serve you, and they are many, are quite tip-conscious. But the report from Manila says, "You can feel at ease if you follow U. S. tipping practice with an equivalent amount or slightly higher."

In Hawaii you are, of course, back again on a dollar basis and you'll be rewarded for your generosity — and probably penalized for stinginess — just the same as in New York, San Francisco or Sauk Center.

Move Into the Closet

By
Caroline Coleman

A PRIVATE WORK spot in your home doesn't have to be a space-consuming luxury. An extra closet can be turned into a convenient "office in miniature" where you may keep office hours whenever you like and leave your work comfortably spread out behind closed doors where it can be resumed easily at any time.

The convenient little nook pictured was fashioned from a 2½ by 5 ft. closet that once held an in-a-door bed. The storage shelf above the hanger rod forms a ready-made book shelf, while often-used reference books are lined up on the desk. Informal photographs and sketches in matching frames are so arranged on the three walls as to create the effect of better proportion within the small area. A pot of ivy as a bookend and a shag rug on the floor give the final touch of warmth.

Whether your work involves a typewriter or a sewing machine, a stamp album or a scrapbook, you will enjoy a private corner for your activities, where all of your equipment is always at hand, and where you can close the doors and concentrate away from the distractions of the rest of the house.

If your home hasn't a den or any other informal corner, this little "quasi-den" will provide a place to tack up informal snapshots and photographs, diplomas and certificates, maps, or any mementos you want to display. A hobby or trophy collection that might not fit in with the formal decor of the rest of your home could be housed here and "shown by appointment only."

Additional shelves of varying dimensions could be added for the storage or display needs of any pursuit. And a simple built-in work surface may take the place of a desk.

RESORT and Travel Guide

El Morro, 16th Century fortress in Puerto Rico, is a point of interest with tourists. The fort withstood assaults by Sir Francis Drake and by the Buccaneers.

ALL ROADS are leading toward the Caribbean. A January survey of transportation companies and hotels, made by American Express Travel Service, shows thousands of Americans on the move to warm, sunny climates.

Visitors to the Caribbean last winter totaled 108,000, not counting cruise passengers. This year cruises are departing from New York and New Orleans at a merry clip, and most are going out full. Airlines are operating more frequent flights to the South than last year.

Resort Airlines, whose program of Flying Houseparties began three years ago, has carried 30,000 passengers, is equipped to handle three times more travelers this winter than last. The enlarged program offers first-time non-stop service to the Caribbean for midwesterners.

BEGINNING Feb. 2, British Overseas Airways' peak schedule to Jamaica and Nassau went into effect, with eight flights a week — two of them tourist — from New York. Bookings are running 15 per cent ahead of last year.

The island of Jamaica, where hotel reservations are usually heavy, expects 3400 visitors during the January-March season.

Haiti is stepping up in tourist importance. There are 27 per cent more hotel rooms there than last winter. The Haitian Mardi Gras takes place from Feb. 28-March 2.

National Airlines reports traffic to Cuba running 30 per cent ahead of 1953. American Express has noticed increasing attention being paid to the Vera-Cruz area.

Puerto Rico expects 35,000 American visitors this winter. Hotel reservations are running 10 per cent over last year. A 10-day Ponce de Leon festival begins Feb. 18.

Bermuda hotel bookings are "picking up fast" from the latter part of February through April, according to the William P. Wolfe hotel organization.

Romancing with Yvonne De Carlo in rehearsal, Joel McCrea finds son, Jody, watching.

Dad Joel steps aside to permit his confident son to demonstrate his technique.

When Joel McCrea, Yvonne De Carlo and film troupe of Universal-International Studio set out to film "Border River" last summer, they found Rio Grande nearly dry. Needing full stream, they shifted to the Colorado, near Moab, Utah. There McCrea got himself into another kind of deep water. Son, Jody, 19, in his first bit role, watched romancing. Dad Joel decided to show him how but, like most 19-year-olds, Jody proved independent thinker in lover role, as shown herewith...

Sleuthing revealed Jody has practiced with Barbara Burck, 18, Moab mayor's daughter!

A Continent Helps Film an Opera

HOW IS A SUPER-COLOR-SAL stage spectacle presented expressly for today's wide movie screens by the most modern color cameras?

It's not easy, but the methods are intensely interesting. As an example, almost overwhelming problems had to be overcome when Cinerama moved its three-eyed camera and crew to Milan, Italy, to photograph and record, for the first time, a performance by the world-famed La Scala Opera.

For one thing, the company — singers, musicians, dancers and staff — numbering some 900 people, was scattered all over Europe. Before the ballet and the triumphal march that is the finale of the second act of "Aida" could be shot, a lighting plan had to be devised. Cinerama's very broad field of vision, easily scanning the 600 or so people who filled the mammoth stage, made extraordinary demands in the way of lighting for its color photography. Some 53 high-intensity arc lights had to be acquired from points as distant as England. Three heavy-duty generators, German-built, were rushed up from Rome. It was enough illumination to light a good-sized town. Each light had to be secured or hung out of the camera's line of light without scarring the famous playhouse. What really complicated the problem, Cameraman Harry Squires recounts, was that no one in the crew spoke Italian.

To achieve the audience participation sense, a live audience

had to be provided and one that looked as impressive and as well dressed as an actual La Scala audience would look. This was solved by the intervention of the Toscanini family.

Friends were invited as guests of the Toscaninis to hear the brilliant young pianist, Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli. The concert was given, and very successfully. The only unique feature was that they were photographed applauding. The crew finished its job in one evening.

"Aida" got under way. Platforms for cameras and lights were everywhere.
Three scenes — the ballet, the triumphal march and the temple scene — were photographed exactly as they would ordinarily be done by the Scala — the same costumes, scenery and players.
All day Saturday and Sunday, the players and singers and dancers went through their routines to Verdi's noble music, recorded on seven microphones for stereophonic sound. Ballerina Luciana Novarro drew applause each time she concluded her dance. Members of the orchestra seemed enchanted with the "play-back" of the score. But the real test would be a showing of the whole assembled scene, film and sound, for the approval of Signor Luigi Oldani, director general of La Scala in New York months later. Permission to record La Scala's famous company had been conditional on his approval of the filmed scene.

Months later, the distinguished director was flown to the New York studio. The three projectors threw their images on the giant curved screen. The opening passages of the ballet music began. Signor Oldani sat, rigid on a hard-back kitchen chair.
A half hour later he emerged smiling, and from Italy's most famous impresario came the comment, "I have discovered a new La Scala."

COOKING

Serve Tasty Seafood for a Dinner Treat

By Mildred K. Flanary
Press - Telegram Home Economics Editor

LOUIS XIV had a chef named Vatel who, when the filet de sole for His Highness' dinner failed to arrive, killed himself.
Vatel was an extremist, and a bit ridiculous, no doubt, but would that American homemakers had just a little more of his appreciation of the possibilities and nutrition of this food of the sea.
For people living in a country all but surrounded by water, Americans are skimpy seafood eaters. The average consumption is only 11 pounds per person per year as against 145 pounds of meat per person. Too, the American housewife knows very little about seafood. She objects to its bones, to its odor, and, to speak quite frankly, she really doesn't know how to cook
it. Yet in these times of high meat prices, this culinary inexperience is bad economy.
Truth is, there's more real oomph, more taste and eye appeal to many a seafood dish than in many of the other more popular foods we serve. Mrs.

John C. Cottrell, 26 Lindero Ave., is one outstanding and meticulous hostess who has a rare appreciation of this fact. She not only realizes the possibilities of the subtle blending of seafoods, but in the captivation afforded by these delectable dishes as they meet the eye. She plans generous servings, too, for her family and her guests always come back for repeats. Her recipe for "Filet de Sole en Papillotte" is absolutely as good and as intriguing as it sounds.
You'll find it below. Clip it out and try it this week!

Kitchen Tip:

Mrs. Cottrell's Fish Tip: Cut cucumbers into slices about 2 inches thick, scoop out centers to make a cup, sprinkle with salt, turn upside down to drain.
Fill centers with well seasoned fresh crabmeat. Serve well chilled, topped with a sprig of parsley.

Mrs. Cottrell's Filet de Sole en Papillotte:

- 4 large or 8 small filets of sole
- 2 tablespoons of lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons of oil
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 tablespoon brandy
- 1 carrot, peeled and quartered
- 2 tablespoons minced celery tops
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1 bay leaf
- 1/2 fresh tomato, chopped
- 1 10 1/2-oz. can condensed mushroom soup (undiluted)
- 1 3-oz. can broiled mushroom caps

Wipe filets with a paper towel; sprinkle with lemon juice and brush with oil. Broil 4 minutes on each side under high heat. Meanwhile heat wine and add brandy, carrot, celery, parsley, bay leaf and tomato. Cook slowly for 10 minutes. Strain through cheesecloth or very fine strainer; add mushroom soup and mushroom caps.
Blend well and bring to the boiling point; set aside. Take an ample section of foil paper for each portion. Grease well. Place a spoonful of sauce on each piece of foil and place a filet on the sauce; cover with remaining sauce. Crease foil to form a rectangular package to hold in flavor and aroma. Place packets on baking sheet under broiler about 8 inches from the heat for 15 minutes. Serve in foil, rolling it back slightly to form an open dish. Yield: 4 portions.

of casual, welcoming informality. Toward this end, the Schliepers have chosen appointments that take their colors from the warmer sections of the color wheel, with just enough spicy greens and cool aquas to add variance. A deep-piled soft cocoa chenille rug completely carpets the house — with the exception of the dining-kitchen area. Therefore, every room is pervaded with this warm, muted tone. It is interesting to find that, in combination with various other colors, the carpet takes on a different appearance in every room.

THE LIVING ROOM walls are papered in a tiny provincial motif using sage green and yellow on a ground of deep chocolate. The expansive, diamond-paned windows looking toward the street are curtained with casement draperies of a semi-opaque rose-cocoa hue.

The wall opposite faces the patio and the pool beyond and consists almost entirely of sliding doors of plate glass. The patio with its colorful array of rattan furniture and its cleverly built-in refreshment bar seem an integral part of the living room, so unobtrusive is the glass wall.

Focal point of interest in the room is a huge open fireplace of used brick. Black wrought iron accessories and a black fire screen promote the air of early Americanism. Opposite the fireplace at the other end of the room is a delightful little maple spinet standing under a mirror that reflects the cheerful warmth of the fireplace.

CENTERING the C. H. Schlieper home like a magnificent turquoise jewel is a 35-foot oval pool. Its setting is pale green cement bordered with a lush planting in the tropical manner. Behind a low, curving retaining wall, Australian tree fern and glossy acanthus plants dip their feathery foliage toward the water, creating a striking scene overlooked by every room in the house.

"L." The exterior is a combination of cocoa-tinted stucco and vertical siding with a cocoa driftwood finish. Diamond-paned windows and a heavy shake roof add immeasurably to its feeling of elegant simplicity.

The front door opens directly into the living room. In here, everything from the open ceiling with its massive beams to the raised-hearth fireplace is calculated to create an atmosphere

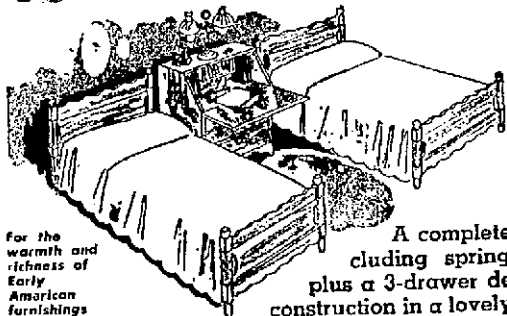

the quaint dining room with its mammoth indoor barbecue of used brick. Its rounded facade and arched firebox are unusual and rustic. Here, too, the ceiling shows its giant beams and a glass wall invites diners to step out into the patio.

A ratchet-type hanging lamp fixture with a beautifully polished brass shade hangs over the maple dining table, ready to be raised or lowered at will. The table is surrounded by ladder-backed cane-seated chairs that add the right touch of provincialism to the scheme. At either side of the maple server is a wing chair and a platform rocker, wonderfully comfortable chairs for the niceties of conversing with a friend over a mid-morning cup of coffee.

TWO COUNTERS separate the kitchen from the dining room. Into one counter is set the Thermador range. Both the counters (as well as the kitchen drainboards) are faced with Italian tile of a dull terra cotta finish. Over the range is an attractive scalloped copper hood.

Mrs. Schlieper's kitchen has taken a sharp departure from the ordinary workaday kitchen. The floor is tiled with the Italian terra cotta and random-covered with gay cotton rugs. The cupboards are of elegantly finished birch with a pilgrim finish. The hardware, too, adds its share of beauty, crafted as it is of hammered copper.

Down a hallway from the dining room are the two downstairs bedrooms with their bath that opens to poolside for the convenience to bathers. The direct accessibility of the bathroom to the exterior saves housecleaning chores.

The Schliepers' little daughter, Sharon, has a room delicately papered in a briar rose pattern employing a tiny rosebud motif. Her maple twin beds have Martha Washington spreads, demure and snowy-white. And the broad expanse of windows overlooking the pool is lavishly curtained in pink slubbed draperies edged in ruffles and topped with a tightly-gathered valance.

The two boys, Stanley and Steven, have a bedroom that enjoys a similar view and is carried out in tones of hunter's green and brown. A birch cornice box is embellished with their names spelled out on either end in rope. The plaid wallpaper and deep green bedspreads lend a boyish feeling to the room.

THE MASTER SUITE is located upstairs over the garage, the only part of the house on a second-story level.

The furnishings — twin beds, double chests and the wing chair and tier table grouping — are of maple. The spreads are stark white.

"S. & H." GREEN STAMPS

These two fine, well-trained collies—Highland Frost, left, and his father, Highland Commander III, are the pets of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Miner of 4224 Clark Ave.

THE TRUE DOG LOVER takes an interest in his voluntary charge and helps his pet fit into family life as a respected companion, or he goes even further and trains his dog to perform in obedience tests, according to Paul Miner, who is active in obedience training classes for dogs at Pan American Park.

The task of keeping a dog is usually self-imposed upon the pet owner and there is no excuse for neglecting the training of a canine companion, especially since dog education classes are held in the Long Beach area, Miner says. This training pays off when, instead of a yipping, badly-mannered pet, a dog learns to be well-behaved.

Mr. and Mrs. Miner, 4224 Clark Ave., own two fine obedience-trained collies—Highland Frost, one year and three months old, and his father, Highland Commander III, three years old. Highland has 18 trophies, many ribbons and his C.D.X. (Companion Dog Excellent). His son is rapidly following in his footsteps, now possessing several cups, ribbons, and his C.D. (Companion Dog).

The beautiful, rough-coated collie learns rapidly and easily and is therefore one of the most popular and loved dogs in existence. He has been developed by careful breeding, and the refinement process still continues.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S interest in this breed stimulated the Scotch market in the early '60s. About 1880, the collie received great impetus in America. Of course his ancestors go far back into history when sheep herding first existed.

The collie is a lithe and active dog — strong, speedy, with a facial expression denoting high intelligence. His eyes are soft and loving, yet alert. He is a poised, confident animal, willing to learn and serve in any capacity as companion, watch dog, herder, or whatever the circumstances demand.

"The way it keeps wash water hot is marvelous. Gets the clothes so much cleaner." You'd think it was enough, just to have a machine that's both a washer and a dryer in the space of just one. But the Duomatic goes one better. It washes cleaner than ever before—thanks to its exclusive Magic Heater that gets wash water hotter and keeps it hot, for those tough wash jobs. Nasturtiums Are Flashy, Useful

By Burleigh M. Beakley

NASTURTIUMS are bright, hard-working little herbs bearing five-petal, spurred flowers. The round leaves and fleshy stems, and later the large seed balls, are edible. The English pickle them and sell the product commercially as Indian-cress. And down in South America, where the plant comes from — in Peru and Bolivia — the housewives boil the roots for pot herbs. But in the United States the leaves and fleshy stems are used as fresh greens, the peppery bite they add gives just the right "zip" to a tossed salad.

The nasturtium, or Tropaeolum, should be sown in a permanent location as it won't stand transplanting after attaining large size. Poor soil and a north exposure are a good combination. Too-rich soil will cause the foliage to outgrow and hide the blooms.

IN GENERAL, the nasturtium is divided into two classes; dwarf and climbing. The dwarf variety grows 12 to 18 inches high and, because of its dense, bushy structure, single, double and frilled flowers and fragrance, makes a good choice for borders, beds and cut-flowers. The cut-flowers make the best showing when displayed in glass bowls.

The climbing nasturtiums will run six to eight feet and, for the most blooms and fragrance, should be pruned to two or three runners. If not grown on a trellis, they should make a handsome cover for unsightly sand banks or old fences.

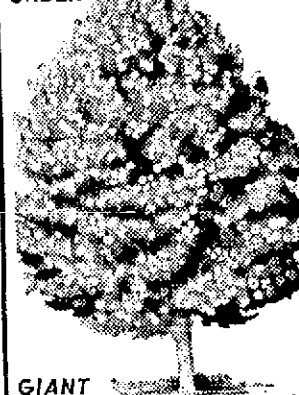

Some of the newer hybrids do not seed rapidly, can best be propagated by cuttings. When selecting a plant from which to take cuttings, and to be sure of getting good stock, choose by fragrance, double flowers, novel colors, and flowers held well above the leaves as these are the marks of the best grown varieties.

THE BLOOMS of the nasturtium spread 2½ inches and the more choice hybrids are double with a distinct ruffle to the wide petals. The colors vary widely from pale yellow to orange, red and very deep mahogany.

Being a bright, bold growing plant, both in the dwarf and climbing varieties, some care should be taken in locating the nasturtium with other flowers so that it won't crowd them out.

The black bean aphid is the most common invader of the stems and undersides of the leaves. The bug's presence can be detected by the curling and distortion of the leaves. Spray or dust with a good contact insecticide will control the pest.

Let It 'Snow' in Your Garden

By Bob Gilmore

RARE, INDEED, is snowfall in Long Beach, but gardens can gain something of the effect of snow with plantings of white-toned ornamentals. These blooms definitely will add interesting high lights to the garden scene.

For a low-growing winter plant the pansy is ideal. For many years seeds and plants were offered only in mixture but now you can obtain separate shades and the white pansies are splendid. Not only will they add a touch of gaiety to your outdoor scene but they also perform well indoors at a time when white blooms are scarce. Pansies want a cool, moist growing environment, exactly what you can expect during the next few months.

Ranunculuses, which formerly were propagated almost entirely by corms for amateur growers, are now available in plants. They need simply be transplanted to White-toned primulas in mass plantings can provide your spring garden with an effect of a snow carpet.

For flowers and lawns

Get triple-action benefits, says garden consultant Joe Littlefield. The ideal complete food for all plants. 1. Acts fast, you see results in a week. 2. Continues feeding for a long period. 3. Provides organic matter to improve soil. Insist on triple-action Red Star Gro-Master at nurseries and garden dealers.

Garden Tips
Red Star Garden Consultant

You'll dress up your place if you green up the grass with a feeding. If that lawn hasn't been fed for three months, when grass is dry but soil moist, spread 8 cups of Gro-Master per 100 sq. ft. and water in thoroughly. Do this every 3 months; you'll have a wonderful lawn.

Trees and shrubs, too, reward you generously when they get a spring feeding with triple-action Red Star Gro-Master. Feed trees planted this year 3 cups per inch of trunk diameter, measured 3 ft. up from ground; older trees 8 cups per 100 sq. ft. of area under branches; shrubs 3/4 cup per 10 sq. ft. of area around the shrub.

Time to dig up and divide old clumps of shasta daisies, perennial delphinium, gerbera, day lilies and mums. (Iris come later!) And you still can set out larkspur, snapdragon, stock, Iceland poppy and Pacific hybrid delphinium. After they're established, feed Gro-Master and watch 'em bloom their heads off.

your garden. This saves time and produces color in your garden much faster than by planting the bulbs or corms. The plants are about five to six weeks old when offered. It is best to obtain the large, double flowered sorts. At this time of the year ranunculuses should be planted in a sunny spot. Later on, if the flowers are to appear when the weather warms up, then a partial shady spot will prove best.

CHIRYANTHEMUM plants are still being offered by nurserymen. These may be obtained in one-gallon containers and then immediately transferred to your garden. Mums will want a sunny spot at this time. Some types are as small as a button, while others grow as large as a dinner plate. Disbudding and disbudding also makes it possible to control the size of the individual flowers as well as the quantity of the entire crop.

Primulas are among the earliest flowers to bloom in the spring. Their name indicates this but, as a matter of fact, in Southern California they frequently bloom even before the new year. The most popular variety is the fairy primrose, known as Primula malacoides. The flowers are small and dainty with fringed petal edges. Primulas are grown as an annual but they tend to reseed themselves each year.

ICELAND POPPIES are becoming more popular each year. The stems of the Gartford strain are especially long and wiry, making the flowers splendid for both indoor and outdoor decoration. The petals have a beautiful crinkled texture. Iceland poppies, as is indicated by their name, can tolerate a great deal of cold. Plants may be propagated from established seedlings as it is now rather late to start them from seed. During the winter months they will do best in a sunny location.

One of the purest white tones in the flower kingdom are available in the stock family. The Giant Winter Nice strain grows quickly at this time and the Imperial stocks are also very popular for general garden purposes. Beautiful white-toned varieties are available in both types. Stocks should not be over-watered as they are susceptible to a fungus that seems to thrive in damp spots. The flowers have a strong perfume and are also one of our best winter-time cut flowers.

Dusty Miller Is a Handy Plant

Sunday, February 7, 1954

ALL GARDENS need a few gray foliage plants to tone down the brighter colored flowers, accent green lawns and shrubs and for use in flower arrangements. The Dusty Miller fits this need perfectly as it grows easily and rapidly in the Long Beach climate.

The use of dwarf Dusty Miller (Centaurea Candidissima) for borders is advised. It is a compact grower with thick silvery leaves that set off a flower bed to advantage. However, due to the foot-high growth that it attains it would be wise only to use it in conjunction with medium and tall growing bedding material such as calendula, stock and snapdragons, the California Bedding Plant Advisory Board advises.

For bare corners or to hide a water faucet or some other distracting spot it is best to use plants of Centaurea gymnocarpa, or tall Dusty Miller. This variety grows to 1½ or two feet and spreads 2½ to three feet across. The leaf is finely cut or indented and is also of a silvery gray color. It is particularly useful as foliage material in flower arrangements.

In winter planting of Dusty Miller, good drainage is essential as the plants are subject to stem rot under too wet conditions. Light sandy soil is preferable, but Dusty Miller will thrive in any good garden soil. Try a planting along the driveway or spot a plant or two at strategic points throughout the garden. The result will be pleasing.

form well during the cooler months of the year. Pastel shades predominate. The plants are easy to grow, requiring very little care or attention.

Watsonias which resemble glads are a rather interesting novelty for planting at this time. The flowers appear in great masses and have a bell-like shape. Set the bulbs from three to six inches deep.

During the cooler months of the year when houses tend to be over-heated make certain that your plants do not suffer. Stuff rooms are not ideal for indoor plants. It may prove advisable to remove your ornamentals when a room becomes crowded or filled with cigaret or cigar smoke. Also make sure that your indoor subjects have plenty of water, evaporation being faster in a warm room.

Golf Brand flourished anywhere—in sun or shade, on level or grade

Because Golf Brand is blended to meet all the various conditions found in every lawn, there's no need to buy special seeds for special lawn conditions. Golf Brand gives you sun-loving grasses—including famous Merion Bluegrass—to keep the lawn green in hot weather—grasses that stand deep shade . . . grasses with root structures that cling to slopes. Wherever you plant Golf Brand, the particular grasses best suited for the conditions take over. With reasonable care, you get a lush carpet of green over your entire lawn, all season long, year after year.

This blend of grasses grows a lawn so thick it crowds out weeds

True, most seeds give you a good looking lawn in a hurry. But they gradually thin out after the first season, leaving the lawn a perfect target for weeds. Golf Brand Lawn Seed, on the other hand, blends 11 perennial long-lasting grasses for an ideal combination: early lush growth plus ever-increasing turf thickness. You get a dense tightly-knit turf that grows constantly thicker, resists weed invasion for years and years.

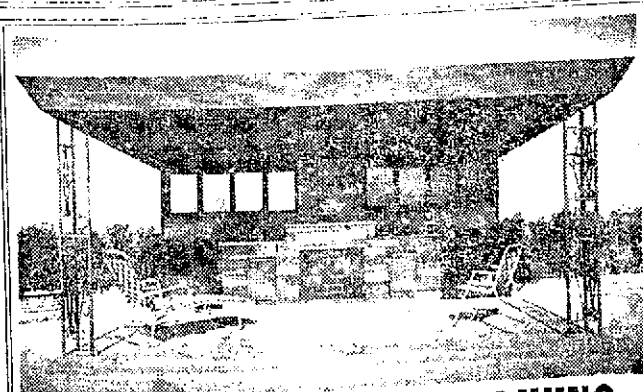

Don't plant lawn seed until you read this important fact

Let's be realistic—it takes work to build or repair a lawn. It requires spading, raking, fertilizing, seeding, rolling, watering. Work that must be done no matter what kind of seed you plant. So doesn't it make sense to plant the very best seed money can buy? The kind that gives you a permanent lawn . . . a lawn that grows thicker, more luxuriant, more beautiful as time goes on. Golf Brand is blended to give you just that kind of lawn. And to make doubly sure that these fine selected seeds sprout into sturdy grass, Golf Brand is treated with Du Pont Arasan that protects against most grass-killing diseases. Plant this finer seed now.

Daisies Won't Tell

By Walter Finch

SHASTA DAISY is a name now applied to a large class of hardy giant flowered daisies that serve many uses in the garden. As a wiry stemmed cut flower with remarkable lasting qualities they are becoming increasingly popular for commercial use. In the home garden they are often used in the rear portion of wide sunny bed or as an evergreen plant row to serve as a property line marker.

Shasta Daisies are easily grown and require a minimum of care and attention. Use them when sun and pool soil seem to combine to wither away your plants in some problem spot, for Shasta Daisies seem to thrive under such adverse conditions. Some varieties, such as the Ester Reed require a little extra care, but generally they are trouble-free.

For this reason, the California Bedding Plant Advisory Board suggests planting a few clumps of Shasta Daisies wherever the growing conditions seem a little too rugged for the run of the mill bedding plant.

Fuchsia Society

A valentine jitney potluck dinner at 6 p. m. will precede the meeting of the Long Beach Branch of the National Fuchsia Society of America Thursday at 728 Elm Ave. The speaker, J. G. Monson will preside at the business meeting. Reports of the National Fuchsia Society installation at South Gate will be given by Carl Edmond and E. E. Sanderson, national representatives. Mrs. Carl Edmond and committee will be in charge of the coffee hour. An invitation is extended to the public.

Ornamental iron's beauty and dignity cannot be denied. Its strength also makes it desirable in home building.

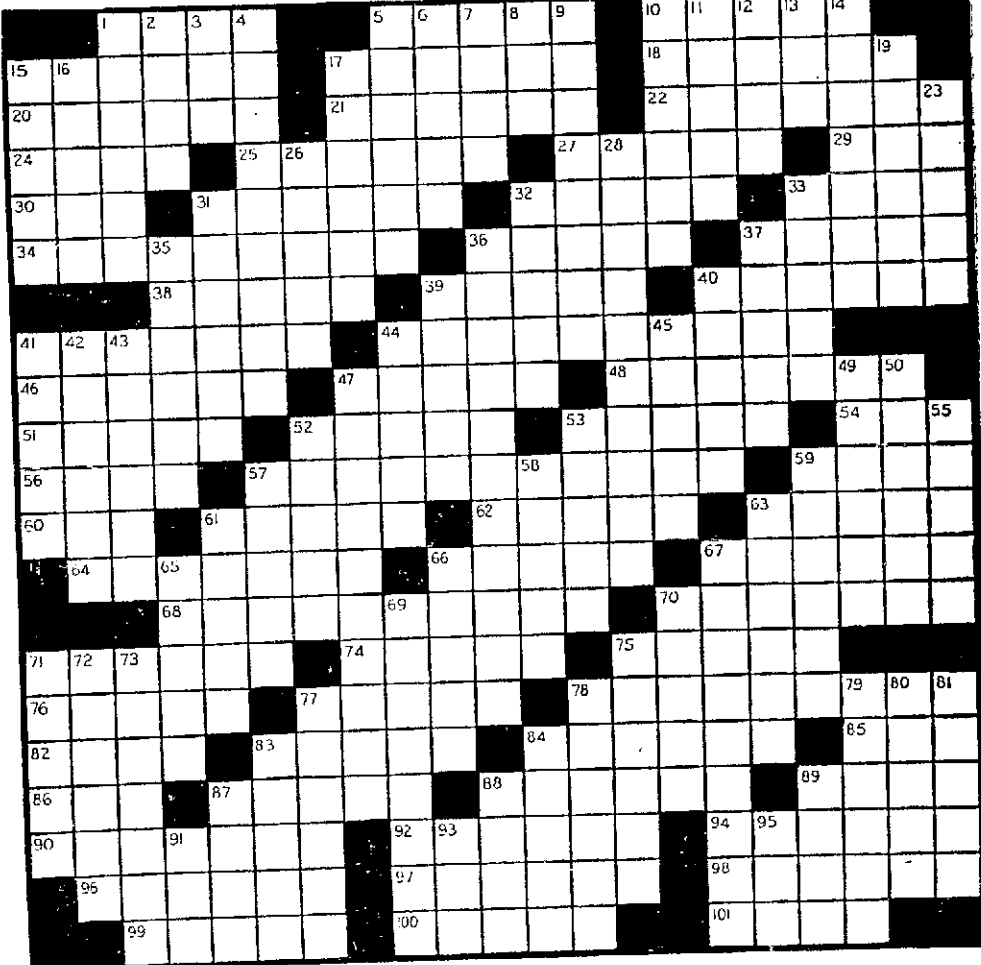

Ornamental Iron Gains Favor

is used in interiors as framing for nooks and alcoves. The permanence of ornamental iron is illustrated in the Pontalba Building in New Orleans. Built in 1848, the structure is America's first apartment house. Although much of the plaster and wood work has been replaced, the original ornamental iron still is an integral part of the building.

ORNAMENTAL IRON, 10 years ago an expensive building material, is now within the reach of the average Long Beach home owner.

Tremendously increased use of ornamental iron, both cast and wrought, by homes, churches and commercial buildings since the end of World War II has brought down the cost.

More ornamental iron has been made by the nation's iron companies in the past seven years than was used throughout the world in the preceding 10 centuries, according to Kool Vent Co., 743 Pine Ave.

The Chinese originated ornamental iron around 900 A. D., historians say, but it was the English, French and Italians of the 16th Century who first used ornamental iron as a practical material. They used it mainly for gates and window guards to prevent entry by enemies.

Today's home owners like ornamental iron not only because of its decorative appeal but because it is structurally strong. A well made ornamental iron corner column such as used on a porch will hold up a weight of 16,000 pounds.

Ornamental iron, often thought of as a decorative feature of homes of the deep south, is growing in popularity as a building material for homes all over the nation.

Ornamental iron is used to decorate entrances, provide railings for porches and steps and

THE MAN WHO NEVER WAS, by Ewen Montagu (Lippincott, $2.75).

Operation Mincemeat was one of the best-kept secrets of World War II, and only now does it come forth out of its grim nomenclature and testify to one of the greatest hoaxes ever perpetrated upon an enemy nation. This is the fantastic tale of how a dead man served to distract the German High Command from a defense of Sicily, when the Allies were poised in North Africa for the thrust into the underbelly of Europe.

It took careful planning and high luck to get the dead "Major Martin" into the hands of the Spanish, and thus subject to the curiosity of German agents. The papers the dead man carried had been planted and prayed over in the hope they would be accepted as genuine. They were, and this is the story of how it was done and what came of it.

YOUR CALIFORNIA GOVERNMENTS IN ACTION, by Winston W. Crouch and John C. Bollens (University of California Press, $2.75).

Every Californian seriously interested in his state's welfare should have a growing interest in its governmental functions, and there is no finer book that we know of from which to learn the rudiments than this one. From the making of California's constitution it tells the progressive story of organization of our state, county and city governments, and points up how each is aimed to operate for the good of the majority. To read it carefully is to have a basic knowledge of California government as it develops from your state capitol, the chambers of the County Board of Supervisors, and the City Hall.

EPISODE, by Peter W. Denzer (Dutton, $3.50).

The lad who went into the

Illustration by John O'Hara Cosgrave from "God and My Country."

LEM SIDDONS, central character in MacKinlay Kantor's newest novel, "God and My Country" (World, $2), was an ordinary sort of man who worked with Boy Scouts for 40 years. That's pretty much what the story is and in other hands than Kantor's it would be pretty slight. But this is a most compelling and moving tale of good people and ordinary situations. It will leave the reader slowly, and he will remember it for a long time.

service hospital for a physical ailment was surprised when a dream world began to surround him. And the disorder sent him through the neuropsychiatric ward and into the hands of the most brutal attendants. From there he goes into a private sanatorium, where he planned escape to his girl, Julie. It is all grim and pretty terrible, but so is madness.

English is a rich and lively language, filled with idiomatic expressions. Many of these expressions have lost their original meaning and now are alliterative. As we use them daily in our conversation and our writing, it is informative and entertaining to know where they came from. "Why We Say . . ." gives the answers to just why we say what we do. The book is filled with drawings and engagingly written material.

THE RIBALD READER, ed. by A. M. Krich (Dell, $5.00).

They say that in ribaldry anything goes, and this is demonstrated in this thick anthology. With wit aimed at those aspects of love and sex that have most amused men and women for centuries, contributions range from Ovid's "Art of Love" to Mark Twain's "Eve's Diary," with tales by Boccaccio, Villon, Cervantes, Voltaire and many others thrown in for a veritable ribald riot.

TO MY LOVE, by Bertin Jones ($2).

Two previous books, "More of Life's Beauty" and "California Is Calling," established Mr. Jones as a poet of rank in the Golden State. Now comes his third book, containing two score reflective or sentimental poems which bring a sweet nostalgia of romantic days. Mr. Jones rhymes beautifully.

POCKET-SIZED BOOKS of the week: "The Sea Around Us," by Rachel Carson (Mentor, $3.50), spectacular best-selling story of magic and mystery of the deeps; "Star Science Fiction Stories No. 2" (Ballantine, $3.50), containing 14 stories never before published; "Basic Selections From Emerson" (Mentor, $3.50); "Riders to the Stars," original science fiction story by Curt Siodmak that was made into a movie (Ballantine, $3.50); "Six Great Short Novels of Science Fiction," by six great storytellers, an original volume (Dell, $3.50).

THE SOUND OF THE TRUMPET, by Leicester Hemingway (Holt, $3.50).

This is the novelized account of a film unit that struck the Normandy beaches following the assault waves of Allied forces, and of its progress toward final documenting of the victory deep in Germany. The novel seems to lack an overall theme that might have been achieved with a bit more care. As it is the story is made up of a number of unrelated incidents, most of them bloody beyond need. But Leicester, whose big brother also writes, must be credited with an earnest effort in his first novel.—G. L.

The World of Stamps

By Harry Rickard

Collectors now have an opportunity to look for the newest U. S. rarity.

It seems that some time last summer, someone in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, in error, used a quantity of the watermarked paper set aside for revenue stamps to print some of the $1 Wilson stamps.

Get out your watermark detector and see if you have one of these desirable specimens showing a watermark. The normal copies have no watermark.

Flower stamp collectors will like the beautiful new set from San Marino, with flowers in color. Each of the values has a different flower portrayed.

The already-issued Royal Visit stamps of Fiji, Bermuda, New Zealand and Jamaica, and also the Bermuda Conference set of two, are now obsolete and rising in value. Be sure to get the coming Royal Visit stamps as issued.

Supplement time is here. You will find most all the new albums supplements on your dealer's shelf for the 1953 stamps. The Scott line will appear in the spring.

Platter Plutocrat

By Elaine Hauck

AT PRESENT, perhaps, the most successful executive in the popular record field is RCA-Victor's Joe Carlton. As manager of RCA's pop division, he's just finished a terrific year. He had much to do with Perry Como's comeback, Eddie Fisher's surge, Eartha Kitt's getaway and the Ames Brothers' hits. He seems to have the golden touch.

So his thoughts on the record business carry weight. Here are a few assorted Carlton thoughts:

"There's a faster turnover in record stars today. That's because of the discovery complex — every disc jockey thinks he's Christopher Columbus. He wants to claim he's discovered a new star. So he plugs newcomers' records much more than the records of established stars.

"We get maybe 600 applications a week from would-be singers. I look for three things in every applicant — a distinctive sound, good experience and managing, and appearance, which is a must because record stars have to appear on TV these days.

"For some reason, hit records last longer today than a few years ago. Look at 'You, You, You' and 'Vaya Con Dios.' They were up on top for months. It's harder for a record to get to the top now, and it's also harder for it to be dislodged once it's there.

"There won't be any great reduction in the price of records. It costs less for a manufacturer to make a record now — it's down about 6 cents — but the other costs keep going up. Artists' fees, union fees, the actual cost of a recording session — they keep going up."

That, briefly, is Carlton. He is a big, vibrant personality, who loves and lives his job. His description of his work: "It's fractious, but delightful."

ELAINE ELECTS: There's wonderful listening in "The Merry Widow," Elizabeth Schwarzkopf on Angel lp, with music by Franz Lehar. Or, if it's jazz you prefer, Norman Granz' Clef label has issued two more "Jam

TOP TEN TUNES: Eddie Fisher's "Oh Mein Papa" is still top disc on your local hit parade; (2) "Heart of My Heart," Four Aces; (3) "Changing Partners," Patti Page; (4) "That's Amore," Dean Martin; (5) "Stranger in Paradise," Tony Martin; (6) "Secret Love," Doris Day; (7) "Rags to Riches," Tony Bennett; (8) "Ebb Tide," Frank Chacksfield; (9) "Ricochet," Teresa Brewer, and (10) "Young in Heart," Frank Sinatra.

SOME of the most thrilling vocal performers ever heard are represented in this week's lps at Long Beach Public Library. Especially recommended are Banchieri, "Festino" (Primavera Singers and the Pro Musica Antiqua of New York); Honegger, "Jeanne d'Arc du Bucher" (speaking roles, chorus, and vocals, with Ormandy conducting); Janacek, "Slavonic Mass" (Moravian Mixed Chorus, with organ and orchestra); Stravinskii, "The Rake's Progress" (starring Gueden, Thebom, Conley, and Stravinskii conductor, and Wagner, "Tristan and Isolde" (starring Schock, Flaggstad, Thebom, etc.)

HERE'S WHY:

1. Oxydol has changed to a new detergent formula that's really different!
2. We added a remarkable new whitening ingredient—never before used in any washday product!

HERE'S PROOF! An Oxydol wash DRIED INDOORS is whiter than any wash DRIED OUTDOORS in brightest sunshine!

Test after test has proved it—that this great new detergent Oxydol actually beats the sun for getting clothes white. For example, we took some pillow-cases and washed them in all the leading suds. Then we dried them outdoors in the brightest sunshine.

But a pillow-case washed in new detergent Oxydol and dried indoors—like the one shown—was noticeably whiter than the other pillow-cases. Now you can have gorgeous white washes always—with new detergent Oxydol. Get a package for your next wash!
